

Lady Araminta Steeles

Lady Araminta Steeles, widow of Mr. Phelan Steeles, is the lady of Harrison House. She is a youthful widow with just one daughter, Evangeline. Lady Steeles ensures the day-to-day running of the manor as well as the collection of taxes from those in the nearby towns and countryside. Lady Steeles has a stern disposition, but is the epitome of grace and elegance, dressing always in white. While there is no proof, many believe her to be a sorceress, and because of her all-white attire, she has earned the nickname The White Lady. Lady Steeles wears a white dress, minimal cogs save for her hair pieces and cuffs and carries a white parasol.

Miss Evangeline Steeles

Daughter of Ms. Araminta Steeles, Evangeline is a lively and outspoken young lady just coming to society. Her 21st birthday is the reason for the fete this evening, and gifts have been arriving all day from admirers near and far. The Steeles' have another reason to celebrate though, as on this, Evangeline's 21st birthday, they are also announcing her engagement, to Mr. Bartholemew Payne, one of the most eligible bachelors in the county! Miss Steeles is beautiful with rosy lips, a flawless complexion and a fine figure. She wears a beautiful dress with a corset adorned with metal, leather and cogs.

Lyra Cross

Noted alchemist Lyra Cross is a woman in a man's field. Having studied under one of the most renowned alchemists of all time, Lyra is skilled in all sorts of potions and draughts, and serves a number of people all over the county and beyond. Strong-willed and yet comforting at the same time, many of Lyra's patients insist that she herself is the cure for what ails them, not what she carries in her bottles. She goes where her customers require on her trusty Trike, which means she can usually be found wearing riding gear and a pair of goggles thrown atop her head. She also wears a cuff with spaces for vials of commonly-used concoctions that she carries with her at all times.

Mr. Ivan Burnet

Adventurer and nobleman, Mr. Ivan Burnet is a bright-eyed with an infectious smile. Having recently returned from a stint abroad, Ivan Burnet has been granted a stay at Harrison House. But his stay is not entirely for pleasure, as he has been charged with delivering a gift to party honouree, Miss Evangeline Steeles, from her late Uncle, Orpheus Moon. Mr. Burnet has an easy manner and joyful eyes, despite the fact that he lost arm recently in a train accident. He has a robotic arm in its stead, which he insists works better than the original.

Mr. Bertram West

The head house steward at Harrison House for decades, Mr. West is devoted to the manor, and the Steeles family. A man who enjoys his solitude, West is responsible for the running of the house, organization of the other servants and ensuring the Steeles have everything they need. He is diligent, precise and proper, although he has been known to use his dry wit when the situation arises.

Mr. Freeman

The head gardener at Harrison House, Mr. Freeman is charged with keeping the grounds immaculate. Together with a small team of laborers, he ensures the hedges are trimmed and the vegetable gardens plentiful. His "green thumb" has won Harrison House awards for both the flowers and vegetables each year since Mr. Freeman arrived. He is a stern, proper man who will not speak with the Steeles unless spoken to first. Mr. Freeman can usually be found inside the maintenance shed or in the gardens.

Emerson Steeles

Mr. Emerson Steeles is the eldest child of Lady Steeles, and he grew up in Harrison House. His appearance tonight at Evangeline Steeles' 21st birthday was a surprise and shock to everyone, as he has been away at war. The family received word two years ago that he was killed in action, however he arrived, alive as the day is long, at Harrison House tonight, in good health but minus a few limbs. Emerson Steeles is a proud military man who is fiercely loyal to his family. Emerson Steeles wears a uniform and has a robotic arm, where he lost his original arm to an explosion during battle. He wears an intricate brass patch over one eye, which is equipped with a camera as per modern standard military enhancements.

The Vicar

The Vicar, as he is known to his parishioners, is actually Arch Angel Michaelas, a man of the High Angelic Priesthood. While he serves the usual duties of a priest, he also protects his parishioners by any means possible, and is never to be found unarmed. As is the custom of priests in the High Angelic Priesthood, The Vicar has had robotic wings crafted and installed permanently on his back, and uses them often as his preferred method of travel.
