

MAINSAIL

1987

For eleven years of faithful service of educating and helping students, we, the yearbook staff, would like to dedicate the 1987 MAINSAIL to Mr. Terry Taylor (Mr. T).

Time seems to go slowly when you are far away from family and friends. Being overseas during your junior high and senior high school years can have its advantages and disadvantages. Hopefully, as the years pass and your memory fades, you will be able to glance through the pages of this book and recall the years you have spent at Baumholder American High School. The yearbook staff has tried to capture as many of the happenings as possible. The contents of the book and the comments written by your friends should help keep the memories alive. The staff and myself hope that the memories of Baumholder American High School are pleasant. If you are returning next school year we hope that you will take an active part in the numerous activities at BAHS.

This school year may have started late,
but friendships were fast in forming

Buc pride and spirit began to flourish, and just kept right on growing. . .

Sure we've had our sad times,
filled with pain and tears

But joyous times
shall override
in our minds for years

THE CLASS
1987

The Senior Class of 1987 hopes to leave Baumholder American High School with only the best of memories and the everlasting knowledge we have gained through high school. We have all learned much this year and have grown together as a class and as a family.

We began our year off with a big Senior salute by winning the Homecoming Spirit Stick. The British Lit study trip to Stratford and London highlighted the middle of our year and gave us an inside look at British history.

Baumholder American High School is a mere step in our lives. It brought together people from all over the United States who probably never would have met one another. We now leave our school and our friends and go on to make the choices that will decide our future. But we will never forget Baumholder American High School and the role that it has played in our lives.

FOOTBALL

The football team started with a bang and ended with a declined invitation to the playoffs. After defeating the eventual AA champions, Nuernberg, 7-6, and playing a brilliant first half against Hanau in the Homecoming game, the Bucs began to fumble the pigskin. They lost 4 of their remaining 6 games. Individual honors went to John Glass (linebacker), Greg Collier (wide receiver), and Lanzo Wallace (cornerback). They were picked by the AA coaches as All-Conference performers. Robbie Noland (running back) and Butch Richardson (guard) were selected to be on the AA All-Conference Honorable Mention squad. Teamwise, Greg Collier was selected as the Offensive Player of the Year and John Glass was picked as Defensive Player of the Year. John Glass was also picked as the team's Most Valuable Player award and won the Ronnie Bouchez award.

VOLLEYBALL

VARSITY

The Volleyball team, although young, had a reasonably successful season. They compiled a 9-9, overall record. The season was highlighted by victories over FIS, Nuernburg, and Wiesbaden. It was topped by an invitation to the Big Schools Tournament. Individual stand-outs were Beth Womble, who was selected as an All-Conference player for the third straight year; and Cecilia Asuego, who was picked by the coaches as an Honorable Mention All-Conference player. Karyn Rowan, a freshman, was selected as the team's Most Improved Player and Beth Womble was also honored by the coaching staff as the team's Most Valuable Player.

JUNIOR VARSITY

TENNIS

The tennis team, led by captains Fred Jensen II, Shelley Rowan, and Dawn Sever, broke even in the conference and played well in the tournament. Fred Jensen, 4-2, and Leila Sinfuego, 5-1, were voted MVPs for their respective squads. Doubles Teams, Kay Choosakul and David Elrod; and Shelley Rowan and Dawn Sever both placed in the top ten in the All-Germany tournament.

GOLF

The golf team was made up of three returning let-termers, and their experience paid off as they placed 4th in the All-Germany golf tournament. The six golfers who qualified for the Tournament were Steve Glass (13th place), Ted Severn (5th place consolation), Mike Gooding (9th place consolation), Mike Ellis, Steph Mizgala, and Chris O'Quinn (who miraculously shot a 110 during the last match). The season was a success, but the future looks brighter as 6 out of 9 golfers are anticipated to return next season.

CHEERLEADERS

The fall varsity cheerleading squad did an excellent job cheering the football team at all games. Although they did not have a J.V. squad, they had enough spirit to make up for it in locker tags and pep rallies. At the end of the season when the fun was all over, Julie Tyler was voted most improved, and captain, Katrina Cooper, was voted most valuable cheerleader.

CROSS COUNTRY

This year's cross-country team was very inexperienced, but shows great potential for the future. Tremendous individual efforts were made by Rick Jaster, who won his third consecutive Central-European cross-country championship, and his sister, Tracy Jaster, who won her first title. Also qualifying for the championships were first year runners, Kellie Geiger and Megan Fletcher. By a vote of the coaches, Rick and Tracy were awarded trophies as Outstanding Runners in Europe for 1986. Both Jasters traveled to California to compete in the National Cross-Country Championships.

Boys Basketball

After two highly successful seasons, the Buc boys varsity basketball team suffered through a rebuilding season. With only three seniors on the team, the boys failed to make the Big Schools Tournament by starting off very slowly. Highlights of the season included Greg Collier (24 points per game), Warren Hodge (15 points and 8 rebounds per game), and a comeback victory over Zweibruecken. As a whole, the year was a big disappointment and the Bucs look forward to a better season next year.

Girls Varsity Basketball

The girls Varsity Basketball Team had a .500 season. Overall, they were 7-7 and finished 4th in the AA Conference. This qualified them for the Big Schools Tournament. At the tournament, they caught fire. They upset the #1 seeded AAA Champions, Mannheim, and the AA Champs, Hanau, on their way to finishing third. The assault was led by Beth Womble, who was awarded for her performance by being named All-Tournament player.

Tonya Canaday, Susan Braun, Shonya Brown, Debby Braun, Dezella Kirklin, 1st Row Liz Mitchell, Salanthia Welch, Beth Womble, Mr. Dougan

Girls JV Basketball

The J.V. Girls had the most successful season of all the Basketball teams. They finished 8-6 overall, and this is despite a lack of experienced players. They were led by Dezella Kirklin, Pam Williams, and Liz Mendiola. Other bright prospects included Beth Carmical and Tammy Stamper.

Mr. Dougan, Noelle Blanc, Sandy Van Dorn, Tonay Canaday, Dezella Kirklin, Anna Harold, 1st Row Tammy Stamper, Trininia Bowie, Liz Mitchell, Beth Carmical

WRESTLING

The Bucs wrestling team got off to a spectacular start this year. They had a full varsity and junior-varsity team that changed from a good team with promise to a fantastic team with victories to match, with the help of Coach Werner. The team captains, Steve Glass and Kay Choosakul, always had that extra bit of spirit to help the team pull through.

Although they did not have many returning wrestlers, they had enough spirit and determination to overcome all obstacles. With three victories fresh on their minds after the first match the guys went on to place third in the Central European Regionals. Eight of the Bucs went on to Wiesbaden for the European Championship where Dash Danzie placed second in Germany.

