PARADE GROUNDS

CHECK POINT

.....AND THIS IS HOW IT STARTED

Early Years

About 1902, American soldiers on reconnaissance for fodder, chanced upon "the old Fort Stotsenburg area". After a brief exploration of the range, they decided to pitch tents and encamp. That small, seemingly insignificant beginning was later to become an air base which would prove to be a major factor in the World War II Pacific Campaign.

At first the only thing differentiating this area from any other was a few scattered tents, which were replaced by nipa huts. In the next few years this peasant atmosphere was completely obliterated when wooden barracks were finally erected. By 1908 it looked as if the Americans were here to stay, for then President Roosevelt declared the "fort area" a legal military reservation.

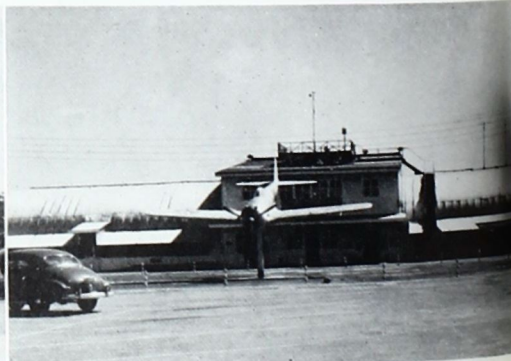

The private homes around what is now 13th Air Force Headquarters and officers billeting were constructed in 1910. Between then and 1917 some progress was made, but at the latter date a move was made which proved to be a decisive step. The steel hangars built in that year inaugurated a move of all Air Force personnel to the Field and this move soon became permanent. Hitherto all units, with the exception of a few consisting of artillery or infantry, had been cavalry.

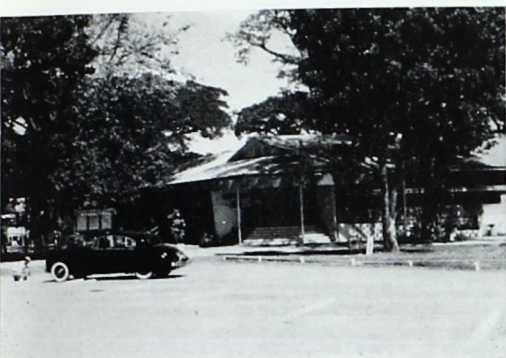

In the course of the next two decades, stateside conveniences such as water piping facilities and a sewage system were installed. Clark became "motorized" so that by the beginning of World War II there was the crude hint of the existence of an air base.

The War Years

During the war, Clark might have been of great value, but due to espionage in the form of severed communications, confusion and indecision reigned, and as a result, the base was totally unprepared. The Japanese remained in control here until 1945, and during their occupation improved upon the plane facilities by building a concrete strip in addition to the previously-constructed asphalt taxiways and runways.

With the realization of the need of a well-facilitated air base in the Philippines, the United States government, in 1945, began to speed up construction. The Field was made accessible to even the heaviest bombers. A tower and various maintenance buildings were built, and everything showed promise of a great air field.

With all this improvement, still the needs of the troops had not been considered. They were still in temporary shelters; but finally their material needs, as well as those of a recreational nature, were taken care of (late 1945).

A School Is Started

The Base, as we know it, began to "fill out its skeleton"—even dependents' quarters were being constructed.

After the development of housing areas for families, the dependents landed with their "fledglings", and the "school problem" was born.

The first classes on CAFB were held in private homes and taught by women volunteers, The Dependents' School was formally opened in 1949 with a faculty of eight stateside teachers and six local dependents. Because of the ever-increasing enrollment more teachers and more subjects were added.

We are very fortunate to have had a very progressive 1953. The faculty now numbers thirty-three and the student enrollment is eight-hundred and seventy. Our newly-constructed U-shaped high school building was opened in October, 1953. The grade school and high school now have their own respective buildings.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE SENIOR CLASS:

Congratulations upon the successful completion of another step up the rocky but always interesting path of life. From here on, the way will become increasingly more difficult and some of you may even stumble and have to start all over again.

