MEDIA INFORMATION

Covering the Crimson

The 2008-09 Harvard Men's Ice Hockey Media Guide is designed to assist you in the coverage of the Crimson and collegiate ice hockey. Harvard welcomes hockey coverage by accredited writers, broadcasters and photographers under the guidelines below. Accredited members of the media can receive press releases via email by contacting Casey Hart in the Office of Athletic Communications at chart@fas.harvard.edu.

Interviews

Interviews with members of the coaching staff and players must be arranged through Casey Hart. Player and coach interviews can be set up for before or after practice. Head coach Ted Donato will be available for telephone interviews Monday-Thursday between 10 a.m. and noon.

Please note that student-athletes' telephone numbers will not be released to the media per Department of Athletics policy. If a telephone interview is necessary, arrangements will be made for the student-athlete to call the requesting outlet. Players will not be available for interviews on gameday until the conclusion of the contest.

Postgame Procedures

At the conclusion of games at the Bright Hockey Center, interviews with the visiting coach and players will be available following a 10-minute cooling-off period. These interviews will be under the direction of the road team's SID outside the visitors' locker room. Coach Donato and requested Harvard players will be available immediately following in the lounge outside the Harvard varsity locker room. Writers on deadline will be given first preference for questions.

On the road, Harvard coaches and players will comply with postgame procedures set by the home team. Please see Casey Hart to request specific players for postgame interviews.

Harvard will maintain a closed locker room policy both at home and on the road.

Media Credentials

All credential requests to cover Harvard men's ice hockey should be received at least 48 hours in advance. Requests should be directed to Casey Hart in the Office of Athletic Communications by mailing him at Murr Center, 65 North Harvard Street, Boston, MA 02163; calling 617-495-7692 or emailing chart@fas.harvard.edu. Harvard reserves the right to accept or reject credential requests for any reason.

Scouts must purchase tickets through the ticket office (877-GO-HARVARD), as they will not be issued press credentials.

Credentials can be picked up at the ticket office at Bright Hockey Center, which opens an hour before each game. The press box is located at the west end of the arena, and a valid press credential is required for entry, both into the arena proper and into the press box. Everyone is reminded that the Bright press box is a working press area, and cheering is strictly prohibited. Cheering or any abuse of media credentials is grounds for removal.

Working press and radio are assigned space in the working press area. Please note that "standing room" passes are not distributed. Scouts are not permitted in the press box. Line charts and notes are available to scouts at the base of the press box stairs.

Shot charts are available to all members of the working press at the conclusion of each period, and out-of-town scores are posted on the rear wall of the press box throughout the game. Complete game packets, which include shot charts and a game summary, are available in the press box no later than 20 minutes after the conclusion of the contest. Phone lines and Internet access are available for filing stories from Bright Hockey Center.

Parking

Members of the media are advised that parking is limited in the vicinity of the Bright Hockey Center. A parking pass can be mailed if the credential request is received five working days prior to the contest.

Radio Broadcasts

Stations wishing to broadcast Harvard men's ice hockey games must make arrangements through Casey Hart in the Office of Athletic Communications no later than a week prior to the game. One phone line will be given to each school free of charge, while each additional broadcast outlet will be charged a $100 line fee per game. One analog phone line is available for each station. A maximum of three credentials will be provided for any broadcast crew.

Photographers/TV Crews

Space is available on the concourse level, and photographers are asked not to block the view of patrons in seats by photographing from the aisles. Arrangements can be made with Casey Hart in the Office of Athletic Communications to shoot from ice level (in the visitor's penalty box) for a maximum of one period.

Broadcast Information

The Crimson on TV

Several Harvard games in the 2008-09 season will be carried live on local or national broadcasts. Check the schedule on page 4 and GoCrimson.com for specific game information.

The Crimson on the Internet

Live streaming video for all Harvard hockey home games and live audio for all away games will be available with a subscription to Crimson Central on GoCrimson.com.

The Crimson on Radio

Harvard student station WHRB-FM (95.3) continues its coverage of Crimson hockey. Games can be heard live in the Boston area. WHRB's broadcast schedule can be found online at www.whrb.org.

Schedule Notes

- Harvard sees its first competition Oct. 24 against Québec-Trois-Rivières in the first of two exhibitions. The Crimson also hosts the U.S. National Under-18 Team for the second straight year Nov. 1.
- The Crimson opens the season against an Ivy League opponent for the 27th time in the last 29 years as it hosts Dartmouth. Harvard's only non-Ivy openers since 1979 came in 1991 at Union (a 7-5 win) and last season at Clarkson (a 3-1 loss).
- Harvard takes on two of the four teams from last season's NCAA Frozen Four back-to-back. The Crimson visits defending national champion Boston College Nov. 28 and could face the Eagles again in the second round of the 57th Beanpot tournament Feb. 9 at TD Banknorth Garden. Harvard hosts NCAA semifinalist North Dakota for a pair of non-league games Dec. 5-6 at Bright Hockey Center.
- Looking for its second straight final berth and 11th overall title, the Crimson opens the Beanpot Feb. 2 against Boston University. Harvard fell to Boston College, 6-5, in overtime in last year's thrilling championship game after topping Northeastern, 3-1, in the opening round.
- The Crimson's other non-conference games come in the Badger Hockey Showdown Dec. 28-29 in Madison, Wis. In the opening round, Harvard takes on Lake Superior State for the first time since the 1994 NCAA Frozen Four. The Crimson will meet host Wisconsin or Alabama-Huntsville in the championship or consolation game.
- The slate includes up to 10 games against six teams that finished last season ranked in the USCHO.com/CSTV national poll. North Dakota was ranked third in the final poll, followed by Boston College at No. 7, No. 11 Clarkson, No. 13 Princeton, No. 15 Boston University and No. 17 Wisconsin.
- Harvard plays back-to-back games against Rensselaer Nov. 4 and 7, Tuesday at Bright Hockey Center and Friday at Houston Field House.
- Following the Beanpot, the Crimson has an imposing six-game stretch to close the regular season. Harvard plays home games against each of its three fellow 2008 ECAC Hockey semifinalists (Colgate, Cornell and Princeton), visits each of the league's last two regular-season champions (St. Lawrence and Clarkson) and hosts a rematch of last year's ECAC quarterfinal series against Quinnipiac.
- Harvard looks to regain the Whitelaw Cup when the Bank of America ECAC Hockey Championship begins March 6. The Crimson has played in six of the last seven title games and is 24-7 in those seven tournaments.
- The Crimson looks to get back to the NCAA Championship for the sixth time in eight seasons. Harvard has made 21 appearances in the tournament.

DREW GILPIN FAUST

President of Harvard University

Drew Gilpin Faust, an eminent historian and the founding dean of the Radcliffe Institute for Advanced Study, became the 28th president of Harvard University July 1, 2007.

Under Faust's leadership, Radcliffe emerged as one of the nation's foremost centers of scholarly and creative enterprise, distinctive for its multidisciplinary focus and the exploration of new knowledge at the crossroads of traditional fields.

Since coming to Harvard, Faust has continued to write and lecture on the history of the American South and the Civil War. Her sixth book, This Republic of Suffering, forthcoming in 2008, considers the impact of the Civil War's enormous death toll on the lives of 19th-century Americans. Her fifth book, Mothers of Invention: Women of the Slaveholding South in the American Civil War (1996), was awarded the Society of American Historians' Francis Parkman Prize, honoring the year's best nonfiction book on an American theme.

As dean of Radcliffe, Faust has been an influential member of Harvard's Academic Advisory Group, which brings together the president, provost and deans to consider matters of university policy. A devoted teacher and mentor, she is currently leading an undergraduate seminar on the Civil War and Reconstruction. In the spring of 2005, she oversaw the work of Harvard's Task Forces on Women Faculty and on Women in Science and Engineering. In 2004, she served on the Allston Task Force on Undergraduate Life.

