01 ABOUT SUMMIT

FORMER ALLIS CHALMERS CAMPUS

This is more than a workplace; it's where inspiration lives.

Summit Place is a classic example of urban adaptive re-use. This building was developed by the Whitnall-Summit Development Company on the former Allis Chalmers Campus. Allis Chalmers manufactured some of the world's largest machinery at this location and enjoyed great success as it filled countless mills, mines and factories around the globe. The building retained much of this industrial aesthetic from the past and provides abundant natural light, historic brick, structural steel with hundreds of linear feet of skylights.

With over 650,000 square feet of office space and approximately 2,500 people working onsite, Summit Place has been transformed into the most unique suburban office location throughout the Milwaukee market.

+ HISTORY

From manufacturing some of the world's largest machinery to urban adaptive re-use, Summit Place kept its charm and industrial aesthetic along the way.

1900

Originally constructed by the Allis Chalmers Company in the early 1900s, Summit Place was part of Allis Chalmers' 130 - acre manufacturing campus which at its height employed more than 17,000 people.

1970

Allis Chalmers manufactured some of the world's largest machinery at this location, and enjoyed great success through the 1970's.

1987

Summit Place's use as a manufacturing facility continued through Allis Chalmers' 1987 liquidation bankruptcy.

2002

In 2002 planning began to convert the northern portion of this space - approximately 200,000 square feet- to office. In the Spring of 2003 work began on the conversion, and by September the first tenants took occupancy.

CURRENT DAY

The building retained much of its industrial aesthetic by featuring exposed structural steel frames, high ceilings, steel roof trusses, skylights, and exposed original brick walls. The building has approximately 2,500 people working here that are offered numerous amenities to create the charming community of today's Summit Place.
