Tinley Park plans to achieve greatness as a world class community. It has, to its advantage, an ideal location with excellent transportation and ample low-cost land for development. Moreover, the community possesses an indomitable spirit and the wit and courage to accomplish its goals.

Already, Tinley Park is world class in entertainment. It is home to the 35,000-seat World Music Theater that will one day be the nucleus of a giant commercial center with hotel and convention accommodations.

The village is an active participant in the Sister City International program. It shares community friendship with Büdingen, Germany, including visitor exchanges, and has dedicated a park in its sister city's honor.

World class industrial and office parks, like North Creek Business Center, dominate the I-80 corridor that forms Tinley Park's southern sector. The village welcomes the sparkling subdivisions of fine homes that develop on its open lands and complement the community's balanced mix of housing.

Tinley Park schools sustain a reputation for excellence, demanding creativity from teachers and performance from students. Major universities and colleges are conveniently near. Shopping opportunities abound in everything from membership warehouse outlets to area and neighborhood commercial plazas.

Hundreds of acres of forest preserves border Tinley Park, influencing the community's appreciation of recreation and family fun. Village life is enhanced by well-developed community parks and a comprehensive program of sports, recreation, and activities for all ages.

Tinley Park is a world class place to live, work, and raise a family.

The Schools

s a result of rapid village expansion during two decades the educational needs of Tinley Park residents are now met by nearly a dozen school districts.

Three elementary districts — 140, 145, and 146 — serve most of the village. Districts 140 and 146 have the greatest number of schools situated within Tinley Park. All districts maintain a strong emphasis on the basics and encourage parent involvement.

Tinley Park High School, part of District 228, and District 230's Victor J. Andrew High School, enroll the major share of Tinley Park's high school students. Both high schools provide college preparatory courses, general academic studies, and comprehensive occupational education programs. Students have numerous opportunities for participation in music programs, sports and athletics, and various clubs and organizations.

Augmenting public education are several private and parochial systems. Several day care, preschools, and kindergarten facilities are available in the village and nearby for the children of working parents.

CELEBRATIONS OF JOY

From community festivals to performances by regional music and dance organizations to the world class entertainment presented at the World Music Theatre, Tinley Park residents celebrate the joys of living.

The village's annual Oktoberfest is a panorama of carnival rides, an arts and crafts show, food and beverage booths, and loads of free family-style entertainment. The park district's Fourth of July celebration is another event oriented around family entertainment featuring, of course, a big fireworks display.

Another park district program is "Arts Alive," featuring performances by the Tinley Park Community Band and the South Suburban Theatre Guild. The district sponsors a writers' group to encourage efforts in creative writing and many other art related activities.

Permanent settlement in the Tinley Park area, though generally few and far between, began in the early 1830s. Established in 1853 as the Village of Bremen (or New Bremen after the post office that served the area), the community's location on the route of the Chicago, Rock Island, and Pacific Railroad helped assure and encourage its economic growth.

In 1890, Postmaster Henry Vogt, Sr., requested the post office (and village) change its name to Tinley Park in honor of Samuel Tinley, Sr., the community's first railroad stationmaster. Meeting at the depot June 27, 1892, citizens voted to incorporate as the Village of Tinley Park. The village celebrated its centennial in 1992.

Through the decades, Tinley Park continued to grow and prosper. Telephone service was introduced in 1898 and the first municipal water system followed in 1899, financed entirely by citizens. Local business people established their own electric utility in 1909. Over the years, Tony Bettenhausen and his sons and cousins made Tinley Park famous as the home of five Indianapolis 500 race drivers.

Tinley Park works to preserve its rich heritage in many ways. The area within the 1892 village boundaries is designated a historic district. In it, the village's Historic Preservation Commission encourages property owners to preserve and restore the historic appearances of their structures. A building constructed in 1871 by Carl Vogt is listed on the National Register of Historic Places. Several others are identified in the Illinois Historic Structures Survey.

The Tinley Park Historical Society continues its ongoing research, preservations, and documentation of local history. The Society recently renovated their museum and the "Old Zion" Landmark Church building in which it is located. It provides a fascinating look at Tinley Park from the days the Indians roamed the area until today.

History

FAITH FOSTERS FELLOWSHIP

Worship

Since pioneer settlers completed Zion Lutheran Church in 1880, the people of Tinley Park have joined in fellowship and followed their faiths. Today, the village has 23 centers of worship representing most major denominations. The churches strongly influenced development of Tinley Park's renowned "helping hand" friendliness.

The Tinley Park Ministerial Association, an ecumenical organization composed of village religious leaders, supports community needs and sponsors the annual Thanksgiving service held in one of the churches and an all-church family picnic.
