About Elizabeth

After earning a BA in Surface Pattern Design, Elizabeth began her career as an in-house designer for two major home textile brands and then as the lead print stylist for babyGap.

In 2012 she sought to match her bright aesthetic to her surroundings and left New York City to make a sunshine filled home in Raleigh, North Carolina. With that move, she delved into the freelance and art licensing world and expanded the scope of her work to include new categories such as dinnerware, rugs and party paper, with a variety of clients and partners across the country.