Before coming to Harvard, Faust served for 25 years on the faculty of the University of Pennsylvania. She was appointed as assistant professor in the Department of American Civilization in 1976, associate professor in 1980 and full professor in 1984. She was named the Stanley Sheerr Professor of History in 1988, then served as the Annenberg Professor of History from 1989 to 2000. She chaired the Department of American Civilization for five years, and was director of the Women's Studies Program from 1996 to 2000. She was twice honored at Penn for her distinguished teaching, in 1982 and 1996.

Raised in Virginia's Shenandoah Valley, Faust went on to attend Concord Academy in Massachusetts. She received her bachelor's degree in history from Bryn Mawr College in 1968 and her master's degree (1971) and doctoral degree (1975) in American civilization from the University of Pennsylvania.

Faust has been active both as a member of nonprofit boards and in a range of professional societies. She is a trustee of the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, the National Humanities Center and Bryn Mawr College, where she chaired the trustee committee on student life from 1998 to 2003. She also serves on the educational advisory board of the Guggenheim Foundation. She was president of the Southern Historical Association in 1999-2000, vice president of the American Historical Association from 1992 to 1996 and an executive board member of both the Organization of American Historians and the Society of American Historians from 1999 to 2002.

Faust has also served on numerous editorial boards and selection committees, including the jury for the Pulitzer Prize in history in 1986, 1990 and 2004. She is an elected member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, the American Philosophical Society and the Society of American Historians.

Faust is married to Charles Rosenberg, one of the nation's leading historians of medicine and science, who is Professor of the History of Science and Ernest E. Monrad Professor in the Social Sciences at Harvard.

Faust and Rosenberg live in Cambridge. They have two daughters, Jessica Rosenberg, a 2004 graduate of Harvard, and Leah Rosenberg, Faust's stepdaughter, a scholar of Caribbean literature.

Nichols Family Director of Athletics

Robert L. Scalise was introduced as Harvard's Nichols Family Director of Athletics in July 2001 after five years as associate dean and senior executive officer of the Harvard Business School.

Scalise, the seventh person to hold the director of athletics post at Harvard, oversees the nation's largest Division I athletics program with 41 varsity sports, two dozen junior varsity teams, more than 1,500 intercollegiate athletes and a broad array of wellness and recreation programs and facilities.

In just six years as director of athletics, Scalise has seen Harvard win nine national team championships and 43 Ivy League titles. The 2007-08 season saw Harvard win five Ivy League crowns while the women's hockey team achieved a number-one national ranking for eight weeks.

Under Scalise, Harvard has played host to several high-level NCAA tournaments including the 2006 women's basketball Final Four at the TD Banknorth Garden and the 2008 men's lacrosse championships at Gillette Stadium. Harvard will again play host to the lacrosse championships this coming spring.

Along with his business background, Scalise has extensive ties to Ivy League athletics as an All-America lacrosse player at Brown and later as head coach of the Harvard men's lacrosse and women's soccer programs.

A 1971 graduate of Brown, Scalise was selected three times to the All-Ivy League lacrosse team and twice named All-America and All-New England. He led the nation in scoring (47 goals) as a junior, then co-captained the squad in 1971 when he set a New England record by scoring 11 times against Connecticut while helping the Bears advance to the inaugural NCAA men's lacrosse tournament.

As a senior, Scalise was also the recipient of the Brown University Sportsmanship Award and the Sports Illustrated Award of Merit, and was inducted into the Brown Hall of Fame in 1991. He entered the coaching ranks at Brown in the fall of 1971 as an assistant for the men's soccer and lacrosse teams.

Scalise was just 24 years old when he was named head coach of Harvard's men's lacrosse team in 1974. He led the Crimson to the 1980 Ivy League championship — the program's first league title in nearly two decades — and an accompanying NCAA tournament bid. He coached 17 All-America selections and completed his tenure in 1987 with a 98-79 overall record.

Scalise was also the first coach of Harvard's women's soccer program, which began varsity play in 1977. He led that team to Ivy League crowns in 1978, 1979 and 1981, and NCAA tournament berths in 1982 and 1984. In 1985, Scalise became the nation's first women's collegiate soccer coach to amass 100 victories. He finished with a 113-38-11 overall record.

Scalise left coaching in 1987 to enroll in the Harvard Business School, where in 1989 he was awarded a Master in Business Administration. Later that year, he became director of MBA placement services, managing processes and products serving the Business School community. He held that post until 1992, when he accepted a position at Bain & Company to become director of recruiting, career development and alumni relations. While there, he developed strategic and operational initiatives to build people assets for the firm, and prepared and managed an operating budget of approximately $4 million. Scalise returned to the Business School in 1995 as its executive director of MBA program administration before assuming his current post in the department of athletics.

The 55-year-old Scalise was born in New York City and graduated from Uniondale (N.Y.) High School in 1967. He is married to Maura Costin Scalise '80, an All-Ivy swimmer at Harvard who coached the Crimson women's swimming and diving team to Ivy League and national prominence during her tenure.

The Scalise family resides in Nahant, Mass., and includes four children: Michael (age 19), Mark (17), Matthew (14) and Rosemary (10).

WELCOME TO HARVARD

Since its founding days more than 360 years ago, Harvard has stood as a leader in all aspects of higher education

A Broad Curriculum

At the foundation of Harvard's lofty reputation is a liberal arts curriculum taught by some of the world's great scholars. Nobel laureates and Pulitzer Prize-winning authors teach introductory and Core courses, and all faculty are readily available for students.

Now equally well-known for its professional schools, Harvard originally received recognition as the country's first and finest undergraduate institution. It has long been committed to reforming college curricula and, in fact, the whole elective system began here over a century ago. Today, Harvard maintains its strong commitment to the undergraduate with one of the broadest programs in existence. Students may concentrate in any of 44 fields, including Afro-American studies, computer and environmental sciences, government, classics, and folklore and mythology. The majority of courses offered at Harvard have fewer than 20 students, and most departments feature a "tutorial" system of teaching and learning. Tutorials are directed study courses in a student's field of concentration, taught either in small groups or individually.

Harvard has a graduation rate of over 97 percent, and over 70 percent of students graduate with honors. Nine out of 10 undergraduates who apply succeed in gaining admission to a medical school, with similar rates for other graduate schools.

Contributing to these figures are first-class facilities such as a 12 million-volume library that is the largest university library in the world, numerous art and cultural museums, and 25 science/laboratory centers.

The Harvard Student

While Harvard has long been a leader among universities, it is equally committed to developing leaders among people. Thus, its enrollment is not comprised of 6,700 "geniuses." Instead, the University prides itself on attracting the best all-around young individuals—those with the energy, innovation and creativity to enliven a classroom.

Some students show unusual academic promise through experiences or achievements in study or research. Others are more "well-rounded" and have contributed in many different ways to the lives of their schools or communities. Still others could be called "well-lopsided," with demonstrated excellence in one particular endeavor. And many students bring perspectives formed by unusual personal circumstances or experiences.

The end result is an undergraduate population drawn from every state and many foreign countries, one that brings together a grand diversity of social, ethnic and economic backgrounds.

Student Life

Both academically and residentially, Harvard College is fully coeducational. The centers of campus life are the residential houses. The house system, established in 1930, provides a small college atmosphere within the university.

Each house has several faculty members and a staff of residential tutors associated with it, as well as dormitories, dining halls, libraries, intramural athletic teams and a number of social events. There are 12 residential houses, while a 13th unit, Dudley House, provides a parallel life for the students who live off-campus.

All freshmen live in or next to Harvard Yard. "The Yard" is the center of the university, and the hub of Harvard's activity. Resident adult advisers help students explore the academic and non-academic opportunities of their first year. A wide range of programs are designed especially for first-year students—in the arts, intramural athletics and Freshman Seminars.

Students run nearly 200 organizations and programs on campus. Last year, 80 plays and musicals were produced and directed by students. There are men's, women's and mixed voiced choruses, plus over half a dozen a cappella groups. Two major orchestras, smaller ensembles, chamber groups and rock bands also thrive. There are two student newspapers and numerous political, feminist, ethnic, cultural and religious journals. A majority of students participate in community service by the time of their graduation, both through the Phillips Brooks House Association and the House and Neighborhood Development (HAND) program.

Faculty

Harvard's faculty is large, diverse, and by any measure, an accomplished group of women and men.

