VAPOR TRAILS

Bitburg

Footsteps Forward

Footsteps Forward

Since the beginning of time, a road winding into the distance has beckoned man. From the rustic trails to the west in a new country, to the silver trail of the rocket arching across the sky, men have been moving forward; and so must we.

Our own personal trails, which are just as important as those of our forefathers, can only dimly be seen ahead. We can only go forward doing the best we can and profiting by our mistakes.

The first step we take on our trail is one guided by our parents as they will guide us for many years. We move slowly along through our early years learning the basic lessons: how to get along with others, the importance of hard work, respect for authority, and the facts from our books. All these years are preparatory to another big step — the one from childhood to adulthood.

We realize that from then on we are actually working day by day toward the future. But we might look back, even as we look forward. We have gone far with the help of our parents, the school, and God. Who knows where our trails will lead? None but ourselves knows where our footsteps will take us.

Time out for celebrations

Lighter moments

to remember at B. H. S.

Four years is a very short span of time in anyone's life; but, when those four years are the freshman, sophomore, junior, and senior years of high school, they can be the most enjoyable and rewarding years of a person's life. At no other time will four consecutive years be devoted solely to the development and enrichment of a budding adult personality with so much emphasis on h i m, h i s problems and his accomplishments. This is the magic time when he can leave behind the anonymity of childhood and step into the spotlight of high school before entering the often incognizant surroundings of adult life.

At no other time can the glory of being a football hero burn so pure and bright, can the wonder of being pretty mean so much to a girl, and the awakening of knowledge in a boy be so new and fresh and wonderful.

High school is the time to prove one's self; for funny little Tom Jones to win a scholarship, and John Smith to become a football hero and scrawny little Edna to turn into an attractive young lady.

The world becomes a school house and there is beauty in a patched notebook, grace in a hobby sock, hope in a 100 pound halfback, art in a biology lab, and magic in the words "No homework!"

The purpose of high school is to learn. Learning not only in the sense of algebra and Latin but also learning about one's abilities and possibilities. This is a time for shaping ideals and standards and learning the amazing fact that never occured to you before that other people have the same faults and ideas and dreams as you do.

Each succeeding year brings something new, something to make you a little bit wiser and a little bit older, until eventually there comes the sum of it all — the realization of maturity.

These are preparation years, but they are also something more. These are years to be lived to the fullest, academically and socially———

- - - and to be remembered forever