CHEERLEADERS

The Basketball Cheerleaders added a little zest to the Basketball season. Having male participants for the first time in Baumholder history, the JV squad showed enthusiasm and desire to learn. The Varsity squad, led by Captain Katrina Cooper, performed valiantly in the All-Germany competition, held during the tournaments, although their performance was 15 seconds too long. As a whole, their spirit was tremendous and they did a great job.

Activities

HONOR SOCIETY

The National Honor Society, sponsored by Mrs. A. Walz, is an academic club. They raised money by selling posters and exam grams. The money was used to hold an induction ceremony in early March. President Fred Jensen II and Vice-President Debby Braun were finalists for the National Honor Society Scholarship.

The National Junior Honor Society (NJHS) is an organization dedicated to serving the community and school in many different ways. One requirement for membership is performing individual service projects. They participated in fund raisers, such as poster sales, along with NHS. The group also sponsored a cake decorating contest. The cakes were donated to german hospitals and nursing homes in the area.

JUNIOR HONOR SOCIETY

F B L A

The Future Business Leaders of America (FBLA), sponsored by Ms. Gardner, is an organization is for students interested in business and business related activities. This year, their second year at Baumholder High School, they had many activities; they sold grams and attended seminars to enhance their business skills.

Ski Club

VARSITY CLUB

The Varsity Club is a club for those who had enough time and effort to earn a Varsity Letter. The club is responsible for the purchase of the letters and other awards presented at the athletic banquets. They raised money by collecting donations, selling buttons, and patches. Their hard work and dedication to athletics is something to be appreciated by all.

The 1987 Ski Club changed its format from putting emphasis on cultural interaction to leadership development and cultural interaction. The leaders this year's group were Fred Jensen II, Dawn Sever, Heather Somaini, Carol Benavides, and Beth Womble. The trip took place from March 1st to March 8th. The sponsors, Mary Larson and Fred Jensen, felt the trip was a great success, and the new format helped to make the trip more enjoyable for both the students and sponsors.

German Exchange

Die Deutsche Klassen haben ein erfolgreiches Jahr verbracht. Wir haben unsere Klassenkameraden in Birkenfeld und Koblenz sehr gut kennengelernt. Durch Brieffreunde sind wir naeher zu einander gekommen. Ich hoffe dass dieser Kantakt wird sich in der zukunft verbreitern.

STUDENT COUNCIL

This year's Student Council, led by President Rick Jaster, accomplished many things this year. They held a school clean-up activity, a flea market, and sponsored Homecoming. Increased school spirit was the focal point of their endeavors. The Spirit Rating Committee, led by Chairman Fred Jensen, organized not only the rating system, but many of the spirit activities. They also picked prizes for the winning class. Vice-President, John Glass, took over during Rick Jaster's absence. Without the Student Council, many of the activities would have lacked organization and pazazz.

GALLEON

This year's GALLEON was navigated by Bryant Holmes, the Editor-in-Chief, and the sponsors, Ms. Jorgensen and Mrs. Smith. The crew (the creative writing class) for the most part pulled together this year and made this year one to remember.

The GALLEON staff includes Kellie Geiger as Creative Writing Editor, Chris Holmes as Cartoonist, Belynda Phillips as Assistant Editor, Katrina Cooper as Features Editor, Lana White as Sports Editor, and last, but not least, Ms. Jorgensen's Creative Writing Class.

CHESS CLUB

(around the table) Cory Halbakken, Tim Troy, Ron Barrowclough, Allen Ramsey, Robert Taylor

The Chess Club, a brand new club to Baumholder High, enjoyed a large membership. The top four players, Ingo Duckershein, Ron Barrowclough, Allen Ramsey, and Mike Nelson, enjoyed successful seasons, although none of the members were able to defeat the sponsor, Mr. Jensen. Commenting on the club, Mr. Jensen said, "The members show great potential, but play the game much too fast to be awesome."

The bands, led by fearless leader Mr. Bob Hartline, achieved a reputation as competent performers and skilled musicians. They played innumerable concerts including their autumn and Christmas performances. The newly obtained band jackets accented the band and enhanced their unity. In order to raise money for a trip to London, which took place over Easter break, they held the 2nd Annual Rock-A-Thon. The money was obtained in the form of pledges. Secretary of the Advanced Band, Sonja Flowers summed up the year with these words, "The three years I have been in band have enriched my musical appreciation and knowledge. Hartline has led us through thick and thin. I will always treasure the memories."

5,000 CLUB

Cory Halbakken, Abbie Moreno, Shelley Rowan, Mr. Reed, Fred Jensen

The 5000 Club got off a rolling start. Despite being slowed by a lack of a constitution, regular members, and rolls of 2,2,4,4,6,6; the club managed to show its members the art of playing many German games. Self-appointed President, Fred Jensen, used his 13 years of cultural experience to win 70% of the games. Vice-President, Chris Nolte, was voted Comeback Roller of the Year; and Secretary/Treasurer, Shelley Rowan, breakdanced for half-time entertainment. Abbie Moreno and Cory Halbakken were other regular rollers.

