Description

Spotify's social media savvy virtual streaming network for online music has fostered tremendous growth and is one of the catalysts for a move to a larger state of the art facility in NYC. The new facility will not only house general staff in an open collaborative workstation environment, but also host a mini-production suite for visiting artists for impromptu recording sets.

A range of support spaces will each embody an individual personality through bold settings of furniture and accessories, conference rooms will be themed taking on the character of various musicians.

Loft-like interior spaces will foster the fast-paced nature of this business, allowing it to feel larger, urban, and gritty. A large open destination space 'the Marketplace' will be a meeting place to grab a cup of coffee, share a meeting over a lunch or for clients and visitors to have casual meetings with the Spotify team.

Oversized flat panels are peppered throughout the facility with key locations for individuals to load and share their own Spotify playlists.
