

Principal's Message

Dear Delalio Students,

Happy 100th birthday to aviation! It was a very special year as you went to school in North Carolina, the state where aviation was born. The world celebrated the hundredth birthday of flight and you had the chance to go to school on a base that had helicopters right next door to your house! It was a year of exciting things to learn. Every day the classrooms and hallways were filled with learning about the exciting and interesting world of flight. You were treated to assemblies where you heard from pilots, an air traffic controller, and an artist who painted pictures of the Wright brothers' airplanes. We even had a guest speaker who shared with you the magical world of flight as airplanes sailed across the room!

The Wright brothers were the world's first astronauts! I know their teachers and parents were proud of them as the lessons they learned in school, using math, science, reading, and social studies helped them to fly through the air in the world's first successful flight. Those twelve seconds changed the world! You, too, can change the world as you make your dreams come true. Just like the Wright brothers, the work you do in school can help you earn your wings to adventure and discovery. Soar to new heights as you do your homework, read a book every day, learn your math facts, conduct science experiments, and discover the world through social studies. The sky is the limit!

Love,
Ms. Batchelor
