GENERAL INFORMATION

How can I get information about the case?

Call the victim witness coordinator in the county attorney's office for questions about the process, case status information, and upcoming court dates.

In addition to the crime victim rights listed in this brochure, a victim in a juvenile delinquency case is entitled to receive the following information about the juvenile: the name and age of the juvenile, the act for which the juvenile was petitioned (charged), the date of the offense, and the outcome of the case.

Will the case go to trial?

Like adult cases, very few juvenile cases go to trial. Most cases are resolved by a plea agreement in which the juvenile pleads guilty to the delinquent act in return for the prosecutor making a specific recommendation to the court for an appropriate disposition given the circumstances of the case.

What should I do if I receive a subpoena or am called to testify?

A subpoena is a court order to appear in court and provides information about the date, time, and location of the proceeding and who to call for information. Read it very carefully. If you have a scheduling conflict or have any questions, call whoever sent the subpoena. As a witness, you will receive a small payment for your time and mileage.

Who can attend court proceedings?

In general, the public cannot attend juvenile court proceedings, with some important exceptions:

- Any victims of the delinquent act can attend the court proceedings, however, they can be excluded when psychological testing information about the juvenile is being discussed.
- A person with "a direct interest in the case" can attend the court proceedings at the discretion of the court.
- The public can attend proceedings in cases in which the juvenile is alleged to have committed an offense or has been proven to have committed an offense that is a felony and was at least 16 years old at the time of the offense.
- The victim has a right to have a support person present in the court room when giving testimony.

What if I suffered loss as a result of the crime?

If the juvenile pleads guilty or is found guilty of committing a delinquent act, a judge may order that the juvenile pay restitution. Restitution is the out-of-pocket losses resulting from the crime, including medical expenses, lost wages, and property loss or damage. The county attorney's office or probation department will provide the victim a form to complete in which they can describe their out-of-pocket losses.

In addition, victims of violent crime may be eligible for financial assistance from the Minnesota Crime Victim Reimbursement Board if they have certain crime-related expenses. Victims can file a reimbursement claim even though the juvenile's case is still going through the court process. Information about the reimbursement board can be found online at: ojp.dps.mn.gov or call 1-888-622-8799.

How will I know when the offender gets out of a detention facility?

Victims of violent crime, including victims of crimes committed by juveniles, have a right to be notified of the release of the offender from a detention or correctional facility. After the disposition, the victim must make a request directly to the facility to be notified. Unlike adult facilities, juvenile detention facilities are not connected with VINE, an automatic victim notification system.

Although most information about a juvenile offender is considered confidential, a juvenile correctional agency may release private or confidential data about the juvenile to victims to the extent necessary for them to assert their right to request notice of release.

How can I get a copy of the police report?

Victims seeking a copy of the law enforcement investigative report must make a written request to the prosecutor's office. That request can be refused if the prosecutor believes that it will interfere with the investigation or that the request is prompted by a desire on the part of the requester to engage in unlawful activities. Identifying information in the report about juvenile witnesses may be blacked out. In felony cases with offenders at least 16 years old, victims may be able to get a copy of the report at the conclusion of the case.

JUVENILE COURT TERMS

DELINQUENT ACT

A delinquent act is an act committed by a juvenile that would be a crime if committed by a person over age 18. The juvenile is “charged” when a petition has been filed alleging that the juvenile committed the delinquent act. When a juvenile is charged with a crime, the legal process is significantly different from the process used for adults.

DETENTION

A juvenile taken into custody and arrested for a crime may be detained. The arresting officer may release the juvenile to the custody of a parent or guardian, place the juvenile in a shelter, or continue the detention. The law requires that a juvenile be released from detention unless certain circumstances exist. Most juveniles in detention must come before the court within 24 to 48 hours for a detention hearing. Most juvenile offenders are not detained. They are summoned to court by a mailed notice.

ARRAIGNMENT

At the arraignment hearing, the juvenile will appear in court and be asked to enter a plea of guilty or not guilty to the offense alleged in the petition. Juveniles are entitled to an attorney and may apply for an attorney to be appointed to represent them. Upon a guilty plea, the juvenile’s case goes to disposition, either immediately or in the future. A not guilty plea leads to further proceedings and eventually a trial.

PRETRIAL HEARING

In some jurisdictions, the judge may order a pretrial hearing to decide issues of law before trial. Citizen witnesses (including victims) are usually not called to testify at these hearings. The juvenile may plead guilty to the delinquent act at this hearing.

TRIAL

Juvenile trials are held before a judge. A juvenile offender has the same legal protections during trial as an adult charged with a similar crime. The judge will make a determination that the allegation in the petition is “proven” or “not proven.” If a judge finds that the allegation has been proven, the case proceeds to a disposition hearing.

Crime victim rights in Minnesota apply to victims of crimes committed by both juveniles and adults.

DISPOSITION

Once the juvenile is adjudicated delinquent (found guilty), a disposition hearing is scheduled. This is similar to the sentencing hearing in adult court. The judge has a broad range of consequences and programming to consider for the juvenile, including, but not limited to: issuing a warning, ordering payment of restitution to the victim and/or fines, community service, probation, electronic monitoring, foster care, out-of-home placement, or detention. The disposition will depend on the offense, the juvenile’s criminal history, or the availability of appropriate services.

DIVERSION

A juvenile may be eligible for a diversion program in which they admit to the crime, but are diverted out of the court process. Instead, they participate in a program with an educational or rehabilitative component. The goal is to create an incentive for the juvenile to change, ensure restitution to the victims, and hold juveniles accountable to society. Juveniles who do not successfully complete the diversion program may return to juvenile court to answer to the charges.

EXTENDED JUVENILE JURISDICTION

In some cases involving an juvenile age 14 to 17 who commits a more serious offense, the case may be prosecuted as an extended juvenile jurisdiction (EJJ) proceeding. EJJ is an alternate way to deal with juveniles who have committed serious crimes and for whom transfer to adult court may not be appropriate. If adjudicated, the juvenile offender receives a juvenile court disposition and a stayed adult sentence (meaning it is “on hold”). The court has jurisdiction over the juvenile until he or she is 21. If the juvenile violates the terms of the juvenile court disposition or commits a new crime, the judge can impose the adult sentence. In EJJ cases, a juvenile has a right to a jury trial.

CERTIFIED AS AN ADULT

Juveniles ages 14 to 17 who commit serious crimes may be “certified as an adult.” Once a case is transferred to adult court through certification, the case is outside of the juvenile court’s jurisdiction.