Each faculty member is both a noted teacher and scholar, for first-rate scholarship is an essential ingredient of great teaching. Harvard students learn in classrooms and labs from professors who are leading authorities in their fields. In this academic community, all members of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences, including the most prominent scholars, expect to teach undergraduates as well as graduate students.

Faculty members also instruct students outside the classroom. In addition to professors' weekly office hours, students often spend time with their professors before or after class. There are also many occasions when professors take meals in Harvard's residential dining halls, attend gatherings in the residences of House Masters, who are themselves senior faculty members, and participate in other programs and special events.

Over the course of a year, hundreds of students work closely with faculty members on their own or their professors' research. The opportunities for formal and informal relationships with Harvard faculty are plentiful and rewarding, resulting in lifelong friendships as well as professional collaborations that can enrich students' lives and careers.

Facilities

Beyond the mentorship of a faculty actively involved in undergraduate life, Harvard students have access to other extraordinary academic resources.

By a wide margin, Harvard's library system, with about 100 central and auxiliary collections and nearly 14 million volumes, is the world's largest university library. More than two dozen university buildings are used exclusively for scientific research, including laboratories for astronomy; biology; biochemistry; chemistry; computer science; electrical; computer, and systems, and mechanical engineering, geology, as well as physics and applied physics.

Harvard's computing facilities are likewise extensive and state-of-the-art. A fiber-optic data network links labs, libraries and faculty and administrative offices. Students can connect to Harvard's high-speed data network, the library's online catalog, the Internet and the rest of the world from ethernet connections in their rooms.

Finally, the university's many museums include one of the world's most distinguished university art collections and a natural history museum whose scope and importance make it similarly renowned.

The Undergraduate Program

Harvard offers students everything necessary for a liberal education in virtually every imaginable field.

The sheer number of curricular choices — the catalog includes about 3,500 courses — opens doors for the exploration of widely disparate fields and also for concentration in special areas of interest.

Harvard's philosophy has long been that an undergraduate education ought to have structure and coherence while allowing for maximum flexibility and individual choice.

Each student takes four courses in both the fall and spring semesters. Harvard students spend, on average, 12 hours per week in class and enjoy wide latitude in setting priorities for study and free time.

Course choices are made in close consultation with an academic adviser over a week-long shopping period at the start of both semesters. Over the four-year undergraduate program, each student will fulfill the requirements of a field of concentration (on average, half of a student's total coursework) and the Core Curriculum (about one-quarter of the plan of study).

The remaining quarter of a student's coursework is chosen freely from courses offered throughout the university. These three components of the undergraduate program together fulfill the fundamental aims of a liberal arts education.

There is no firm distinction in the Faculty of Arts and Sciences between undergraduate and graduate courses. Students may progress in the curriculum as rapidly as their preparation permits and may enroll in graduate-level courses in the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences.

Most of Harvard's 10 graduate schools allow students to cross-register and to participate in special programs. A reciprocal arrangement with MIT, our Cambridge neighbor, also permits Harvard students to cross-register in courses offered there.

While some of Harvard's most popular courses are taught in grand lecture halls to accommodate significant student interest, the majority of courses are taught in more intimate settings of 20 or fewer students.

assets are its students. Although they come from many different places and backgrounds and have a striking variety of talents, ambitions and convictions, all possess a passion for learning.

That energy can be felt in and out of the classroom. At least as much learning occurs in dorm rooms and dining halls as in labs and course lectures. Because undergraduate enrollment is comparatively small, there are many opportunities to get to know fellow students well. Late night talks and dinner table debates are very much part of the daily experience of the women and men at Harvard College.

Postgraduate Plans

Harvard is committed to providing whatever guidance or assistance students may need. Given the university's extraordinary resources, students' needs are met swiftly and fully.

Perhaps as a result, Harvard's graduation rate is 97 percent, among the very highest in the nation. Similarly high percentages of graduating seniors and alumni express their satisfaction by stating in surveys that they would attend Harvard if they had to choose a college again.

Although Harvard's academic programs are not "preprofessional" in the sense that they provide vocational training, Harvard students are very well prepared for admission to professional schools (business, law and medicine) and graduate programs. Our students enjoy an extraordinarily high rate of admission to graduate and professional schools of their choice. And Harvard College is almost always the best-represented undergraduate institution at Harvard's graduate schools.

While some students select fields of concentration commonly associated with certain careers, many discover they can study in areas of intellectual rather than professional interest and still be superb candidates for jobs and graduate schools.

At Harvard, students can concentrate in history and go to medical school, or study engineering and earn a graduate degree in law.

Admission and Financial Aid

There is no formula for gaining admission to Harvard. Academic accomplishment in high school is important, but the Admissions Committee also considers many other criteria such as community involvement, extracurricular activities and work experience. Last year's freshman class of 1,650 was culled from an applicant pool of 20,972.

Strength of character, ability to overcome adversity, and other personal qualities often play a part in admissions decisions.

Grades and test scores are relied on to help assess academic promise, but they are by no means relied on exclusively. Evidence that you are willing and able to take on academic challenges or that you possess strengths not fully revealed in objective information is also of interest to the Admissions Committee.

Believing that cost should not play a primary role in the selection of a college, Harvard has worked for many decades to attract students from all economic backgrounds.

Our faculty is committed to admissions and financial aid policies that help us attract a truly diverse student body. We make admissions decisions without regard to a student's financial circumstances or citizenship, and we meet the full financial need of each student who qualifies for aid.

The Committee on Financial Aid determines aid packages — in the form of scholarships, loans, and term-time jobs — based solely on need using a full range of family income and asset information.

Over the past several years, Harvard has launched two major financial aid initiatives to benefit all students. As a result, students with financial need will now face less educational debt on graduation and will have more time to concentrate on academic and extracurricular opportunities.

These initiatives have featured significant annual increases in the undergraduate schoarship budget, reduced loan and term-time job obligations, and an outside award policy which allows students to use the full amount of their outside awards to reduce loans.

Together, with the College's longstanding commitment to need-blind admissions and need-based aid, these plans will continue to keep a Harvard education accessible to students from all economic backgrounds.

Student Housing

Harvard guarantees every student College housing for four years, and nearly all students choose to live on campus for their full undergraduate careers.

All 1,650 first-year students live in or adjacent to Harvard Yard. The Freshman Dean's Office assigns roommates carefully among 17 freshman dorms. Numerous proctors (adult residential advisors) and deans live among first-year students to help them explore Harvard's broad academic and extracurricular opportunities.

One highlight of freshman year is dining in Annenberg Hall, where all first years gather to eat. Each house has several faculty members and a staff of residential tutors associated with it, as well as dormitories, dining halls, libraries, intramural athletic teams and social events.

As sophomores, students move from the Yard to one of the 12 Houses — small residential communities of 330 to 450 students. Each House has its own dining hall, library, common rooms, rehearsal spaces and other resources.

Houses also provide students with a wide range of extracurricular programs. A senior faculty member serves each House as a Master. Masters make each House a home by hosting frequent open houses in their private residences and by selecting an extensive staff of both resident and nonresident tutors and faculty fellows. Together, Masters and House staff set the tone for the House in its activities and in its functioning as a close-knit community within the context of a larger college and university

Life Outside the Classroom

Extracurricular opportunities at Harvard are virtually unlimited. There are more than 300 official student organizations at the College, and the number and nature of organizations change constantly as students' interests evolve.

Casual beginners to accomplished masters find opportunities at all levels. You do not have to study music in order to play in a orchestra, nor must you have had experience in drama or journalism to act in a play or write for a student publication.

College facilities include concert halls, theaters with large stages and others with more intimate surroundings, dance studios, rehearsal spaces and practice rooms. Creative students may enjoy the visual arts as a satisfying hobby or a serious academic pursuit.

There are plenty of opportunities at Harvard to become a journalist, poet, disc jockey, or editor. Several campus newspapers have a wide readership, and there are political, academic, and literary journals to complement the humor magazines, yearbook, and radio stations.

