Mrs. Susan Ransom has been principal of Landstuhl Elementary and Middle School since 2008. She was born on Christmas Day in Ontario, Oregon and is married to Mr. Ransom, who is a really fabulous painter. She graduated from college at Portland State University in Oregon where she majored in history. Her hobbies are traveling and reading and her favorites are historical novels. Owned and operated by the long-time and knowledgeable father and son team of Louis M. Jason (son) and Henry Jason (father), the shop is renowned not only for the warm friendliness and helpful expertise of its proprietors, but for its extraordinary selection of titles, with the strongest emphasis placed upon quality and condition.

One may browse here at leisure through first editions (in great numbers signed or inscribed) of authors from Swinburn, Hemingway, Faulkner and Orwell to Salinger, Amy Rand, Raymond Chandler and Ian Fleming; from Dickens, Joyce, and Virginia Woolf to J.K. Rowling, Barrie, Milne and Pullman; from Heller, Kerouac and Burroughs to Vonnegut, Bellon, Agatha Christie, John D. MacDonald and Rex Stout.

In addition to presenting a full range of the well-known American & British fiction, hardcover and paperback, the gleaming window shelves stock a vast, careful selection of Mystery & Detective, Children's Classics, Autobiographies, Books into Film (titles signed not only by the book's authors, but also by the stars of the various movie adaptations), Comixes, and the very best of True Crime.

The shop is happy to help, as it does regularly, with rare and high efficiency to customers throughout the country and abroad. Also, MasterCard & American Express are accepted gladly, and for the convenience of its clientele there is a toll free phone number for questions & orders, thus eliminating potential service problems often faced in on-line purchasing.

And I believe that the time for a little, high, for all of us, will be a little later, for who knows when the sun of dawn, which rose not long ago, will not rise again from the heart of the ocean, perhaps, or else, I repeat, just to pass.

William S. Burroughs

BUY AFTER covering the house all night, I did not sleep in Green Park when morning dawned. I was wet to the skin, it is true, and I had had no sleep for twenty-four hours, but, notwithstanding as a previous night looking for work, I had to look about me, first for a breakfast, and then for the work.

During the night I had heard of a place over on the eastern side of the States, where the Salvation Army, every Sunday morning gave away a breakfast to the unemployed. And, by the way, the men who carry the banner are unopposed in the morning, and when it is raining they do not have much show for a week, either. Thus, though I was the very thing, breakfast in the morning, and then the whole day in which to look for work.

It was a weary walk. Down St. James Street I thought I could see, along Pall Mall, past Trafalgar Square, to the Strand. I crossed the Waterloo Bridge to the States, with my arms in Blackfriars Road, coming out near the Navy Theatre, and arrived at the Salvation Army, barracks, before seven

Inside, it was a vision of beauty, as it is atmospheric and cozy; a virtual treasure more of books, several thousand—early and every one a first edition—immaculately organized, beautifully kept.

This is Mystery Pie Books, Inc., the second independent bookshop with a prestigious reputation extending far beyond Times Square. Member of the Antiquarian Bookellers Association of America (AABA) and the International League of Antiquarian Bookellers (ILAB), the shop is featured especially on television and in the major national entertainment magazines, including Mystery. First is a few facsimile for a great many of the industry's elite who can often Kennedy popular with clients close to home as the world of antique pictures, television and more. Mystery Pie regularly provides gifts for customers and visitors in the major Jewish shows. Books from here grace the bookshelves of Bruce, Isadore Kadmon, Julia Roberts, John Malkovich, Mel Gibson, Jude Law, Oprah Winfrey, Graham Greene, Michael Caine, Phil Spector, Woody, Susan Sarandon & Tim Robbins, David Blaine, Jeremy Irons and Bruce Willis. Amongst many, many others.
