TAKING A WALK ON THE WILD SIDE ...

DAY 1 — At 4:30 a. m. we loaded and boarded the bus. Everybody was excited to get there. However, the road there turned out to be a very boring one. The trip was to take 6-8 hours. To make the time fly we sang songs like "Row, Row, Row Your Boat", "Old McDonald", and many more. Soon we arrived at the bottom of a mountain somewhere in the woods. Everybody got off the bus. Sandy, an instructor, was waiting for us. She had all of our equipment and fresh food. We stuck our breakfast in our already overflowing rucksacks (apples, oranges, and MRE's). Sandy then issued all the equipment we would need for surviving four days in the mountains. After that, she showed us how to properly use a compass and map. We each had a job to do. One person was the leader. Their role was to verify the route with the route finders and then tell everyone where to go. The sweeper stayed in the back and made the slower climbers move faster. The pacer's job was to set the pace to as fast as the slowest moving climber. Once everybody had their job we had to find our way to the hut. We had to find our way by 6:30 P. M. or we missed dinner. We headed up the mountain with 50 pound rucksacks on. This first climb was tough and almost all uphill. It was a climb you'd never forget. Halfway up, Sandy made a bet that we couldn't finish the climb without stopping. Finally, as we climbed higher and as the air got thinner, we saw the dim light of the hut. We had made it. "You accomplished one of the hardest climbs a person of your age could accomplish," said Sandy. We headed up to the third floor of the hut and put our stuff by our beds. We washed up and went downstairs for supper. It was a meal we truly worked for. After dinner we hit the sack. The moment our heads hit the pillow we were out like rocks.

DAY 2 — Up at 6:30 and eating warm MRE's. No sugar was allowed so we had to drink water the entire trip. After being assigned an instructor, we were given our harnesses and hats. The instructors showed us how to climb and how to bly. To bly you have to watch the person go up and let a little bit of rope out of your hand. There were six ropes to climb. The highest was as long as a football field. It was very scary to climb, but after the second short climb it wasn't as scary anymore. At first there were places in the mountain where you could put your hands and feet. All of a sudden though, there were no more dents to put your fingers and toes in. You ended up climbing the mountain with your weight and friction. It was easy to slip and easy to get frustrated. You just had to think, "I'm almost there."

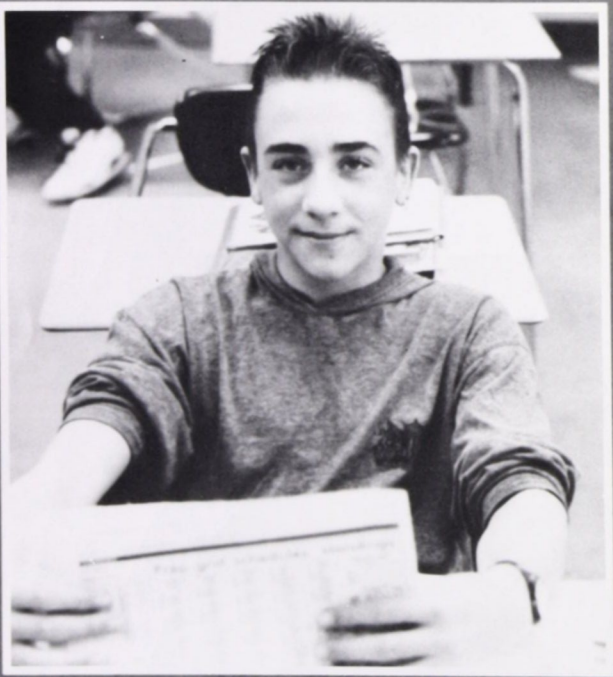

Then, after all that work you finally reached the top. You turned around and walked backwards down the way you just came. When you finally got your feet on the ground, you jumped for joy. Five climbs later we headed back to the hut for supper.