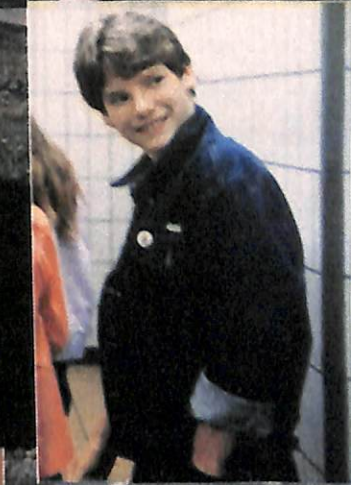

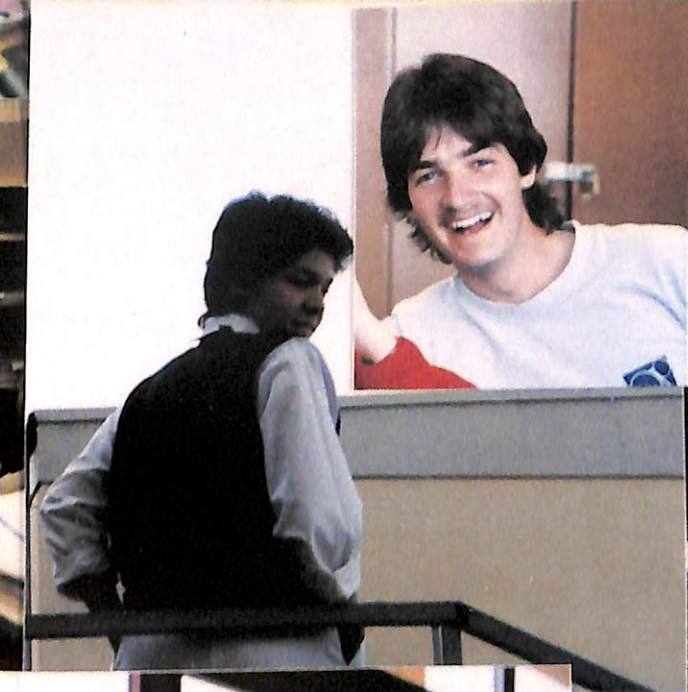

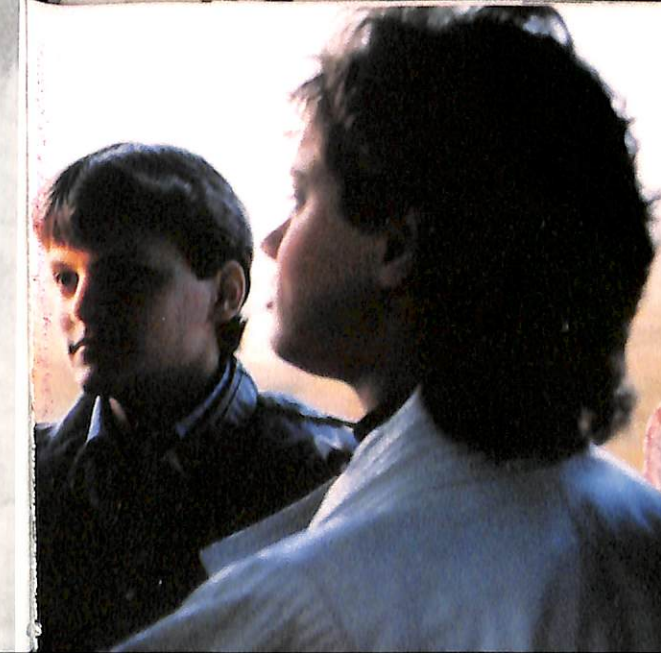

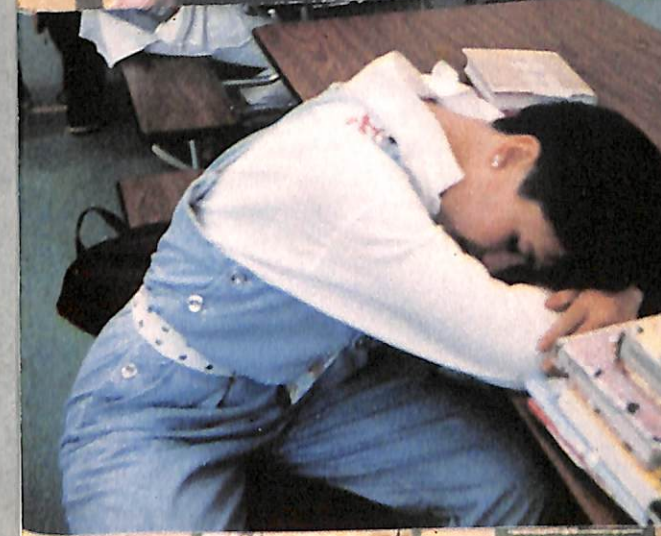

Allen Ramsey, Ember Normand, Tim Troy, Mr. Graham, Mike Bailey

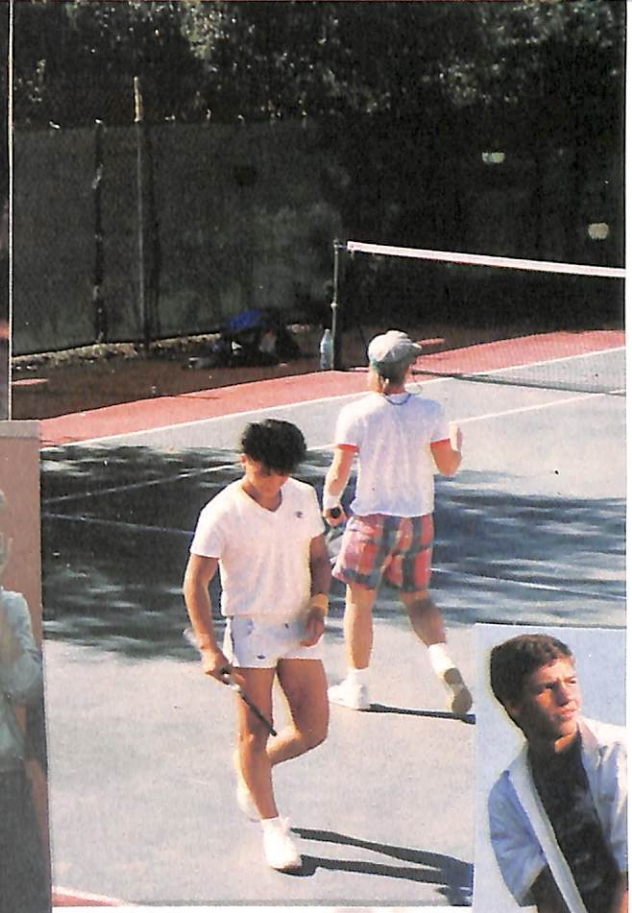

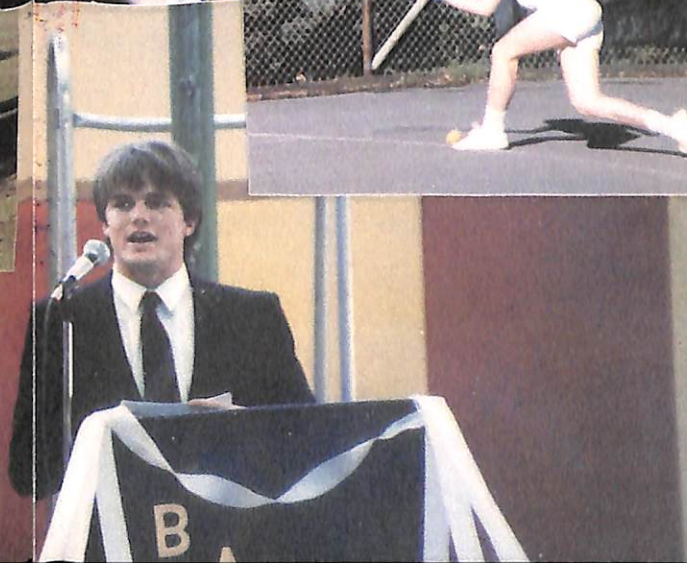

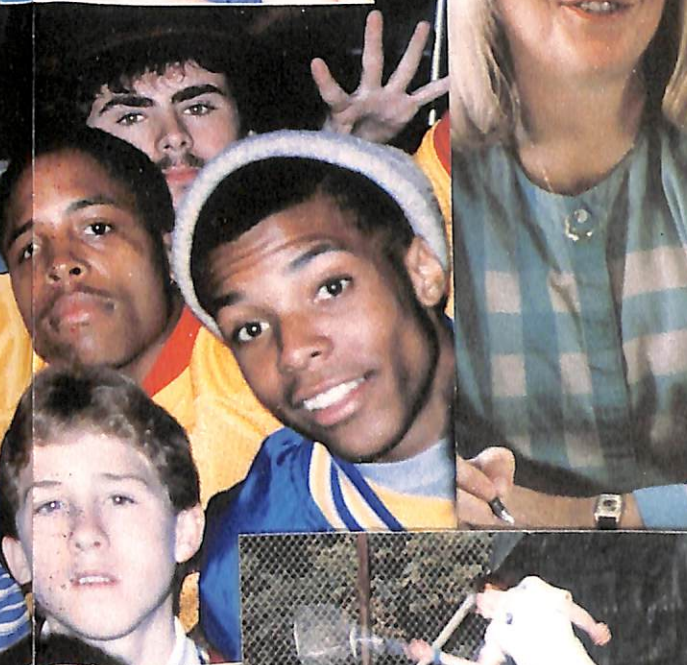

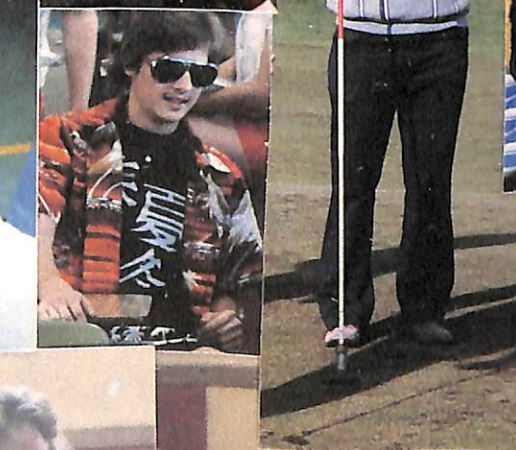

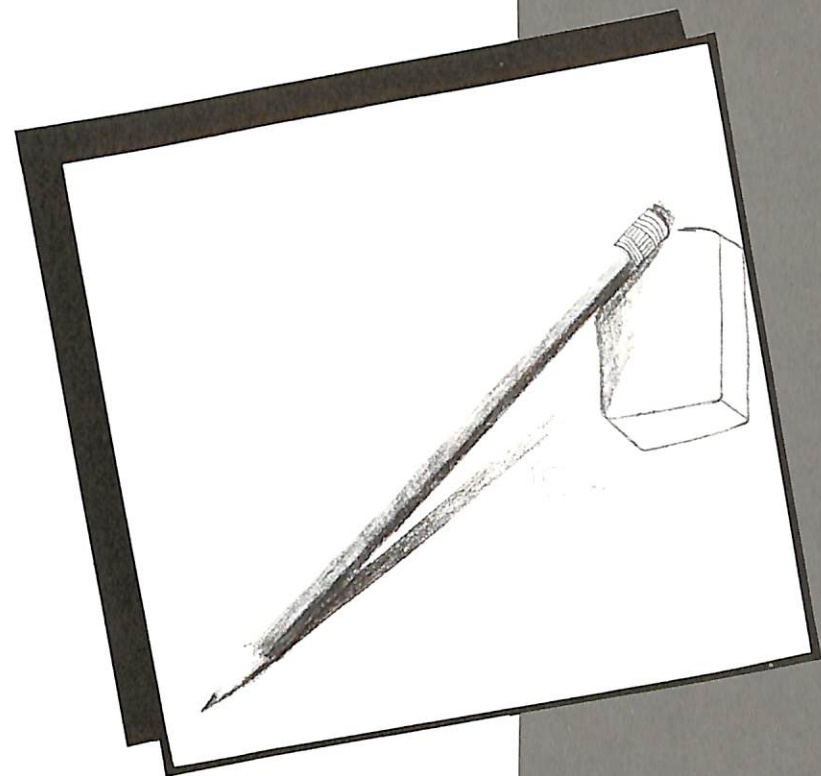

The Computer Club, led by sponsor Jim Graham, took themselves very seriously. All activities conducted by the club and members were secret and known by no one but themselves. It is believed that they spent their time after school expanding their knowledge in BASIC programming, along with increasing their skills in various video games.

Where Am I?

Where is this that I may be,
Trapped in a bubble with people
looking at me?
The fog is thick.
I want to get away,
But some strange force
Compels me to stay.
Is this the place
Where peace may be
Or is it that no one's here with me?
Where in the world
Can this place be?
Is this place within me?

Tammy Terrell

Premonitions

Well, I knew I shouldn't have gotten up that morning. I'd forgotten to do my clothes the day before, and I didn't have any "happy colors" to wear. Boy, was I in dire need of some "happy colors!" Besides, my alarm clock decided to take a vacation. (It had stopped at 4 a.m.)

I went to fix myself breakfast only to discover that the stove was on the fritz. !@#&*! I looked somewhat hesitantly into the refrigerator. Yay! There were two eggo waffles left. Well, if I couldn't have an egg in the frame, at least God loved me enough to give me two eggos for breakfast. So I popped them in the toaster and waited and waited. I popped them up again. Kriminy! The little buggers were roasted to within an inch of their lives! Burnt to a crisp even! I sniffed dolefully as I consigned the two "shingles" to the trash can, thinking, "No breakfast, no breakfast."

