NO COACH, NOR HOME TO START

Bradley played without an official head coach during its first seven seasons. In addition, when the basketball program began, Bradley University did not have an on-campus playing facility. Bradley's home games were played at the Peoria YMCA until the 1909-10 season.

PEORIA ARMORY

Having outgrown the comforts of Hewitt Gymnasium, Bradley moved its home games back to downtown, where BU played its first game on Jan. 3, 1925. BU played at the Peoria Armory until 1941, when the United States' entry into World War II made playing games at the Armory impossible.

Century of Celebration

Bradley University completed a three-year celebration of the first 100 years of Braves Basketball prior to the start of the 2003-04 season. Since the program's first game on Jan. 1, 1903, the first century of Bradley Basketball was filled with great coaches, great players and great games.

During the 2001-02 season, Bradley Basketball's tradition of excellence was put to a vote as fans were given the opportunity to select the greatest players from each of seven "decades" -- 1902-40, 1940s, 1950s, 1960s, 1970s, 1980s and 1990s -- through balloting at selected games and on the athletic department's official website. The top seven vote-getters from each era were selected to their respective Bradley Basketball "Team of the Decade" and an ad hoc committee added an eighth player to each decade, as well as four at-large players for a total of 60 honorees.

Throughout the 2002-03 campaign, those 60 players were honored at selected games and fans once again were given the opportunity to help select the 15 greatest players in the program's history. Those 15 players are featured here and were honored during a "Gameday Luncheon" that drew more than 1,800 fans to the Peoria Civic Center Exhibition Hall Nov. 21, 2003.

In addition to the Bradley Basketball "Team of the Century," Braves fans also selected a "Game of the Century" by voting games through a 16-entry, tournament format. Bradley's 1960 win over #1 Cincinnati at Robertson Fieldhouse was the winner.

COACH OF THE CENTURY

Charles Orsborn • 1956-65

- A member of Bradley's "Famous Five" from 1936-39, Orsborn became the program's seventh head coach in 1956.
- During his nine years at the helm, Orsborn directed the Braves to a 194-56 (.776) overall record, seven NIT appearances and the first three of Bradley's four NIT championships.
- Orsborn still ranks among the all-time national leaders by achieving his first 100 victories in only 120 games and his career record after four, five, six and eight seasons also rank among the top 10 coaches in NCAA Division I history.
- Inducted into the NIT Hall of Fame during the 2002 event's Final Four and the Coaches Wing of the MVC Hall of Fame in 2005.

GAME OF THE CENTURY

No. 4 Bradley 91, No. 1 Cincinnati 90

Jan. 16, 1960 • Robertson Memorial Field House

Advancing through a 16-entry bracket, Bradley's epic battle versus top-ranked Cincinnati Jan. 16, 1960 at Robertson Memorial Fieldhouse was voted the Greatest Game in Bradley Basketball history by a vote of fans throughout the 2002-03 season.

The 91-90 victory remains Bradley's only win against the nation's top-ranked team and made legendary Cincinnati player Oscar Robertson 0-for-3 in his games on the raised floor at Robertson Fieldhouse. Of course, the loss should not be blamed on Robertson: the king of the "triple-double" poured in an arena record 46 points and added 10 rebounds for the Bearcats.

Robertson's effort was offset by a trio of Braves, led by All-American forward Chet Walker, who put up a double-double of his own with 28 points and 12 rebounds. Al Saunders added 22 points and nine boards, while Bobby Joe Mason chipped in with 21 points.

The win, which was witnessed by more than 8,000 fans in the 7,800-seat arena, pushed the Braves up to No. 2 in the Associated Press national poll. While a 63-58 loss Feb. 22, 1960 at Houston ultimately cost the Braves a shot at the NCAA Tournament, Bradley cruised through the field at the National Invitation Tournament in Madison Square Garden to claim the second of its four titles.