Cultural and Ethnic Initiatives

There are more than 50 cultural, ethnic, and international student organizations at Harvard, as well as communities representing nearly every major religion.

The Harvard Foundation for Intercultural and Race Relations sponsors many activities throughout the year that celebrate the ethnic and cultural diversity at Harvard. One of the most anticipated events is Cultural Rhythms, a festival that highlights the talents of Harvard students and offers ethnic foods from around the world. The "Cultural Artist of the Year," emcees the event, and past hosts have included Queen Latifah, Jackie Chan, Andy Garcia, and Halle Berry.

Cambridge, Boston, and New England

Cambridge combines the attractions of a cosmopolitan city with the charm of a New England town. Organized around traditional town greens, tree-lined squares, and the grassy banks of the Charles River, Cambridge is one of metropolitan Boston's vital urban centers.

One-of-a-kind shops, international restaurants, bookstores, street cafés, and cavernous music stores occupy the streets surrounding the College. Sporting events, theater concerts, and colorful street performers also draw neighbors and visitors to Harvard Square.

While Boston is full of history and colonial charm, with its cobblestone streets and colonial church spires, it is also a modern city whose liveliness is apparent in its ranging architectural styles, thriving industries, diverse cultures, and important arts centers.

Boston Harbor, famous for its Revolutionary War "tea party," is home to many new and busy waterfront restaurants and shops. The waterfront also boasts a world-renowned aquarium, science museum, and numerous opportunities to walks through historic districts or cruises to its many islands and recreational areas.

Within easy reach of Boston and Cambridge are the beaches of the Atlantic, cozy seaside villages from Cape Cod to Maine, ski slopes, forests, and historical sites recalling America's past.

Women's ice hockey standout Sarah Vaillancourt was one of 14 Harvard athletes to earn All-America status in 2007-08. She also received the Patty Kazmaier Memorial Award as the nation's top player.

Leadership and Competitive Excellence in Division I Athletics

In parallel to Harvard's educational opportunities, the university provides the student-athlete with the infrastructure and facilities to excel at the highest competitive level.

A pioneer of intercollegiate athletics — Harvard and Yale rowed in the nation's first college sporting event in 1852 — Harvard offers 41 varsity sports and has nearly than 1,500 student-athletes, more than any other Division I school.

The position given athletics within the University framework is both idealistic and realistic. Harvard is a member of the Ivy League, along with Brown, Columbia, Cornell, Dartmouth, Penn, Princeton and Yale. Under the League's founding document, the Presidents' Agreement of 1954, there are no athletic scholarships. Financial aid to student-athletes — as with all students — is based solely on need.

This structure has allowed Harvard teams to succeed both within the Ivy League and on a national level. Harvard has won a total of 138 national collegiate championships in 18 different sports, beginning with the men's track and field title of 1880 and extending to the 2006 NCAA crown in fencing.

Alumni of Harvard's athletics programs have gone on to succeed in Major League Baseball, the National Football League, the National Hockey League, the National Basketball Association, Major League Soccer and professional tennis tours (WTP, ATP). Still more compete in the Olympic Games, while countless others move on to ownership and management roles in amateur and professional athletics.

2007-08 In Review

Harvard continued to remain at the forefront of Division I athletics in a 2007-08 season that saw a return to glory for some teams, while others continued their long legacies of success.

Five Harvard teams won Ivy League championships and qualified for NCAA tournament competition, while seven others either qualified individuals or received at-large invitations to their respective NCAA fields. Fourteen Harvard teams finished the season ranked among the national top 25 in their respective sports.

Women's lightweight crew finished sixth in its national championship competition, and the heavyweights, chosen to compete in the NCAA championships for the 11th time in 12 years, ran away with the first varsity eight petite final to finish ninth overall.

The fall season saw both Harvard soccer teams grab national attention, as the men were ranked as high as sixth nationally and the women had one of the nation's best turnarounds of the year. The men, powered by a pair of All-Americans, earned a tie against then-defending national champion UC Santa Barbara and hosted a first-round game in the NCAA tournament. The women, by winning seven more games than they did in 2006, had the nation's fifth-best improvement.

Ranked 20th nationally by year's end, the football team capped a stirring season with a 37-6 drubbing of previously unbeaten Yale on the road to complete a sweep of the Ivy League and claim its 12th conference title.

The story of the winter was the Crimson women's ice hockey team. Harvard won its first 11 games before rattling off 21 straight victories to bring a 32-1 record and an eight-week standing as the nation's No. 1 team into the Frozen Four, where it bowed to Wisconsin in the national semifinals.

The men's team, meanwhile, advanced to the final of the ECAC Hockey Championship and was ranked 16th nationally at year's end.

More highlights were delivered by the men's swimming and diving team, which went undefeated in dual meets and placed itself among the nation's best. Senior Geoff Rathgeber powered the team, graduating as a 21-time Ivy League champion in 10 events as well as a six-time All-America honoree.

The spring featured a return to championship form by the Crimson men's tennis team, which carved its way to an undefeated Ivy season and enjoyed considerable success against a schedule laden with national powers.

There were also plenty of highlights for those teams that didn't win Ivy titles. The men's and women's fencing teams remained ranked in the top 10 all year and finished sixth at the combined NCAA Championships. Meanwhile, the women's track and field program continued its steady rise by placing fourth at both the indoor and outdoor Heptagonals.

Individually, Sarah Vaillancourt was one of 14 Harvard athletes to earn All-America status in 2007-08. She also received the Patty Kazmaier Memorial Award as the nation's top collegiate women's hockey player, the sixth time a Harvard player has earned the honor in the 11-year history of the award.

Vaillancourt and wrestling's J.P. O'Connor were named Ivy League players of the year, while coed sailing's Kyle Kovacs was the NEISA Sailor of the Year. Katherine Sheeleigh (women's soccer), June Tiong (women's squash) and Jess Halpern (women's lacrosse) were league rookies of the year, while ice hockey goalies Kyle Richter (men) and Christina Kessler (women) ruled the creases as ECAC goaltenders of the year.

An astounding 110 athletes were named to all-academic teams in 2007-08. For their prowess in the classroom and in competition, 16 Crimson student-athletes were recognized as ESPN The Magazine Academic All-District selections. Emerging from the district level were football's Andrew Berry and Noah Van Niel, who earned spots on the publication's Academic All-America team.

ATHLETIC FACILITIES

Harvard supports its varsity student-athletes with a wide range of playing, practice, training and strength and conditioning facilities.

The majority of the athletic facilities are located in the Soldiers Field complex, located on the Boston side of the Charles River, a short walk from most of the Houses. The facilities range from the oldest — and according to many, the finest — college football stadium in the nation to a relatively new indoor squash and tennis center.

Beren Tennis Center

The Beren Tennis Center is the outdoor home of Harvard's men's and women's tennis programs. Following the facility's renovation in 2000, the Beren Center is among the finest outdoor facilities in college athletics.

The center boasts 18 courts, including six that feature stadium seating, a two-tiered pavilion with locker rooms, a media center, offices and court-viewing areas.

The Beren Center is a perennial site for NCAA tournament competition, including the first two rounds of both the men's and women's tournaments in 2004 and the women's tournament in 2005.

The facility is named for Robert M. Beren '47 MBA '50, who was instrumental in both the creation of the center in 1983 and its recent renovation.

Blodgett Pool

Blodgett Pool was a gift of the late John W. Blodgett, Jr. '23. Regarded among the finest collegiate swimming facilities in the nation, it serves as the home of Harvard's varsity swimming and diving and water polo teams.

The pool has permanent spectator seating for 1,200, and there is room on the pool deck to accommodate 500 swimmers, coaches and officials.

Bright Hockey Center

The Alexander H. Bright Hockey Center has been home of the Crimson men's and women's hockey programs since 1979. Its pro-style locker rooms were completely renovated in 2007.

Named for former Harvard hockey player Alec Bright '19, the facility seats 2,800 people, with additional space for some 500 standees. The skating surface is 204 feet long by 87 feet wide.

Dillon Field House

Dillon Field House is one of Harvard's most recognized buildings. It has served the Harvard Athletics community for more than 70 years.

