Mustangs

San Elementary

Cover designed by
Hayden Ness

Principal

Ms. Choi

Mustang Students, Staff, and Families,

It's almost impossible to capture an entire year in one message—or even one book. Since August, we have experienced so much change and progress together. Some of that change will be evident in the pages of this yearbook. You will see how much you have grown since the fall. You will remember events that brought us together, accomplishments that made you proud, and the friends and mentors who helped shape this school into a community.

Other changes are harder to see in pictures, but make me equally proud to be the principal at Osan Elementary. Across grade levels and across the school, we have witnessed huge leaps in learning. We have watched students come into their own, socially. We have delighted in seeing children find passions in arts, music, STEAM, and clubs, turning those passions into works we can celebrate—and dreams we look forward to seeing come true.

Of course, in any military community, change presents both opportunities and challenges in our daily lives. It is undeniably difficult to see staff, family members, and friends come and go. It requires a unique resilience for a school to experience so much flux. But it also means we are fortunate enough to have an ever-growing Mustang family—one as diverse and worldly as the nations we call home. May this yearbook be a reminder of all of the friends we welcomed into our circle this year, as well as those we bid farewell as they ventured toward their next learning opportunity.

In the end, I will remember this year as a celebration of coming together to learn. Though we resumed in-person instruction last year, these were the days when we were able to return to so many events, traditions, and gatherings that the COVID-19 pandemic had limited or made impossible. From spirit weeks to the Winter Jam, from cultural celebrations to the Evening of the Arts, I was thrilled each time we could open our doors to the community and showcase student learning and talent. I hope you see snapshots of those moments here and remember that we are at our best when we work and play together.

No matter where you are during this season of change, I am proud of you and proud to be your principal. For our students, family, and staff who have moved on to your next adventure, I wish you well. I hope this yearbook holds warm memories for you. For our departing fifth graders, I wish you a smooth transition into middle school. I hope this yearbook reminds you that you are ready to take the next step and that your contributions to our school will not be forgotten. And for those returning next school year, I wish you a wonderful summer. Whether you travel, spend time with family, or find your own ways to keep learning, I look forward to seeing your faces in August. We will continue to work together, grow together, and learn together.

Thank you for all you do to ensure our students find success in times of change.

Best regards, your principal,

Hannah Choi