I opened the cookie jar, looking for the fortune cookies, but alas, they'd migrated, probably to my brother's stomach, I thought cynically. There was, however, one fortune left. I picked it up and read it, much against my better judgement. It stated simply and concisely, "Today is the last day of your old life and not a very good day at that."

I grimaced, wondering if my dad was getting back at me for putting shells in his combat boots. Naaa. It wasn't his style.

Kriminy! The little Buggers were roasted to within an inch of their lives.

I went to take my shower. It was nice and warm until I got all soapy and wet. Then it turned ice cold. It's good for your pores, I kept telling myself, but it didn't do me any good. I was still purple when I got out.

I plugged the curling iron in and began blow-drying my hair. I was just getting to the front when it too decided to conk out on me. I cursed it roundly, causing my dog to get up excitedly. I growled at her as I began towelling my hair.

I picked up my curling iron and was about to wrap my hair around it when I noticed a peculiar lack of warmth. I closed my eyes against the picture that formed on my mind. "I'm gonna kill Buttons," I muttered as I glanced at the electric cord. My hamster had done her work well. It'd been chewed clean through.

I opened the closet to put away the brushes, and guess who was there? Buttons, my hamster, getting happily and thoroughly zonked on the rubbing alcohol! Terrific!

I put her back in her cage and hurriedly threw on clothes. I glanced at my watch. 7:17. I'd have to hurry if I wanted to make the bus.