The facility houses Harvard's varsity equipment room and sports medicine center as well as locker rooms and offices for a number of men's teams, including football and men's ice hockey.

The second floor of the facility features the Dillon Lounge, a multipurpose function room that overlooks the athletic quad.

Gordon Indoor Track & Tennis Center

The track is a six-lane banked oval with an adjacent 80-yard sprint straight. Inside the track are two long and triple jump pits, a pole vault runway, and multiple high jump aprons.

Adjacent to the oval are two throwing circles and a weightlifting cage.

Gordon Track has recently been the site of both the Heptagonal Championships as well as the ECAC and IC4A Championships.

Harvard Stadium

The centerpiece of Harvard's outstanding athletic facilities is Harvard Stadium, which has stood as a Boston landmark for more than a century.

Harvard Stadium was constructed in 1903 and hosted its first game Nov. 14 of that year. Since then, the Stadium has hosted more than 600 Harvard football games as well as hundreds of other athletic and non-athletic events, including Olympic soccer, NFL football, rock concerts and political rallies.

The Stadium is a horseshoe containing architectural elements of a Greek stadium and Roman circus and is considered an engineering marvel. It was the world's first massive reinforced concrete structure and the first large permanent arena for American college athletics.

With a seating capacity of 30,323, Harvard Stadium is praised for its outstanding sightlines.

The Stadium was upgraded in 2006 with the addition of a FieldTurf playing surface, permanent lighting and a removable all-weather bubble which allows for use of the facility throughout the calendar year.

Jordan Field

One of Harvard's newest intercollegiate facilities, Jordan Field was built in 2000 and serves as the home of Harvard's field hockey and men's and women's lacrosse teams.

The facility was given by Gerald Jordan '61, a former Crimson football player.

The synthetic turf playing surface allows for an inclement weather practice option for Harvard's other varsity programs. The turf was completely replaced for the 2006-07 academic year.

Jordan Field has a permanent seating capacity of 900, with room for portable bleachers as well. A press box can accommodate up to 12 working media members.

Lavietes Pavilion

The Ray Lavietes '36 Pavilion at the Briggs Athletic Center is the home of Harvard's men's and women's basketball programs. It was dedicated solely for basketball in 1982.

The seating capacity of Lavietes Pavilion is 2,050. The facility was completely refurbished prior to the 1995-96 season, and more improvements and amenities were added for the 2002-03 basketball season.

Malkin Athletic Center

Located on the Cambridge side of the Charles River, just outside of Harvard Square, the Malkin Athletic Center is the home of Harvard's varsity volleyball, wrestling and fencing teams.

The main gymnasium can accommodate 1,400 spectators for volleyball and wrestling, while the fencing programs compete in a facility that is considered one of the best in the world.

Built in 1930 and renovated in 1985, 2004 and again in 2008, funding for the initial improvements came from Peter L. Malkin '55.

McCurdy Track

The McCurdy Outdoor Track & Field, which was completed in 1996, provides Harvard's varsity athletes with a magnificent complement to the Gordon Indoor Track.

Enclosed by a wind screen, the facility includes eight running lanes which encompass double runways for long and triple jumps, throwing circles for the shot, discus and hammer, a javelin runway and a multidirectional high jump apron.

Newell Boathouse

The elder statesman among Charles River boathouses, Newell Boathouse has maintained its charm, beauty and practicality for more than a century.

The home of Harvard's renowned men's rowing programs, Newell was built in 1900 and named for Crimson rower and football star Marshall Newell 1894. It was a gift of the Harvard Club of New York.

The facility contains two indoor rowing tanks and modern practice equipment, a video room, space to house all the crews' shells, a workshop, meeting rooms and locker facilities.

Murr Center

The Murr Center opened in May 1998 and serves as the home of Harvard's state-of-the-art indoor squash and tennis facilities.

The Murr Center services the entire intercollegiate athletics program. It is a centrally located home for the department's administration and also houses a newly revamped strength and conditioning facility with a golf simulator that serves as an indoor training ground for the Crimson's golf programs.

The showpiece of the Murr Center is the Lee Family Hall of Athletic History, which features a timeline of Harvard's long and rich athletic tradition with free-standing displays of trophies and memorabilia of the nation's oldest college athletics program.

O'Donnell Field

Set behind historic Harvard Stadium, O'Donnell Field is as fine a playing facility as exists in New England. Harvard has played baseball on the site since 1898.

The field is named for Joseph J. O'Donnell '67, MBA '71, a longtime supporter of Harvard baseball who also played a large role in implementing the Harvard Stadium bubble..

O'Donnell Field was renovated in the summer of 2004 with new dugouts and a new backstop. The facility seats 1,600 spectators.

Ohiri Field

Ohiri Field is the home of Harvard's prominent men's and women's soccer teams. The facility is named for Chris Ohiri '64, a soccer and track standout who succumbed to cancer while attending classes at Harvard Business School.

The Ohiri Field complex consists of two separate 120-yard by 75-yard natural grass fields. One pitch is used as the game field, while the other serves as a practice site.

Meticulously maintained and groomed for a high level of play, Ohiri Field has been host to a number of NCAA tournament matches in both men's and women's soccer.

Sailing Center

Located near the lower basin of the Charles River on Memorial Drive, Harvard's sailing center supports the Crimson's coed and women's varsity sailing teams.

The center features the unique hanging boat storage system that enables solo launchings, a large meeting facility, an instruction room and a fleet maintenance shop.

Soldiers Field

Soldiers Field has been the home of Harvard's softball program since its inception in 1981.

Located in the shadow of Harvard Stadium, the field has undergone several renovations in recent years, making it one of the finest facilities in New England.

The most recent renovation was completed when spacious new dugouts were added for the 2006 spring season.

Weld Boathouse

Weld Boathouse, which serves as the home of Radcliffe's varsity crews, was donated and built by the George Walker Weld family in 1906. It is an architectural highlight of Harvard and part of the rowing legacy of the Charles River.

Weld also hosts Harvard's recreational sculling and intramural house crew programs. It is located just a short walk from campus and serves as an integral part of the University's landscape.

BRIGHT HOCKEY CENTER

While hockey at Harvard began 109 years ago at Franklin Park in Boston, the Crimson has called the Alexander H. Bright Hockey Center home since 1979.

The Bright Hockey Center was dedicated November 19, 1979, when the Crimson hosted the 1980 U.S. Olympic Team. More than 3,000 spectators turned out for the opening of Harvard's third new athletic facility in three years.

From 1956 to 1978, Harvard played its hockey games at the Donald C. Watson Rink, a facility loved by hockey players for its good, hard ice but cursed by many spectators for its cold temperatures. Harvard made plans for expansion of facilities in the early 1970s with a brand new ice rink to be constructed at Soldiers Field. Costs soared, however, and the project had to be revised. The new rink, estimated to cost somewhere around $5 million, would not be built after all. Watson would instead be renovated.

While Harvard men's and women's teams played out of local rinks in 1978-79, the "renovation" of Watson Rink took place. Watson's concrete walls were knocked down and rebuilt 10 feet out in each direction. The wooden ceiling of Watson remained, but a new roof topped it.

Named after former Harvard hockey player Alec Bright '19, the Bright Center seats nearly 2,800 people, up more than 800 from Watson's capacity. There is additional space for some 500 standees. Longtime Harvard coach Bill Cleary '56 chose to lengthen the playing surface by five feet to emphasize the skating game he favored. The skating surface is now 204 feet by 87 feet.

The Bright ice has been more than friendly to Crimson skaters through the years. During one stretch from 1985-87, Harvard put together a home-ice winning streak of 29 games. Since Bright opened, the Crimson boasts an impressive home record of 266-108-26 (.698), including unbeaten marks in 1985-86, 1988-89 and 1993-94. The March 16 finale of the 2008 ECAC quarterfinal series against Quinnipiac was the 400th Harvard has played at Bright.

Four locker rooms exist beneath the stands, one each for the men's varsity, women's varsity, men's junior varsity and opposing teams. These carpeted rooms are supplemented by rooms for officials, coaches and equipment storage. The equipment room, renovated in summer 2008, has a stick room with a humidity monitor to prevent sticks from drying out.

