CREATING YOUR COLLECTION

2 minutes

When you're creating your collection, there's a few things that you need to be aware of. One, of course, is you want to think about your budget. If you are at the level to where you can say, "Look, I don't have a lot of time. I just need the miniatures that I need." What I would recommend is to go on-line to the Play Therapy Supply or Toys of the Trade, and what you can do is order a starter kit that will really give you a good broad spectrum of what you need. Now another way to do that, is that you can piece-mill the miniatures that you need together. And I'll be talking about in another video about, you know, where to get your miniatures. But what you want to think about again is your budget, but then most importantly, the population you're going to be working with. So as we talk about children, adolescents, and adults, I'll be giving you tips, and really direction on what kind of miniatures are most used by that population. So again, if you're just working with littles, then you're going to need one kind of miniatures. If you're just working with adults it will be a different kind of miniature. So really try to tailor what you include and how you build your miniature collection as what population you're going to be working with.