I slung my backpack over my shoulder and tore out the door and down to the bus stop.

Hurray! It was still there. I breathed a sigh of relief as I smiled at Frank, the driver. Inexplicably a nigger of worry formed in my mind, forcing me to acknowledge it. I was just mounting the steps when warning claxons went off in my brain, leaving my ears ringing in the aftermath.

I finally came to the conclusion that I really did not want to go to school and that this stroke of luck was just to throw me off my guard. I shook my head, grinning at Frank's confusion as I stepped back on the pavement, waving him away from the curb.

As the bus pulled out, I turned to walk back home, already busy concocting a story that would allow my mother to let me stay home for the day. It's not surprising that I was shocked to find nothing there. All the buildings had disappeared in a swirling gray mist. I could hardly see past the end of my nose.

Buttons, my hamster, was getting happily and thoroughly zonked on rubbing alcohol.

My backpack slid from its perch on my shoulder and fell to the ground, swallowed up by the weird fog. I searched the area around me and caught a lood at myself. Wowzers! My gray ankle boots had chaged from suede to leather, and they now reached up to my knees. My cords, too, were of gray leather. I looked at my MASH tee shirt only to find a beautiful fitted white tunic, heavily embroidered on the sleeved, which were billowy and gathered at the wrist and bodice, which was cut very low. A belt of woven silver coil, studded with what appeared to be pink diamonds, blue opals, and star sapphires encircled my waist, and another belt, of worn black leather secured a peculiarly deadly looking broadsword to my right hip.

My hair, as I discovered, was plaited at the back of my head and fell to my waist. Far from being its normal ash blond, it was now a very pale silver-gold color. My hands were very slender, elegant, and refined looking even though my long nails were gone. (Sniff.)

A whisper of steel drew my attention back to my surroundings. The fog was gone, replaced by a deep, green woodland forest, a cliff, and below that, a waterfall. Four men stood glaring at me with weapons drawn.

I gulped down the lump of fear that was rising in my throat and raised an inquiring eyebrow at them, trying desperately to remain calm.

The biggest of the bunch grunted something and one of the others, a man with mousy brown hair and beady brown eyes, stepped toward me.

Almost without thought I drew my own sword, testing its balance. It was a little heavy at the tip, but I could compensate! Good God!

I realized with a shock that I couldn't compensate. I didn't know a *!!@* thing about swords or fencing. I was dead in the water.

Even I presented my blade, which, I might add, had a very bluish sheen to it and hoped for the best.

The nousy man grinned evilly without mirth and made a thrust at my abdomen. I parried and swung away, aiming at his head. Metal screamed hysterically as our two swords scraped against each other.

I disengaged quickly, searching for the slightest sign of weakness. Whoopie! I slipped past his guard and kept on going until the greedy blade entered his solar plexus, causing a spurt of blood and his gasp of pain.

One lood at the remaining men's faces told me that I didn't have a snowball's chance in *!@X! Of surviving this encounter.

Another man moved up and presented his sword. I did the same having little choice in the matter. His point swung up and toward my shoulder. I merely ducked out of its way. This one had less cunning than the last. I threw all my weight to my right foot and slipped under his block and into his stomach. He screamed horribly and fell next to his similarly stricken comrade on the ground.

The next one attacked, and, like the last, joined his friends on the turf. I was getting bored, if not a little weary.

Finally the grunter, who was probably close to seven feet tall came forward. He grinned, like the first of his men, and he began his attack, which was fast and surious. All I had time to do was dodge and parry. I was completely on the defensive.

His blade slid down to the hilt of my sword, and he forced me to one knee, which, by the way, is where I came up to him in this position. I rolled away and raised my sword to deflect yet another blow. A dull snap sounded and my mouth gaped as my sword broke in half. I was in for it now. His sword came to rest on my right shoulder an inch from my neck. "I should kill you very slowly," he rumbled at me.

I had one last chance. I slid my hand down to the top of my boots, my fingers probing for the hilt of the dagger I instinctively knew was there.

I stood carefully, bringing the knife up with me and behind my back. Very slowly I depressed the button on the pommel. A minute click alerted me to the fact that the blade was now out of its sheath.

Swiftly I gripped his blade with my right hand, twisting it away from my throat. I threw out my left arm and with a practiced flick of the wrist let the dagger fly straight for his throat.

The grunter went down, gurgling on his own blood. I bent over him and retrieved my blade, wiping it clean on his trousers.

Someone cleared his throat behind me. I swung around violently, tensing. A man stood there, not quite as brawny as the grunter but at least as tall. He grinned boyishly. "Sorry I didn't help," he said.

He was quite lean and muscular looking. He has a sword at his hip and another in his grasp. His long legs were encased in green leathers, and his shirt was a paler green than his pants.

I raised my eyebrow again. "Why didn't you?" I asked curiously. He continued to grin engagingly. "I wanted to see if you could handle them."

I harrumphed and slid the sword, which he had handed me, back in my sheath, but I kept the dagger out. It was he who raised the eyebrow this time. I just grinned at him. Let's see how he liked it!

"Come on," he said, gesturing me in the direction of the forest. He didn't even turn around to make sure I was following him. He just kept on walking, letting the greenery devour him.

"Hey!" I called. "Wait up!"

His only response was to snap through the underbrush. I hurried after him, spewing curses. Those ceased abruptly, however, at the scene that met my eyes.

A gorgeous castle of purple crystal surrounded by multi-colored flowers set the stage.

My jaw swung from its hinges. Standing before the tower was a unicorn staring at me, flicking his tail, which was a vibrant shade of violet. His mane, hooves, and eyes were violet, and the rest of him was purest white. The stranger stood beside him.

"This is the first day of your new life," he stated. I thought back to the fortune cookie — "Today is the last day of your old life."

"We're sorry you had such a rotten morning, but with all the excess magic running around, things kinda got out of control," he said. "You can never go back to your old life. You'll have to live with us." At my questioning gaze he pointed to the unicorn. "Sasharin and me. I'm Corith." He extended a bronzed hand.

Well, in case you're wondering what happened, I switched realms, so to speak, or changed dimensions. The fortune was the key to it all. Whoever reek it was transported to Galatiryn (the world that I'm on). Corith explained it all to me after I'd stopped screaming to go home.

P.S. You're our next victim.

Worry

Can you go in your bedroom
And still see the floor?

Do your clothes ever find
Their way back to the drawer?

Is your bed buried somewhere
Under a heap?

Do you have to shovel
A place you can sleep?

Can you always find
Both of your shoes?

Do your slippers and socks
Remain in neat twos?

Do your mittens and boots
Stay lost until spring?