In the arena proper, the walls paint a pictoral history of the more than 100 years of the Crimson's proud hockey tradition. In addition to photos of each Harvard team dating back to the inception of both the men's and women's programs, there are photos of each of Harvard's All-America hockey players and a trophy case proudly displaying tournament trophies. Hanging from the ceiling at the west end of the arena is perhaps the most prominent statement in the entire building: side-by-side banners commemorating the men's 1989 national championship and the women's 1999 AWCHA national championship.

Other reminders include banners that hang from the rafters depicting Harvard insignias and banners representing the success that the men's and women's hockey programs have enjoyed over the years: league titles, Beanpot crowns and NCAA tournament appearances. Hanging at the opposite end of the arena is a Crimson "4" – the retired number of former Crimson skater, hockey coach and director of athletics Bill Cleary. The number, retired in 2001, is the only number from any of Harvard's 41 varsity sports to be taken out of circulation.

This season, Bright becomes the first ECAC Hockey arena with a video board. The four-screened scoreboard will hang over center ice to provide video and instant replays.

Several other improvements have been made at Bright in recent seasons, including a complete renovation of the locker rooms and installation of a new, energy-efficient lighting system before last season. A new public address and sound system was installed in 2003. New dasher boards, seamless GlassFlex and protective end netting were added a year earlier.

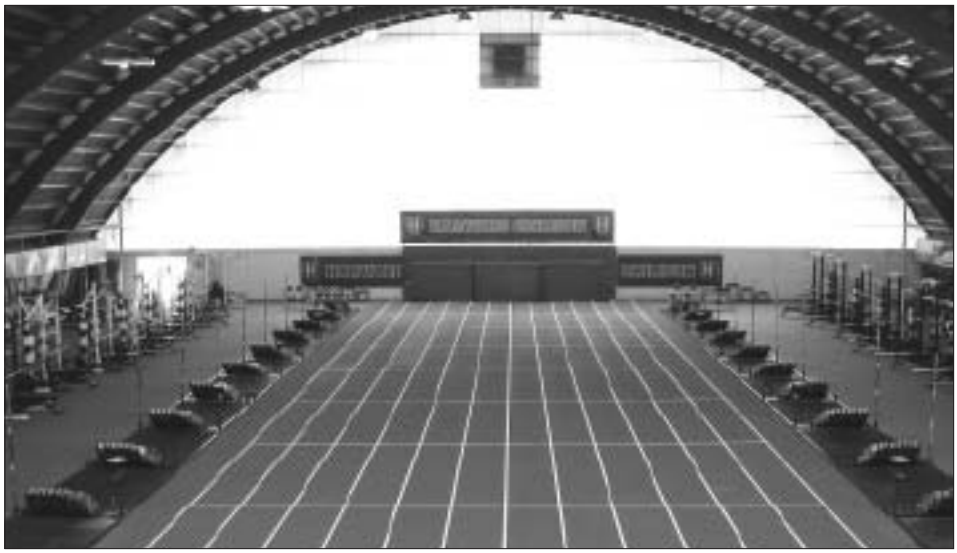
The Crimson's varsity locker room was renovated in summer 2007. Custom-crafted Canadian maple wood lockers; new ceiling, lighting and plumbing fixtures; carpeting; rubber flooring and new audio and video technologies are some of the improved features of the new locker room.

PALMER DIXON STRENGTH AND CONDITIONING CENTER

The renovation of the Palmer Dixon Strength and Conditioning Center was completed in March 2007, transforming the facility from an indoor athletics practice space to one of the premier strength and conditioning facilities in the country. The 24,000-square-foot building features a wide variety of training equipment as well as a 12-lane, 40-yard track for speed and agility training.

The center was further renovated in summer 2008, with the the installation of a 14-lane sprint track in the center of the facility. The state-of-the-art track surface took the place of a previously open Astroturf area and gives student-athletes an ideal location to work on explosive training and sprints.

A detailed list of the center's features and description of the Harvard strength and conditioning program is on page 32.



A TIMELINE OF TRADITION

It began on a local pond a short time before the war — the Spanish-American War. Today it is one of the proudest programs in a sport that grows with every season. Since the beginning, Harvard has been a leader in the evolution of the game. Here is a look at some memorable events in Crimson hockey history.

January 19, 1898 — Harvard plays its first college hockey game when Brown defeats the Crimson on Boston's Franklin Field. The rivalry is the oldest continuous hockey series in the country.

One of the most important ice hockey dates of the season was filled yesterday afternoon at Franklin field, the Harvard and Brown varsity teams meeting in the first of a series of games. Harvard has practiced faithfully during the past few weeks for this and future inter-collegiate matches, but yesterday the Providence players outclassed their Cambridge rivals, and during the 40 minutes' play scored six goals, while the crimson was unsuccessful in driving the rubber puck through Brown's de-

February 26, 1900 — Harvard's hockey team meets Yale for the first time. The Elis win the black-tie affair, 5-4, at the St. Nicholas Rink in New York, but the Crimson answers back in the rematch the following winter, 4-0.

January 10, 1903 — A 4-3 victory over MIT starts the Harvard men's ice hockey team on a 22-game win streak that would span nearly six seasons. The Crimson defeats Yale eight straight times during the streak.

December 1904 — Two ice hockey rinks are constructed inside Harvard Stadium, which was built the previous year. The team first played on rinks on Holmes Field, located behind the Law School. In 1901, a wooden rink was constructed on Soldiers Field, but was deemed inadequate and the team moved back to Holmes Field the following year. Constructing these two rinks inside the Stadium allowed for the consideration of spectators — some old bleachers were moved up to the side of the rink, and admission was charged for some of the more important games.

Spring 1910 — George Peabody Gardner '10 becomes the first Harvard man to be awarded 11 varsity letters. He receives three minor letters in tennis, three major letters each in hockey and track, one major letter in baseball, and a major H in lawn tennis for winning the Intercollegiate Singles title in 1907.

Winter 1911 — Harvard plays Princeton and Yale for the first time on what could be considered "home grounds" — the Boston Arena.

March 14, 1913 — The athletic committee votes to make ice hockey a major sport.

March 1917 — Alfred Winsor, Harvard's first head coach, steps down. He would again share coaching duties in 1921-22, and remains the all-time leader in winning percentage at a Division I school. He won 76.1 percent of his games (86-27) over 13 seasons, including 1921-22.

1918 — The formal ice hockey program is suspended due to World War I. The team would resume play in 1919, but go back to playing at outdoor rinks and at the Pavilion Rink across from MIT, as the Boston Arena burned down in the fall of 1918. The Arena would be rebuilt and reopen in the fall of 1921.

March 3, 1923 — Harvard head coach William H. Claflin and multi-sport letterman George Owen '23 change the game of hockey forever with their innovation of substituting entire forward lines instead of individuals. The revolutionary tactic, later to become known as the shift change, helps Harvard defeat Yale, 2-1, in overtime.

Alfred Winsor '02, the first coach

Winter 1928 — John Chase '28 completes his Harvard hockey career with a combined 24-6-2 varsity record, including six straight wins against archrival Yale. Chase would go on to captain the 1932 U.S. Olympic Team and coach Harvard from 1942 until 1950.

March 12, 1930 — Harvard and Yale complete a three-game series with a 2-2 tie at the Boston Garden, allowing the storied rivals to share the intercollegiate title. A record crowd of more than 14,000 attends the game, which was called at midnight due to the "Blue Laws." Harvard ends the season with an 11-4-1 overall record.

March 7, 1936 — Harvard records an 11-0 win over Yale, clinching the "Ivy League" title. While the formal Council of Ivy Group Presidents agreement — the formal formation of the league

Rinks were constructed inside Harvard Stadium in the early 1900s.

— didn't go into effect until the 1955-56 season, its beginning is traced back to the creation of Quadrangular League in 1933-34 (Harvard, Yale, Princeton and Dartmouth). The addition of Army in 1946-47 would make the Pentagonal League. Brown would replace Army in 1948-49. Cornell would join the group in 1958, with Penn becoming a member from 1967 until dropping its hockey program in 1978. Harvard has won 21 official and four unofficial Ivy League titles in all.

