UPDATE

Yates Becomes George Mason's All-Time Scoring Leader With 25 Points Against Richmond Feb. 11, 1984

2006 FINAL FOUR - THE FIRST MODERN CINDERELLA

"As college basketball stylistically transformed through many eras and into a new century, a constant rule remained: Mid-major teams did not win four games in the NCAA Tournament.

Until 2006, of course, when a school out of Fairfax, Va., burned down the country's brackets, not to mention sport's precedents. George Mason became one of the best stories in America that year. The Patriots' Final Four run remains one of the most unexpected, groundbreaking achievements in college hoops history.

Before Butler. Before VCU. Before Wichita State. Before all of them, there was George Mason. Those other programs had proud histories and some tournament success in years before their Final Four runs. But Mason, which barely made the field in 2006, truly came out of nowhere when it cracked the dam. The school had three tourney bids in its history -- and had never even won a game.

George Mason. A college named after a man who defied convention and redefined the Constitution when he fathered the Bill of Rights. The Patriots defied convention and redefined the rules of the tournament when they defeated three legendary programs and provided the greatest upset in Elite Eight history." - Matt Norlander, CBSSports.com "The Mason Men" - USBWA Award-winning feature

Did You Know?

- Mason's Final Four run included victories over iconic coaches Tom Izzo (Michigan State), Roy Williams (North Carolina) and Jim Calhoun (UConn). The Patriots also went up against Wichita State's Mark Turgeon and Billy Donovan (Florida, now head coach of the Chicago Bulls).

- The Patriots were one of the last teams in the field of 65. CBS Sports' Billy Packer famously was incredulous at Mason's inclusion after the Patriots fell in the CAA semifinals to Hofstra.

- Conservative estimates valued Mason's Final Four run at $677 million in free advertising for the university. Out-of-state enrollment has grown by more than 30 percent since while the campus has blossomed over the past decade.
