Princess Diana

In the United Kingdom, millions wept for their Princess whose life had abruptly come to an end. Diana Spencer, a young, vibrant woman, lived to love. She cherished many things: Her two sons William and Harry, doing good deeds, and peace. Invasions of her privacy distressed her, though. That made her fairy tale story all the more tragic, for that is how the world's Princess spent her last hours--being chased by photographers. After her bitter divorce with Prince Charles, this renowned lady battled many trials. All Princess Diana ever wanted was to be free, to care for those in need, and to give a helpful hand to victims of hate and discrimination. Too soon, though, Lady Di's magic touch was stilled by the hand of fate. Riding in a Mercedes Benz with her companion, Dodi Al Fayed, on the night of August 31, Diana noticed quite a few photographers on motorcycles pursuing her car. She spoke to Dodi about it, and he gave orders to the chauffeur to speed up. No speed could shake the crazed riders; they kept right on the Mercedes' trail. Somehow, someway, the car carrying Lady Diana crashed. Tragically, three of the four occupants died, Diana among them. Although Diana had finally found someone to love, death blew all her new dreams away. Even though Diana remained alive at the scene, she eventually died at a French hospital despite the efforts of a medical team. However, her short life was hardly a waste. Diana Spencer had held the hands of many AIDS victims, comforted children torn by war, and much more. Throughout the dark night and into the early morning, more and more people around the world paid tribute to their heroine with flowers, words, and tears. It was the day the world cried.

Mother Teresa

She was born Agnes Gonxha Bojaxhiu but through her achievements, she won the ever famous name of Mother Teresa. Just days after her eighty-seventh birthday, the living saint passed away from a heart attack. Her nuns, upon hearing this news, notified all of the townspeople with a huge bell. About four thousand people gathered in the rain to see the action for themselves. Mother Teresa was laid on a bed of ice while, one by one, other nuns came by and touched her bare feet, a common Indian gesture of respect. She is mostly known for her work to minister and serve the street people. Mother Teresa taught the slum children who were too poor to go to school. She also found a woman, half eaten by maggots and rats lying in the street, whom she stayed with until the woman died. Mother Teresa was one who chose to live simply and always turned down anything higher than poverty. Her work was recognized throughout the world and in 1979, Mother Teresa won the Nobel Peace Prize. Whether or not she did it for God, herself or for fame, this wondrous woman wanted the unwanted, loved the unloved and cared for the uncared for. No matter if she is dead or alive, Mother Teresa lit a path to holiness and always invited others to follow her.

Music Madness

All of us have something in our lives that we turn to for entertainment, whether it be turning on the radio and listening to a few tunes or dancing to an excellent beat. The simple point is, many of us find happiness through music. Here is what some students had to say about their favorite music artists. Chandra Jenkins, an eighth grader, said her favorite artists are all Saints, Puff & Mase, Cleopatra, Spice Girls, Bone Thugs, Total, Tenderoni, Usher, and Ginuwine. "They all have good music and they can sing." Alexis White, also an eighth grader, said, "I like Puff Daddy, Mase, Usher, Bone, Aaliyah, Missy Elliot and Janet. I like these artists because their music is different and it has style." Seventh grader Greg Ware had some of the same favorites. "I like Puff Daddy, Bone, Backstreet, Dru Hill and New Edition. I think they are the best artists. I like the Soul Food and Men in Black soundtracks, too." Shanon McCray, an eighth grader, said it simply, "BONE! They're such unique rappers and their voices are so smooth. I love their style!" While all of the above seemed to like the same artists, Chris Insko and Carl Archbold liked rock bands more. Chris stated, "Green Day because they're good." Carl added, "Nine Inch Nails because they sound cool and also have a cool beat." Eighth grader Beth Nau told us, "I really don't listen to a certain kind of music. I get a variety of CD's so I can listen to all kinds." Jennifer Pinto, a seventh grader, knew who she liked. She told Yearbook reporters, "I like the Backstreet Boys and Boys II Men because they have a nice beat in most of their songs and really sound good." You can like rap or rock, but whatever your tastes, music can be truly fine!