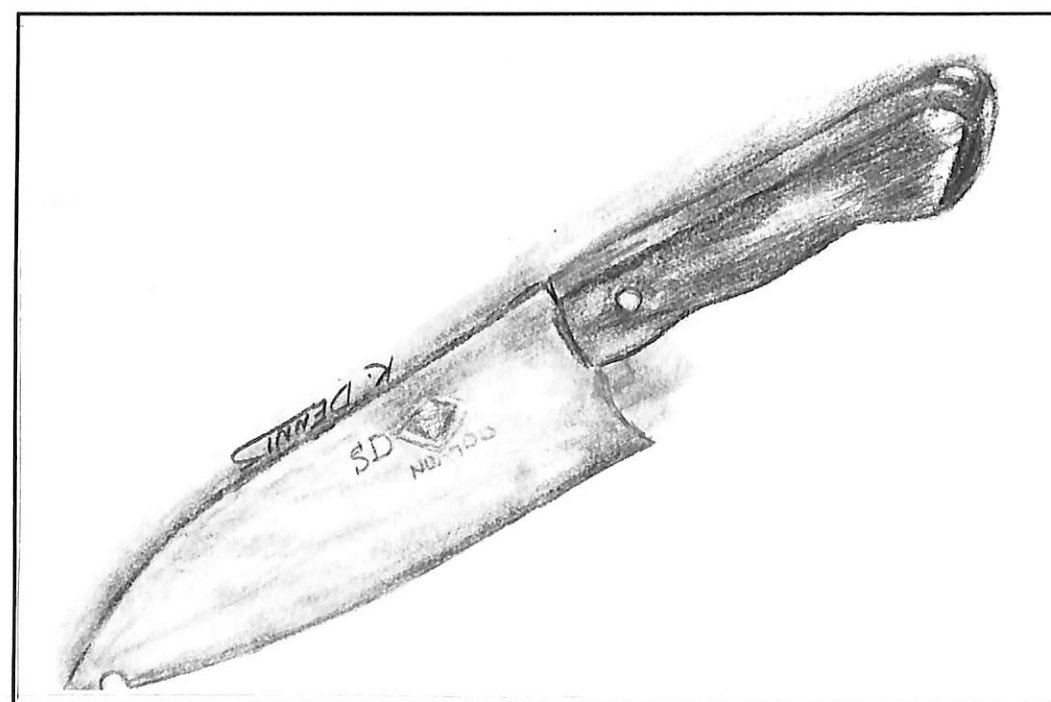

When a raincoat becomes
The next missing thing?

Does the summer uncover
The homework you lost

Sometime last fall
Before the first frost?

Did your mother refuse
To enter your room?

Perhaps now's the time
For the wastebasket and broom!

THE METAMORPHOSIS

First, there is darkness.
Suddenly, there is a blinding light.
I am running for my life.
Something is chasing me. I hear its deep breaths, its vulgar gasps of air, its thundering footsteps.
Looking back, I see its shadow. A scream rises within my throat, but I hold back. I will not weaken; I will not stop.
With the suddenness of thought, a hand clasps around my neck. It is a suprisingly rough hand, textured like sandpaper. My heartbeat is laughter in my ears. The hand slowly tightens; the claws pierce my flesh and enter my throat. I feel something warm run down my neck.
I weaken. I let go.
I scream, a hoarse animal squeal of pain.
I awake, covered in sweat; my chest in on fire. It is hard for me to breathe
I have had the same dream, the exact same dream, every night for a year. Nothing changes.
There is a nauseating taste of saliva mixed with blood in my mouth.
Clutching my chest, I stumble into the bathroom. Upon looking at myself in the mirror, I note with horror that I am covered not in sweat —
But blood.
My stomach tightens, and I feel its contents making their way up into my throat.
I retch, and quickly wash my face with cool water, hoping that the water will bring me out of this dream, which I sincerely hope it is.
Water rolls down my cheek and onto my chin. My tongue flickers in and out of my mouth, snakelike, and laps up the single droplet.
I am afraid. I am trying with all of my might not to lose control.
I open my mouth and what I see disgusts me. My tongue, once wide and pink, is now pencil thin and black. My teeth, of God, my teeth, are more sharp, canine, more protruding than before.
Hysteria sweeps over me. I scream, cursing God, the Fates, or whatever has caused this.
My voice is deep; there is a roughness about it that sends chills down my spine.
I am compelled to look at my hands.
I have hands no more, but . . . claws. My ring shatters into fragments; my fingers have molded together and are too large for the opening.
— Many days and many dreams have passed since then —
I now have a tail, prehensile and thick, pointed at the end. I have extremely pointed ears, and an amazingly acute sense of sight and smell. My feet, like my hands, are claws. I have a pentagram covering my chest.
I no longer eat cooked meat. I now crave blood, warm delicious blood, paired with soft flesh. At night, I stalk strays and other animals. I enjoy the hunt, and I thrive on the feeling of biting into the neck of my prey, and letting the blood run down my neck.
Lately, small animals have not been enough. I desire larger prey.
I am changing, like a catepillar into a butterfly, except that what I am changing into is not pretty. I am still a man — but in thought only.
I await the day that I am man no more.

White

White, White, White . . .
So many things are white:
A paper,
A cloud,
A ghost, a shoe,
A dog,
A cat,
And sometimes
Me and you.

Winter Waltz

Out the window, snow fell in large, light flakes. The wind seemed to grasp each flake and they dance a strange dance. Together, the wind and snowflakes moved in slow graceful circles and curves. The wind whipped his partner faster and faster as they neared the ground, almost as if they knew the the dance would soon end. Closer and closer they came; faster and faster they whirled. At the zenith of their dance, they seemed to come to a near stop. Then gently, ever so gently, the wind dipped his partner, and as softly as a first kiss, he placed her on the ground.

On Strike

A mother in Indianapolis just went on strike
Against her kids: Kathy, Kim, and Mike.

She stopped doing all the household chores;
No picking up clothes; no closing doors.

