

There's No Way You Can Dilute Luck

A talk with E.J. Gold

Abstract

E.J. Gold talks about getting into the luck flow. He touches on a series of topics including how the flow of luck is bountiful and lucky and undilutable, how luck can be proven and demonstrated, and what you need to do to get on Lucky Street.

“Don't you get it? It puts you in the flow. It puts you in the Shakti flow. It puts you right in the middle of this beautiful magical flow of bountifulness and luck.

“And it does rub off, and it does spread around, and it isn't limited in any way, shape, or form.

“There's no way you can dilute luck. It can't be diluted, like shaktipat can not be diluted. I can give it away all day long, and have plenty more where that came from. In fact, the more I give, the more I get. Goes out through the hands, comes in through the top. Tons. More than you could possibly. . .

“By the way, I didn't list all the things, all the luck things that have happened. If I listed all the lucky things that have ever happened to me in just one lifetime, even if I just limited it to 10 or 20 years of lucky stuff, it would be a list that would be at least 8 or 10 pages long, single spaced. I'm serious. Just amazing stuff.

“I have it just to prove that. I don't have it for money. I don't have it to sell. I have it to demonstrate.

“Look, this is how. You want to be lucky? Get on Lucky Street.

“Now, that also means, of course, you gotta learn about the work, gotta learn about work ideas, start taking some responsibility, some obligation. Yeah, yeah, yeah, yeah, yeah . . .

“But meantime, just enjoy the luck. Enjoy the luck.

“It’s a way of getting people in with an easy transition because they feel better. They are luckier. They’re getting more money. They’re getting more health. They’re getting better friendships. They’re getting better relationships, better sex. Whatever it might be that they’re getting, it’s because of luck. It’s always because of luck.

“All right?”