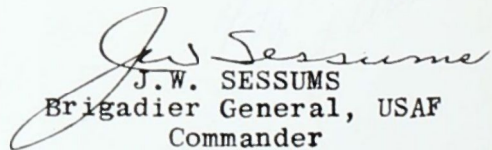

But I urge you to set your goal at the top. It is never crowded up there, and in a country such as ours the opportunity to reach it is open to everyone. Give serious thought to furthering your formal education by attending one of the many colleges and universities which make up America's unsurpassed educational system. The opportunity that is yours is a priceless one.

You will be constantly confronted with urgent problems, not the least of which will be the support of yourselves and your families. In addition, you must share in the responsibility of preserving the freedom and safety of our nation. Your generation may well decide the future of civilization for centuries to come, and it is for you to strive for the development of a world where men may live together side by side in peace. It is a gigantic task but it is not an impossible one.

Always live up to the best that is in you and your future will be a rich and happy one.

To all of you I wish good health, happiness and prosperity in the years to come.

Sincerely,

Last Will and Testament

KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS:

We, the Senior Class, of Clark Dependents' School, Province of Pampanga, Country of The Republic of the Philippines, being of sound and disposing mind and memory, and not acting under fraud, duress, menace, or the undue influence of any person (teacher) whatsoever, do make, publish, and declare this our last Will and Testament, in the manner following, that is to say:

FIRST: I, Jim Reinhardt, leave my ability to annoy Miss Bertoline and my Physics book to Pat Howard, my desk and its contents to Esther Fox, and my unfailing ability to be late for class to Mrs. Reid.

SECOND: I, Nancy Anderson, leave to any Junior who has the grades my place as Valedictorian of the Graduating Class, and to Jackie Watson I leave my wonderful typewriter for use in Typing II.

I also leave Miss Snider still wondering when the AIO is going to fix the stoves in the Home Economics room.

THIRD: I, Sharon Baker, leave to Jackie Watson my height and my enthusiasm; to Steve Barbor my sound advice; to Betty Sides my tan, and to Mr. Nelson my typing efforts.

FOURTH: I, Gary Renaud, leave my reputation as the "Nose" to Pat Howard. I also leave Mr. Graham sitting in the P. I. with a nipa hut and three acres of rice.

FIFTH: I, Bill Sides, leave to the incoming chemistry students the chemistry lab (blown up), and to my helpful, faithful, and beloved teachers, my books—gladly SIXTH: I, Jon Adrian, leave my jovial nature to Miss Bertoline, my trigonometry book to my brother, Carl, and my memories to Jacqueline Horn. Last but not least, I leave the P. I. (after five years of living here) in perfect bliss.

SEVENTH: I, Pat Herre, leave to Fred Baker my sweet (?) disposition. To Miss Bertoline I leave my still unanswered, unnecessary questions. I leave my thanks to Miss Sorenson for helping me pass algebra.

EIGHTH: I, George Gallia, leave my Texas cowboy boots to Dobbin Lewis, although everyone knows he should wear horse shoes instead. I leave Miss Sorenson a set of achromatic lenses so that she will not have chromatic aberrations in her dispersing experiments in Physics.

NINTH: I, Carmen Barron, leave my shorthand book to my sister, Reginia, with the hope that she will not have as hard a time with it as I did. Anything that has to do with history I leave to Miss Mueller. I leave Miss Graves still trying to teach the girls to dance.

The foregoing instrument, consisting of one (1) page, at the date thereof, by the said Senior Class, signed, sealed, and published as, and declared to us, and each of us, to be their last Will and Testament, in the presence of us and each of us, who at their request and in their presence, and in the presence of each other, have hereunto subscribed our names as witnesses thereto.

Prophecy

As the four-motored plane circled the field for a landing, Mt. Arayat loomed up and only then did George Gallia, the renowned statesman, awake from his lethargy as he prepared to take leave of the plane. He had resolved to forget the worries of state affairs that so heavily weighed on his mind and to indulge in a bit of frivolity with his classmates of 1954, all gathering together in the Philippine Islands in this confused world of 1974.

The first old graduate to meet him was the familiar red-headed Jon Adrian, who had occasionally requested various favors to further the missionary work that he had been doing in the Philippines for the past twenty years. (Rumor had it that Jon was not only furthering the cause of missionary work, but doing a little finagling on the side to build up his own personal bank account.