February 22, 1937 — The Crimson fails to claim the International Trophy with a 7-2 loss to McGill. This loss snaps a 19-game winning streak (going back to the previous season) and is the lone blemish in a 15-1 campaign.

Fall 1938 — Joseph Stubbs '20 steps down as head coach after recording a 95-43-6 record in 11 seasons. Stubbs led the team to four seasons of double-digit wins, including a career-best 15-1 mark in 1936-37.

March 10, 1943 — Harvard defeats Yale, 5-3, to cap a 14-3-1 campaign under the direction of first-year coach John P. Chase '28. The next two seasons, there will be no formal program due to World War II. Harvard, with Chase at the helm, resumes a formal team in 1945-46.

1944 — With the hockey program on hiatus because of the war, George Wood "Skeets" Canterbury '01 ends his nearly 40-year career as Harvard's goaltending coach. Sixteen years later, the Canterbury Society is formed — an organization which is comprised entirely of (and open exclusively to) former Harvard goaltenders. Now in its sixth decade, the Society's sole purpose is "to provide a forum for the promotion of fellowship and the exchange of information and stories about ice hockey goaltending." To this day, the Society meets for an informal dinner annually before one of Harvard's home games.

Spring 1950 — Chase resigns after an eight-year, six-season term with a 53-43-3 record. He is replaced by Ralph "Cooney" Weiland, a former scoring champion who won Stanley Cups as both a player and a coach with the Boston Bruins. He is the first non-alumnus to guide the hockey program.

December 27, 1952 — Harvard captures the inaugural Beanpot hockey tournament, defeating

Donald Watson

Boston University, 7-4, in the championship game at the Boston Arena. Captain Walter F. Greeley '53 is named tournament MVP.

February 7, 1955 — Bill Cleary '56 scores four goals in the first period against Northeastern in the Beanpot, a mark that still stands as a school and Beanpot record. Cleary leads the nation in scoring with an amazing 89 points in just 21 games as Harvard makes its first NCAA tournament appearance in men's ice hockey. More than five decades later, Cleary's point total still stands as the Harvard single-season record. Cleary and classmate Chuck Flynn become Harvard's first All-Americans.

February 1956 — At the Olympic Games in Cortina d'Ampezzo, Italy, Billy Cleary stars for the silver-medal U.S. men's ice hockey team while Robert B. Ridder '41 is the team manager.

March 7, 1956 — The Donald C. Watson Rink is dedicated before a game against Princeton. The Crimson defeated the Tigers, 2-1, on a goal by John Copeland '58. Built in 1955 and named after a former Harvard quarterback, the rink had operated for a year without a roof, but the inclement New England weather made one necessary.

March 1957 — After compiling a 21-5 overall record and earning a berth in the NCAA tournament, Harvard dominates the All-Ivy League team, as the first team is comprised entirely of Crimson players: goalie James Bailey '57; defensemen Bob Owen '58 and Daniel Ullyot '58 and forwards Bob McVey '58, Bob Cleary '58 and Lyle Guttu '58.

February 1960 — Four Harvard players are on the gold-medal winning U.S. men's ice hockey team at Squaw Valley, Calif.: brothers Bill '56 and Bob Cleary '58, Bob McVey '58 and Bob Owen '58. The team captain is John "Jack" Kirrane, who would become known to the Harvard community as the manager of the Bright Hockey Center. The United States defeats Canada, Russia and Czechoslovakia en route to the gold.

January 4, 1962 — The Crimson defeats Northeastern, 6-1, at Watson Rink for the 500th win in the history of the program.

March 9, 1963 — Led by captain Tim Taylor '63, the Crimson captures its first ECAC title. Gene Kinasewich '63 scores the game-winner in overtime to give Harvard a 4-3 victory over Boston College. The win is the 200th in the coaching career of Cooney Weiland.

February 10, 1969 — Sophomore Joe Cavanagh '71 is named tournament MVP as the Crimson captures its first Beanpot title in seven years and fifth title overall. Considered one of Harvard's all-time greats, Cavanagh would graduate with more than a Beanpot MVP on his resume: He was the first three-time All-American in school history and finished as the second-leading scorer in Harvard history (187 points).

December 12, 1970 — Cooney Weiland wins his 300th game, a 5-0 shutout of Brown.

March 20, 1971 — Cooney Weiland coaches his final game after 21 years at the helm of Harvard's men's hockey program. He directs the Crimson to 315 victories, six Ivy League championships and five NCAA appearances. Harvard wins the ECAC title in Weiland's final season behind the bench. Weiland, who had a distinguished career as a player and coach with the Boston Bruins, is inducted to the Hockey Hall of Fame in 1971.

March 31, 1971 — It takes only 11 days after Cooney Weiland's last game to find a worthy successor. Bill Cleary is elevated from his position as an assistant coach to become just the third Crimson coach in the modern era and ninth overall. He coaches his first game Dec. 4, an 11-3 win at Penn.

March 7, 1975 — Harvard defeats Cornell, 6-4, in an ECAC semifinal to win a then-school record 23rd game of the season. The Crimson would lose to Boston University in the final the next day and finish fourth in the NCAA tournament after falling to Minnesota and the same BU squad. Harvard was captained by All-American Randy Roth '75, who in 1974 became the Crimson's first ECAC Player of the Year.

November 1977 — Former men's goaltender Joe Bertagna '73 leads a collection of undergraduates who form a women's hockey club team. One year later, the sport attains varsity status.

March 5, 1977 — A 5-3 victory over Yale in New Haven gives Bill Cleary his 100th coaching victory, making him only the second coach in school history to reach that plateau.

November 19, 1979 — After the team spent a year playing out of local rinks, Watson Rink's renovations are revealed as the building is rededicated as the Alexander H. Bright '19 Hockey Center. Bright was a driving force in the building of Watson Rink and was a loyal friend to Harvard Athletics for many years.

March 6, 1982 — With the backing of a raucous student section, the Crimson defeats Dartmouth, 7-4, at the Bright Center. The win guarantees the Crimson a spot in the ECAC tournament, ending a seven-year playoff drought. (Harvard has qualified for the ECAC tournament every year since.) The team knocks off powerhouse Clarkson in the semifinals before falling to crosstown rival Northeastern in the championship game.

March 27, 1983 — Mark Fusco '83 wins the Hobey Baker Award, presented to the nation's outstanding men's collegiate hockey player. His play helps put Harvard into the NCAA final (against Wisconsin) for the first time in school history. Fusco would graduate as perhaps the most decorated of any Crimson skater, earning the Tudor Cup as team MVP, first team All-Ivy and All-ECAC distinction and All-America status three times each in his career. Joe Cavanagh '71 is Harvard's only other three-time All-American.

June 1985 — Defenseman Chris Biotti '89 becomes the first Harvard player selected in the first round of the NHL Entry Draft when he is taken 17th overall. To date, 76 Crimson skaters have been selected in the draft, including a record nine on the 2004-05 team.

April 7, 1986 — Scott Fusco '85-86 duplicates his brother's Hobey feat, earning college hockey's highest individual honor. Fusco, who would leave as the school's all-time leading scorer (240 points), helps the Crimson advance to the NCAA championship game, where the team drops a heartbreaking 6-5 decision to Michigan State.

December 12, 1988 — C.J. Young '90 scores the fastest three goals in Harvard men's hockey history, collecting a hat-trick in a span of 49 seconds during the Crimson's 10-0 win over Dartmouth. Even more amazing is that all three goals are shorthanded.

February 17, 1989 — Bill Cleary records his 300th coaching win with a 5-3 victory over Vermont at Gutterson Field House.

April 1, 1989 — Ed Krayer '89 scores "The Goal" as Harvard captures the NCAA title with a 4-3 overtime victory over Minnesota in the championship game. Sophomore Ted Donato '91, who had a goal and an assist in the final, is named tournament MOP, while defenseman Kevin Sneddon '92, forward Lane MacDonald '88-89 and goalie Allain Roy '92 are also all-tournament team picks. The team sets the school record for wins in a season (31), and would visit the White House as well as throw out the first pitch at Fenway Park before a Red Sox game.