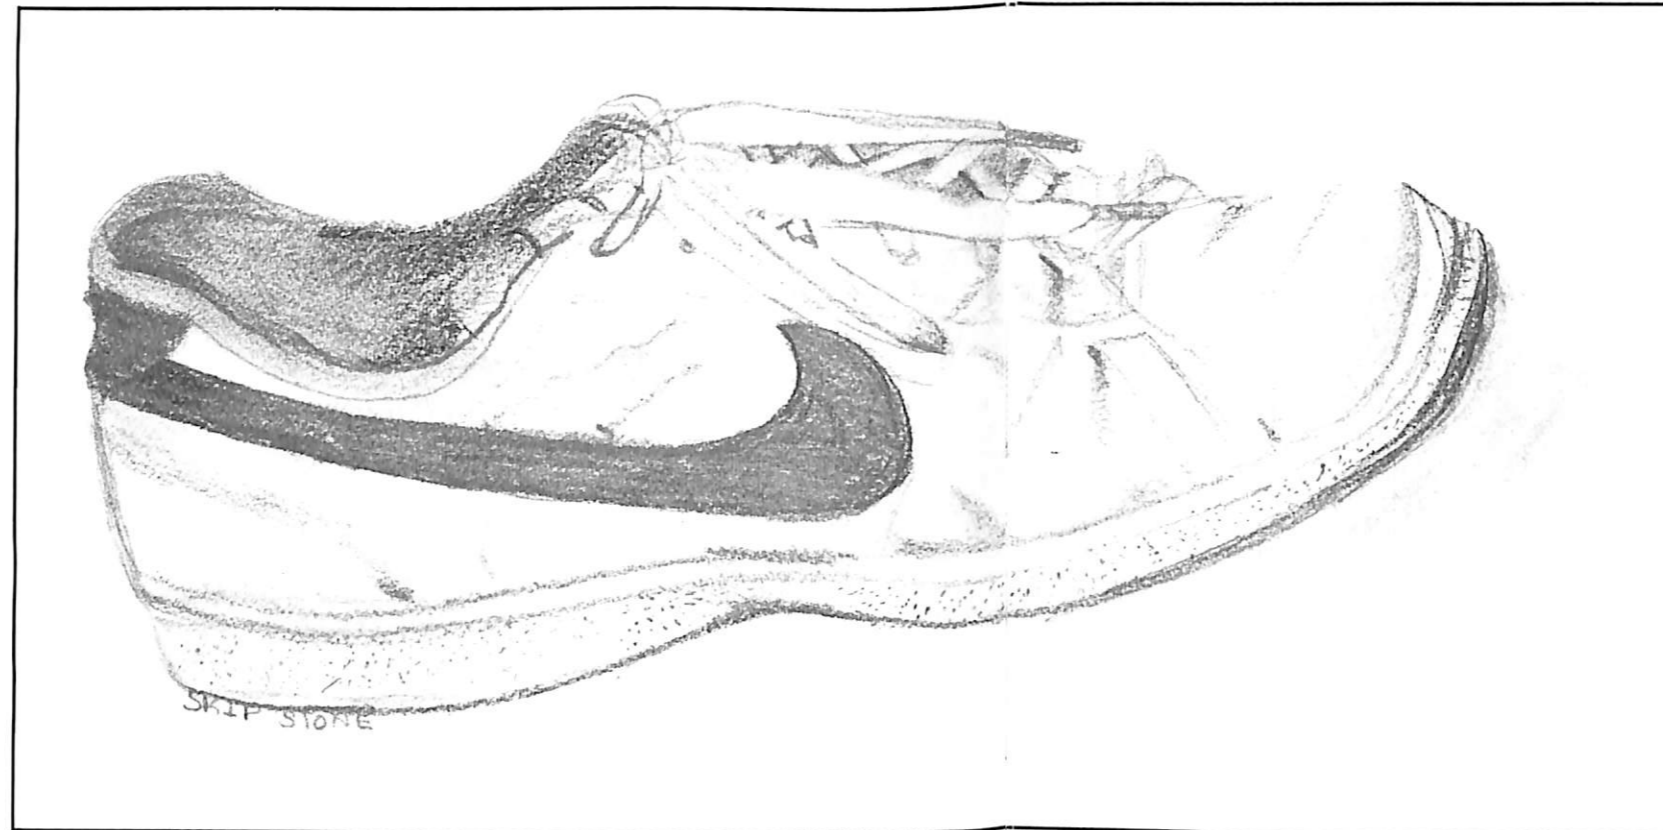

This year, as her kids will soon see,
There won't be any presents underneath the tree.
Until her demands are met and a contract signed,
Everything's going to change and that's just fine.

She wants her kids to help clean the house,
Stop watching TV and being a louse.

She wants it done at nine tonight
Or there's going to be a heckuva fight.

When the contract is signed,
Everyone will find
Mother resuming her duties at dawn
And removing the strike sign from the lawn.

The Santa that Never Was

O little man of little faith
Thou dasheth dreams in thy hallowed fist
When thou telleth a youngster
That Santa doesn't exist

A man of the cloth has no right to deem
The right to death or life.
But this holy man spoke out
And the crucifix cut like a knife.

"We overlook the real meaning of Christmas
In this day and age" was probly what a padre said.
Thou shalt not kill is a commandment
But under shattered dreams and a manger, Santa lay dead.

For God is to priest as Santa is to kid,
Or so the angels sang
How would a preist feel if neither
Church nor sleigh bells rang?

Scalping

"She's going to scalp me," I think. "I'm going to wind up with some stupid grandma haircut. I absolutely thoroughly detest getting my haircut."

Our friend "Melissa the Beautician" moves toward me, smiling a sickeningly sweet smile. If my mother weren't here, I'd take a pair of scissors and cut my own hair.

"Put your head back," she growls.

I can't believe this lady is capable of cutting my hair the way I want it.

She rinses it, then takes her scissors and begins cutting.

"Easy on my tail. It just started growing," I say.

She nods and snips at my tail. Hair falls on the towel around my neck.

"All done!" Melissa finally says as she shakes the towel out the window. "I'm done. Yup! I'm done," I think. "Guess it's time to inspect the damage."

Melissa holds a mirror so I can see. Through squinting eyes, I see . . . I see . . . a nice, clean, stylish cut!!! I hear Mom gushing praise. Melissa is smiling. She says, "Thanks for being so nice. Most kids take one look at me and refuse to let me cut their hair. I like your attitude."

"And I like yours," I think as Melissa walks out the door.

Us

Thinking of you, thinking of me,
Thinking how a relationship should be.
Wishing and hoping you'll still come.
But feeling and knowing,
You're with another someone.

Why is my heart telling me to stop loving you.
Why does it tell me I can live without you.
When I know it can't be true?
Why must I feel so down and depressed?

My friends, they tell me to "give it up"
They say I'm young and can still "live it up"

Belive me, I would, if I could . . . But I can't!

Please let "us" prove them wrong,
Let's show them "us" is still
And always will be going strong!

But I know . . . it isn't, is it?

Reflection

Upon the rocks, embedded in a beach of sand I lie,
Watching a sunset along the edge of the sky.
Something was different this day —
A woman seemed close, yet far away.
I curiously I tried to get near,
But suddenly was struck with fear.
Without warning I could tell
That I had come face to face with evil from hell.
Her eyes were dark and her face pale,
Like that of a body at the bottom of a well.
With rage and fury her eyes did blaze
And the atmospere became a dank gloomy haze.
Thoughts of death surrounded my mind.
I began to feel lost in time.
I closed my eyes and prayed I was alone . . .
And when I opened them . . .
She was gone.

