

WE MEET

As students in American schools on foreign soil we are scattered over thousands of miles on three continents. We live among people whose language, customs and traditions are different from our own, but most of us are discovering how very much alike we all are. We have found that Turkish boys and girls get just as excited about a soccer game as we do, that French students have to struggle as hard to learn English as we do to speak French and that our British friends are just as eager to win points at the Cross-Country Bicycle Safety contest as we are.

We are learning all this and much more as we study the language of our host nation in class, visit their schools or invite students from neighboring schools to visit us, and take trips to see the things of historical and cultural interest that are near us. We are really learning to know our neighbors!

Izmir High School competes with a Turkish High School in a soccer game.

Moroccan, French and American girls meet together at the Nouasseur High School.

Dreux Junior High School plays a game of soccer with a French school.

A Central High history class visits Hampton Court Palace, residence of Henry VIII.

Students from a German School enjoy an entertainment put on by the students from Bitburg High School.