"Spicy"-ness!

One who hasn't heard of the Spice Girls in the last year may be living in a hole. That's a fact! You can turn on any t.v., open any magazine or listen to any radio and see the photos and facts about the "Fab Five". On March 3rd, if you were quick enough to buy a sold out ticket, you would be one of thousands to witness a spectacular sight as the Spice Girls lit up a Frankfurt stage with their songs and dances. Even if you're not a fan of their music or their image, you would have been so engrossed in the talent it took to bring you that colorful concert, that you'd be mistaken for an avid fan! Spiceworld was the theme and the peppy audience certainly had no problem following along with it. First, the Spice Girls landed in a spaceship and fireworks went off all around them. Some of the songs they sang were: "Spice Up Your Life", "Wannabe", "Naked", "2 Become 1", and "Too Much". After every song, amazingly, they managed to change into an even more phenomenal outfit! Without a doubt, when you fall into the Spice lure, you and your world become a spicier place!!!!

Changes, Changes

Various students at this school were asked the question: If you could change one thing about your life, what would it be? Of all the responses we received, many answers were similar. Arlyn Taboso said, "I wish my grandmother didn't die." Katie Thomas, a sixth grader, replied in a like way, "I wish that my grandma, grandpa and other grandpa didn't die." Another person that had comparable views towards deaths in the family was Greg Perusse. He said, "I wish my grandfather didn't die. I barely knew him." Eighth grader, Katie Johnson, told Yearbook reporters, "I wish I wouldn't get into arguments with my friends and family." Stefanie Peters, in the seventh grade said, "I wish people would stay in their own business." Lizette Sangalang said, "One thing I would change about my life would be that I never fight or argue with my friends and would make the world a better place." Sixth grader, Cheryl Tudela, informed Yearbook reporters that the thing she would change about her life would be, "For me not to fight with my family." Lastly, Austin Benner said, "I would change the fact that we PCS and have to make new friends. It normally happens as soon as you get settled and have lots of friends." So, with knowledge about what your peers had to say, what do you think you would change about your life?

Culture Capers

In the world we live in, cultures are what make this world so special. Tabatha Begeman, an eighth grader, told Yearbook reporters that she like the Egyptian culture. "I like their writing and history." Tabatha wasn't alone, though; Jemma Jackson, a seventh grader, said, "I like the Egyptians because I like their history." Sixth grader Taurean Balloon, however, had a different opinion. "I like the Chinese because I like the Great Wall." Another sixth grader, Tony Hessel, said, "The Spanish culture because it sounds interesting." Shannon McCray informed Yearbook reporters, "I really respect the British culture because they have amusing accents." Eric Pizana, an eighth grader, said, "I'm interested in my own Mexican-American culture. It would be nice to know my origins and more of my background." "I like the Indian culture," Jessy Corley said. "I like them because they lived very interesting lives. They always used nature and no heavy machinery." Now you've heard what these students had to say about their favorite cultures; what do you think?

If These Walls Could Talk.....

What do you think they would say?

Josh Parker: "What happened to the tight-jeaned book worm kind of kids? Oh, there's one. Yuck!"

Ramon Garcia: "Hey kid, the answer is 8. Yeah, 6+6 is 8. Trust me?"

Shamika Warren: "Girl! Do you see what she has on?"

Crystall Goforth: "I saw that."

Qumeshia Johnson: "What are you doing?"

Andy Rusboldt: "What's up?"

Ryan Olds: "Oh, my!"

Julia Oliver: "Hey, what's up? I'm the wall."

Ronnie Morales: "Do I look good in this paper?"

Jessica Blundell: "Like you could do better!"

Catherine Johnson: "Get out of my face."

Elizabeth Danley: "Go lean on another wall!"

Rebecca Harris: "Hey, don't you touch that! I said, Don't touch that! No!!!!!"

Angel Guillory: "Oh, no she didn't go there!"

Marquita High: "Don't say that!"

Eddie Core: "You better wipe that off me."

Jessy Corley: "Oooh, she needs a comb!"