The Flower Child

On a beautiful moonlit night, a mermaid arose from the sea. Out of the water she came shimmering. Her yellowish-green fin disappeared from sight and she began walking toward a large rock. Ther she sat and combed her long, silky black hair. When she arose from the rock, the mmonlight shon upon her, making her hair appear as black as velvet flying in the wind. The mermaid walked along the oceanside, picking a bouquet of flowers which she lay down one by one upon the dry sand creating a path of colorful blooms back to the ocean from where she had come. As she walked back, her fin of yellowish-green make a single splash as she dove into the water. After this on a moonlit night, she arrived every night to leave her trail of flowers.

"Hurry! Hurry! Hurry! Step right up, folks, to the greatest show on earth! See for yourself, under the Big Top, the show that EVERYONE remembers! The Show that everyone tells the children and grandchildren about! 'The Best Years of Your Life!'"

Taste once again the joy of the first time! Relive the confusion of graduation from high school and not knowing what to do with your life!"
"See yourself, with amazing skill, balance the responsibilities of adult life while being told you're irresponsible!"
"Look back fondly, ladies and gentlemen, at The Greatest Years of Your Life!"

Sunset

At the end of the day, the last thing to go —
The reflection dances behind the mountains and the trees and catches your eye with a twinkle.
The clashing colors that lessen the light disappear slowly away into a sunset.
The iridescent glow of the moonlight slowly comes into focus
At the end of the day, the last thing to go.

Kelly Ann

It was early evening down at the lake. The weather and the people around me matched my mood. The water was cold and the color of slate. There were storm clouds above and I felt as if my anger would engulf me just as the lightning and the thunder would soon dominate the sky. I looked at my reflection in the water and saw the apin and weriness inside myself that was of so familiar on the faces of the old, worn and tired workers in the crisis center downtown.

The crisis center was a hideous place, constantly filled with drug addicts, child abusers, and sick, malnourished children. I hated working there; I often became attached to the "doomed". Working there also made my problems seem less than they really were.

A little girl died today. Her name was Kelly Ann, a patient of mine whom I fought desperately to save. Suddenly, a flash of lightning lit up the sky and the crack of thunder sounded as if the heavens were being split. Rain poured down and mixed with my tears of pain and helplessness.

Love

Love is an emotion, for which we have no cure,
Love is an emotion that everyone thinks is pure.
But love causes jealousy, pain, and hate.
Gee, I guess love just ain't that great.
Kellie Geiger

Growing Apart

I wish you could see,
Your leaving me.
It won't be long,
Before you're gone.
Day-by-day, I hope and pray,
The love we have, won't fade away.
I love you now,
Not as before.
But something is making me
Love you more.

The fact that your growing up on me
Letting go and setting free.
Out into the darkness you will stand,
Not a little boy but now a man.
I know you're scared to.
But always remember,
"I love you".

This has been another successful year for the Baumholder Bucs Swim Team. Sarah Howell (Coach) and Wendi Rowe (Assistant Coach) have helped the team reach many of the goals they set at the beginning of the season. Considering this is only the Bucs third year in existence, they have enjoyed great success. Winning over Augsburg, Bamberg, and Mannheim contributed to the Bucs high esprit. Many of the meets have been away to places as far as Berlin, Heidelberg, Munich, and Wuertzburg. Though small, the team makes up in quality what it lacks in quantity. Swimmers still managed to score a lot of overall points for the team. Despite the fact that almost half of the team were first year swimmers, they still proved to be strong. The Bucs have given a lot of competition to Bonn, Hahn, and Wiesbaden.

Those high schools that qualified for the European Forces Swimming League (EFSL) Championships were Cristal Halverson, Shane Bragg, Glenn Kellahan, David and Steph Mizgala, and Starry Severn. The championships were held at the Olympic Stadium in Munich on the 15th of March. There were others that went to participate in the relays, but there were a total of 26 individual events swam.

Many of the meets have been held here in Baumholder because of our exceptional pool facilities. Without the excellent support of the parents and the Baumholder Community, none of this would have been accomplished.

YEARBOOK STAFF

To the yearbook staff of 1987,

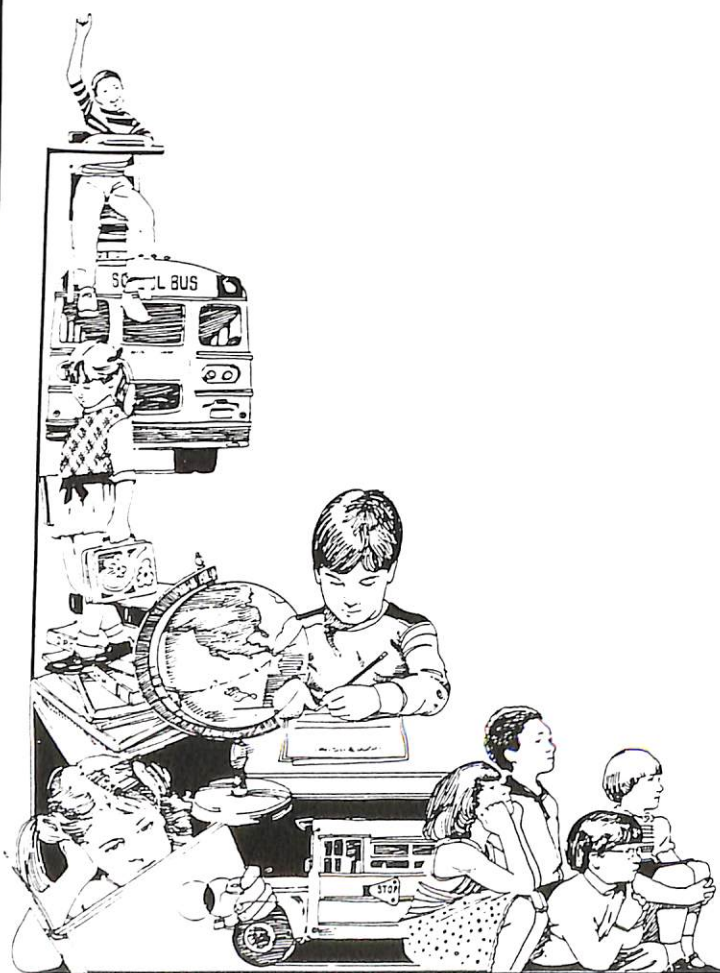

Well, I guess this is it. A special thanks to Fred Jensen and Shelley Rowan for completing the copy on time, even though they waited until the last minute to do it. Also, I would like to thank the entire staff for an excellent year of work. You guys really helped out a lot. I often wondered what this book would have been like without this staff. Thanks. Mr. Reed deserves a great deal, he helped us so much, we couldn't have done it without him. Mr. Reed, we all thank you. Now that all my "thank you's" have been said, I would like to wish everyone luck in the future years of your life and you just keep on being as great as you were this year.
