Under Capital Assets, we had to backfill a reservoir that had been constructed to accommodate the irrigation system. It was ineffective because due to the highly erodible and porous soil in the area, it would not hold water. More shares of irrigation water were purchased last year and that solved the problem of having an inadequate water supply. Not backfilling the reservoir would have been a potential liability because of the danger of people (children in particular) falling into the open and unused deep reservoir that had steep sides but could still have water in it due to irrigation runoff from a neighboring farm.