DAY 3 — Once again, a fun but tiring day of rock climbing. Once again, time to eat our MRE packet. Yuck. What we didn't eat we threw to the black birds that were watching us eat. We were going to do some repelling today. It wasn't exactly what I was expecting, but it was great. First, you had to walk down the side of the rock then let yourself hang in midair. Slowly you had to repel yourself down. After that we hiked over to another rock to do something like friction climbing. The rocks had hardly any foot and hand holds. Bud, our instructor, made us kiss something at the top of the climb. It was great when you would look over the top and see the beautiful view. It was magnificent!! After everyone finished their climbs we started heading back towards the hut for some lunch. Once again we had MRE's and our friends, the birds, came back for more crackers and people watching. The afternoon climb was more fun because everyone was in a good mood. Our group was laughing and cracking jokes. Each funny joke would make someone laugh and slide a little way down. We headed back to the hut, had supper, and we were still giggling and laughing as we climbed into bed. Did they actually think that we were going to sleep?

DAY 4 — Last day. Too bad. We get to hike back down to the bus at the bottom. We soon started down with everyone moaning and groaning because we knew the hike was long and hard. It soon became harder because it began to snow and it was slick everywhere. A couple of times some people slipped and fell. We livened up the hike by singing "Walking in a Winter Wonderland." The hike down took us less time because we all wanted to get home. At the bottom we ate our last packet of MRE's. Sandy, Bud, and Jim collected the things we borrowed. All we had left in our rucksacks was what we came with. By the time the bus came, we were soaked to the bone. We boarded the bus and began our journey home. As some of us turned to stare out the window, thoughts returned to home. Others were talking and singing. This bus ride was terrible because some of us had no dry clothes to wear except for long johns. As we pulled into the parking lot of HAMS you could see people pointing out towards their parents and waving "Hi." It was so nice to get home.