The two old friends headed for the Officers' Club and were met by Pat Herre, famed Hollywood actress. Pat had arrived by clipper just two days previous to the others with her retinue of servants and press agents.

After settling down to reminisce, they were joined by the celebrity "Rhiney James", formerly known as Jim Reinhardt, and in spite of his sun glasses, he looked much the same. Following him was Nancy Anderson, her husband and four lovely children. There was much laughter and conversation with all these old friends and when Carmen Barron walked in with her husband, who is ambassador to the United States, they were informed that a recent letter had arrived from Mrs. Bill Sides expressing her regrets at not being able to join them. Mrs. Sides is the former Shay Baker and Carmen said that Shay had continued to live in California with three of her children, while Bill lived in Texas with the other three. Another one of the graduates unable to attend was Gary Renaud, who was running a chicken farm in Mississippi.

It was quite a congenial group except for Pat and "Rhiney" quibbling over who was the better artist. However, both remained friends after giving an emphatic "NO" to Jon Adrian when he tried to put the "touch" on them for his missionary work.

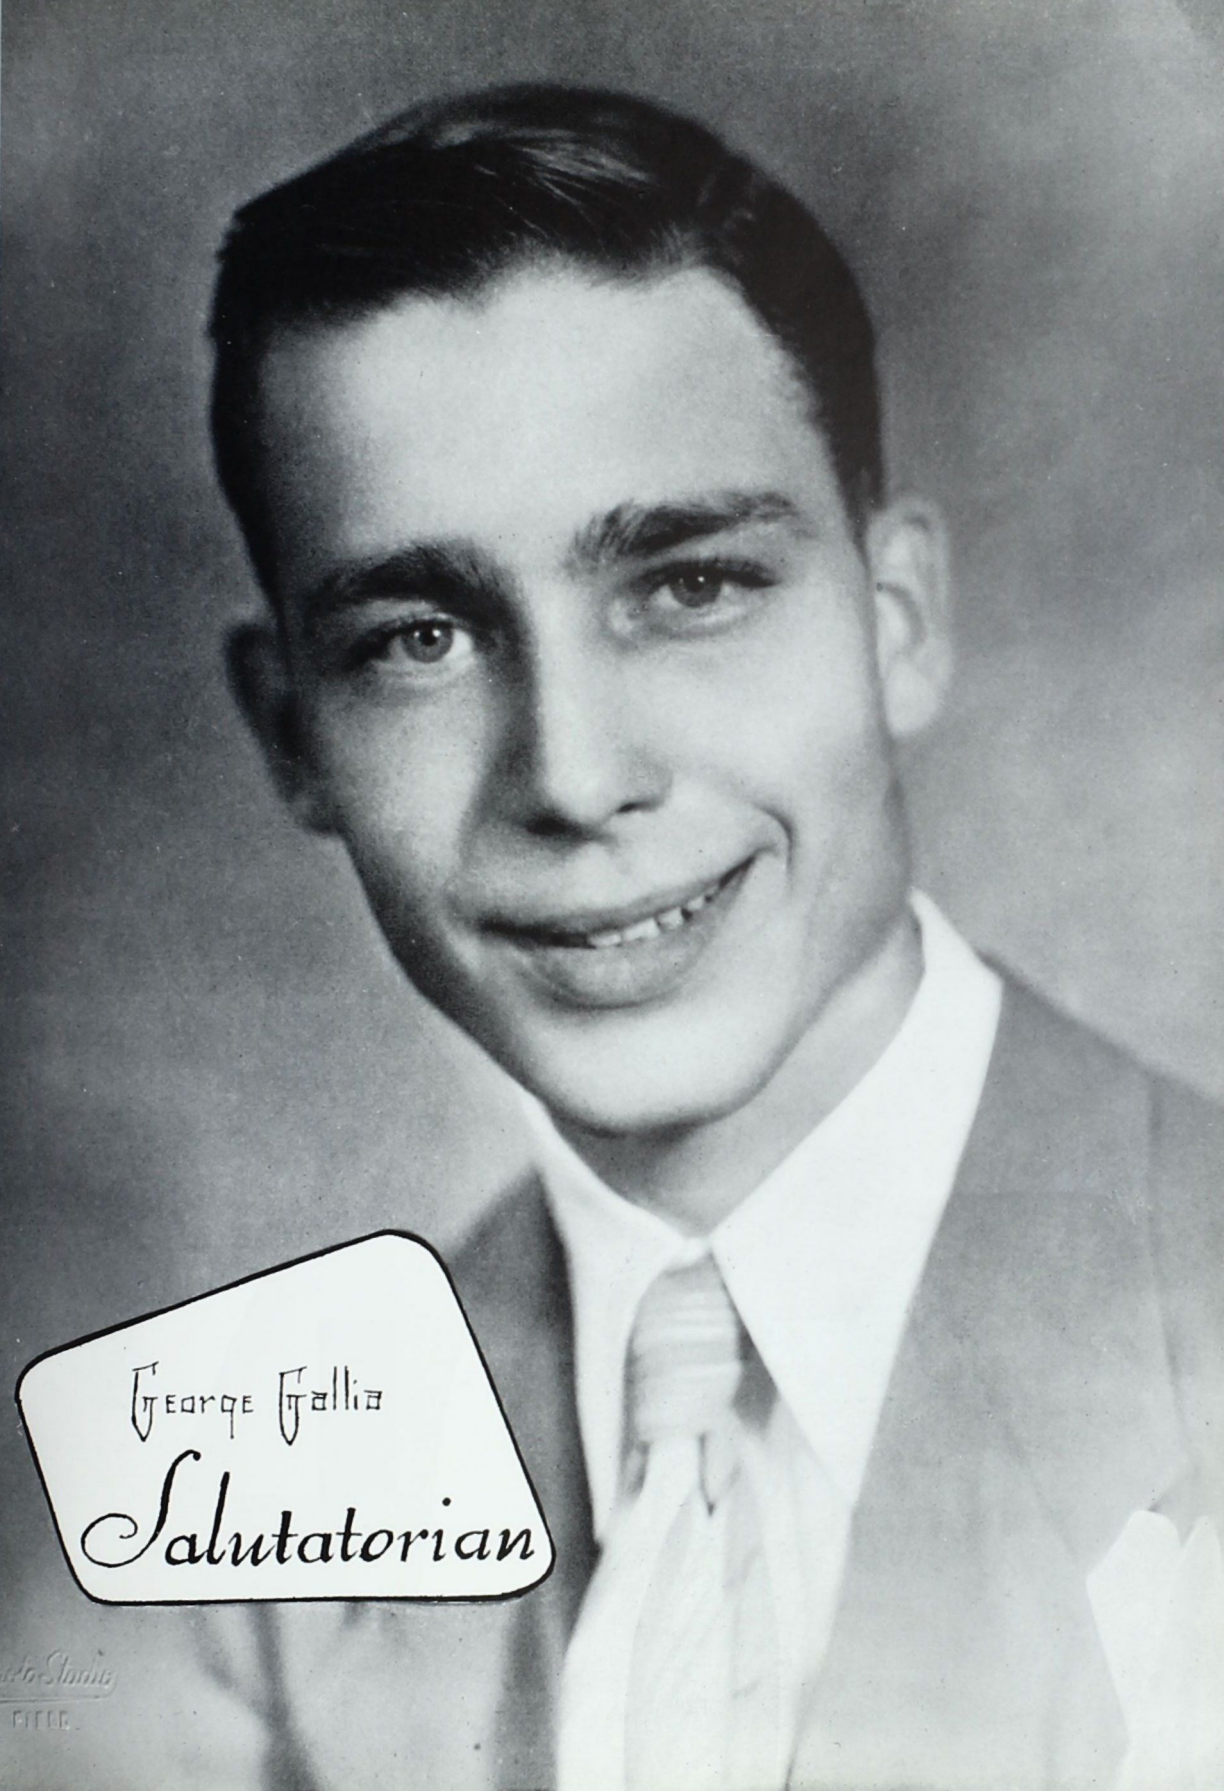

The group then proceeded to the Dependents' School and was greeted by Mr. Peterson, their old teacher and friend. The group was bewildered when Mr. Peterson, after approaching, gave a maniac-like scream and took off for the boondocks. On further investigation, they were told by Miss Mueller, another teacher, that Mr. Peterson had lost all his sense of humor and had not been the same since the class of 1954 graduated.