BAND MEMBERS

STAND

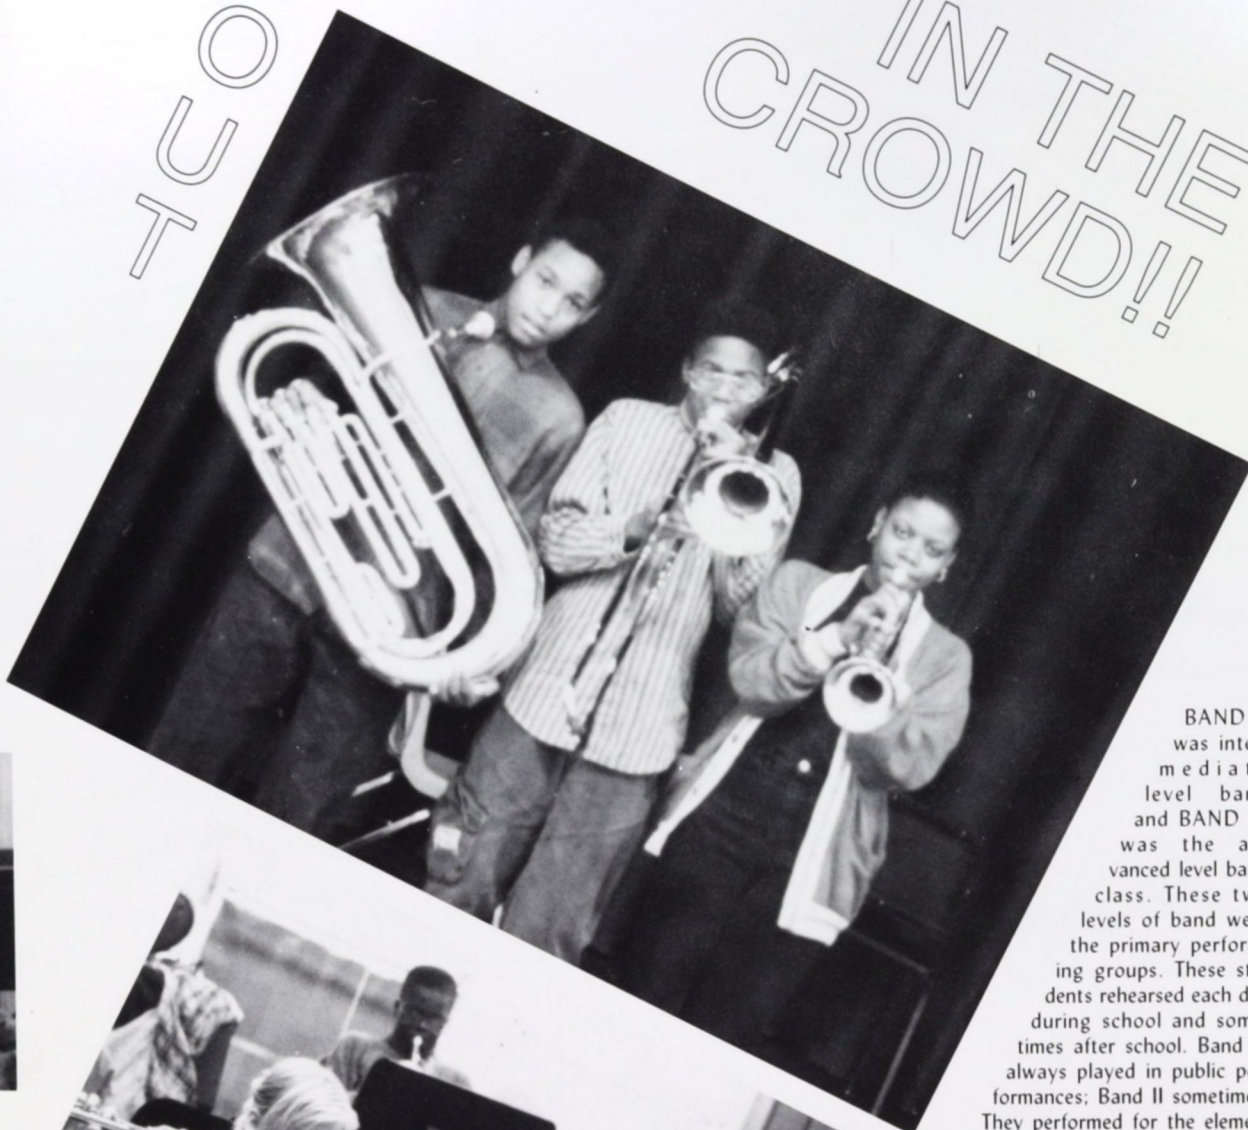

BAND I was beginning band at HAMS. Students signed up for beginning band in 6th, 7th, or 8th grade. After they enrolled in a band class, they were tested to see what band instrument they were best suited to play. Band I was a year long course in which the students learned how to read and play music on their instrument.

IN THE CROWD!!

BAND II was intermediate level band and BAND III was the advanced level band class. These two levels of band were the primary performing groups. These students rehearsed each day during school and sometimes after school. Band III always played in public performances; Band II sometimes. They performed for the elementary schools, official community functions, annual winter and spring concerts, and for assembly programs.

Creating the Chaos

Kimberly Idio

There are many people to thank for their contributions to this book. I give a huge thanks to the faculty and staff for filling out all the forms we sent their way and for being ever so patient with me. Mr. Garrity has contributed to this book in more ways than I can describe. His bomb on the cover, his endless ideas, and his desire to help us carry out our chaotic theme will never be forgotten. Many thanks to Mrs. Kratcha for helping us make our deadlines. To the yearbook staff, I commend you on a job well done. At the beginning of the year you may not have realized the impact you were going to have on this school. Now that the final product is here, be proud of what you have done for the task was not an easy one. I can't thank Jessica Messer enough for her creative contributions to this book. She continually helped me to see things from a newer and brighter angle. Last, but not at all least, I give the biggest thanks to Jennifer Pearson. Her dedication and commitment to the production of this book has been absolutely unbelievable. She and Jessica deserve most of the credit for this book. They have been the best editors anyone could ask for.

Many thanks to everyone.

Mrs O'Reilly,

It was really good to have you as a teacher again. You are still great. I hope that you keep on teaching. See you next year & stay sweet. You still look great too.

Tamira

Mrs. O'Reilly,

You're a great teacher
Hope to see you next year.

Eugenio,

P.S. You're a excellent cook ☺

Dear Mrs. O'Reilly, Thank you so much for your support and understanding.
Even though I have been bad and a real show-off.
I want to again. Gonna miss you so much.

Stay Love Always