April 3, 1989 — Two-time first-team All-American Lane MacDonald becomes the third Harvard player to earn the Hobey Baker Memorial Trophy. MacDonald would graduate with four school scoring records and among the top five in 11 categories.

April 1, 1990 — One year to the day after coaching Harvard men's hockey to the NCAA championship, Bill Cleary '56 formally starts his tenure as director of athletics. Cleary headed the hockey program for 19 seasons, won 324 games and took the Crimson to the Frozen Four on seven occasions. Cleary is replaced as coach by longtime assistant Ronn Tomassoni.

February 1, 1992 — Harvard becomes just the second program in college hockey history to win 1,000 games when it defeats Union, 7-3, at the Bright Center.

March 8, 1993 — Ted Drury '93 is named tournament MVP as the Crimson captures its 10th Beanpot title. Drury, who had skated in the 1992 Olympics in Albertville, went on to play for the United States two years later in Lillehammer — one of four former Harvard players to skate in two Olympic games.

March 26, 1994 — Harvard defeats New Hampshire, 7-1, to advance to the NCAA semifinals. The Crimson finishes the year with an impressive 24-5-4 record and wins the ECAC tournament championship for the first time since 1987. Captain Sean McCann '94 sets the school record for goals in a season by a defenseman (22) and is a Hobey Baker Award finalist.

February 2, 1998 — Freshman Chris Bala '01 scores the overtime game-winner against Boston College to send the Crimson to the Beanpot final for the first time since 1994. Four days later, Bala would tie Bill Cleary's school record with four goals in the first period against Vermont.

Mark '83 (left) and Scott Fusco '85-6 are the only brothers to win the Hobey Baker Award.

Bill Cleary jokes with then-President George H.W. Bush during the 1989 Crimson's visit the White House after its national championship run.

February 21, 1998 — Mike Ginal '00 makes college hockey history as the first player with a prosthetic limb to play in a Division I hockey game. Ginal, whose left foot was amputated at age four as the result of a birth defect, plays the final four minutes of a 6-1 victory over Colgate.

July 16, 1999 — Mark Mazzoleni is introduced as just the fifth coach in the modern era of Harvard hockey. In his first season, he leads the Crimson to the Ivy League title.

March 2, 2001 — Senior netminder Oliver Jonas '01 becomes the school record-holder for saves in a season with 1,021, breaking the record of 844 set by J.R. Prestifilippo '00 (whom Jonas backed up his first three varsity seasons). Jonas would graduate with four single-season goaltending records: saves, games played (32) games started (32), and minutes played (1,904).

March 31, 2001 — Defenseman Don Sweeney '88 appears in his 900th game in the NHL. Twenty-two former Crimson skaters have made it to the NHL. Sweeney appeared in more than 1,000 NHL contests with the Boston Bruins.

March 16, 2002 — The longest championship game in ECAC history (96:11) and the Crimson's third straight overtime game ends with a wrist shot by Tyler Kolarik '04 as Harvard claims its sixth tournament title, 4-3 against Cornell. The team makes its first NCAA appearance since 1994 and plays a school-record fourth consecutive overtime game in a 4-3 loss to national finalist Maine.

March 20, 2004 — Dov Grumet-Morris '05 becomes the ECAC tournament's winningest goaltender as he backstops the Crimson to its second Whitelaw Trophy in three seasons with a dramatic 4-2 victory over Clarkson. Grumet-Morris sets the ECAC record for wins in a tournament (six) and improves to 13-1 all-time in ECAC playoff games. Classmate Tom Cavanagh '05 scores two goals to erase a 2-0 deficit in the second period, and team captain Kenny Smith '04 nets the game-winner with 38 seconds to play.

July 2, 2004 — Ted Donato '91 is named just the sixth head coach in the modern era of Harvard hockey, replacing Mark Mazzoleni, who led the Crimson to three NCAA tournaments and two ECAC titles in five years at the helm. Donato is the eighth Harvard alum to coach the Crimson.

March 22, 2005 — Dov Grumet-Moris '05 stops a career-high 46 shots in Harvard's 4-3 double-overtime win again Colgate in the semifinals of the ECAC Hockey League Championship at the Pepsi Arena in Albany, N.Y., his record 16th victory in a league tournament contest. Kevin Du '07 scores the game-winner at 96:01 to vault Harvard into its fourth consecutive ECAC tournament final. Grumet-Morris graduates with a 16-2 overall mark in ECACHL tournament games. In addition, he is a finalist for the Hobey Baker Award and the recipient of the Walter Brown Award.

March 26, 2005 — Harvard makes its 20th appearance in the NCAA tournament, and fourth straight, against New Hampshire in the Northeast Regional in Amherst, Mass. The 3-2 loss to the Wildcats marks the 138th game played by Tom Cavanagh '05, a school record. His total is tied for eighth in the history of ECAC Hockey.

March 18, 2006 — The Crimson sets a league playoff record with 28 goals — including 24 in its final three games — to capture its third ECACHL championship in five years with a 6-2 win against Cornell. Goaltender John Daigneau '06 is named the tournament's Most Outstanding Player and is one of five Harvard selections to the all-tournament team as the Crimson secures its fifth straight NCAA bid.

Life After Harvard

True, life after Harvard for many spells a career in law, medicine or politics. For some former Crimson skaters, it is a career in professional sports, both on and off the ice, which awaits. Peter Chiarelli '87 was named GM of the Boston Bruins in 2006.

CRIMSON IN THE COMMUNITY

Crimson City Hockey, Inc.

Founded six summers ago by former Harvard forward and Hockey Humanitarian finalist Rob Fried '04, the Crimson City Hockey Clinic is a nonprofit ice hockey clinic providing free ice time, inexpensive equipment and positive role models to Boston youth. On and off the ice, the organization is run completely by Harvard hockey players, so in addition to helping the Boston community, it provides real-world business experience for the student-athletes involved. The student-athletes are responsible for fund-raising, scheduling, insurance, tax-exemption and other filings and on-ice instruction.

In 2008, under the direction of president Brian McCafferty and vice president Doug Rogers, the clinic met for eight hour-long ice sessions at Boston University's Walter Brown Arena. For more information or to support CCHC, contact crimsoncity@yahoo.com. Pictured are Jon Pelle '08 and former Harvard women's player Jodi Krakower '08 giving instructions to players at a 2007 CCHC session.

REMEMBERING KEVIN MCINNIS

The Harvard men's hockey team lost a friend and a part of the team when equipment manager Kevin McInnis passed away suddenly May 24 at his home in Rockland, Mass. He had served as the head equipment manager for the Crimson for seven years.

"This is a sad day for everyone associated with Harvard athletics and for the larger hockey community," said Nichols Family Director of Athletics Bob Scalise. "Kevin's commitment to the men's hockey team and to the department are tremendously appreciated and Kevin will be greatly missed."

Kevin was born in Boston, son of the late A. Joseph and Alice (Colbert) McInnis and was raised and educated in Dorchester. He was a 1974 graduate of Don Bosco High School. Kevin had made his home in Rockland for the past 16 years. He had previously been employed for 28 years as the manager of the former Adams Sporting Goods store in Dorchester. Kevin was an avid sports fan.

He is survived by his wife Marilyn A. (Meady) McInnis and his daughters Kristy A. Romer and her husband Scott of Auburn, Niki M. McInnis and Stephanie E. McInnis both of Rockland. He was the brother of Patricia Pfeiffer of Dorchester and Jim T. McInnis and his wife Pat of Plymouth. Also surviving are his grandson Benjamin J. Romer and several nieces and nephews.

Donations in his memory may be made to the Kevin McInnis Scholarship Fund, c/o Rockland Trust Co., 288 Union Street, Rockland, MA 02370.

COACHING STAFF

TED DONATO '91

Robert D. Ziff Head Coach of Men's Ice Hockey

Following success as a player at the collegiate, professional and international levels, Ted Donato has begun piling up a long list of accomplishments in four years as head coach at his alma mater. The former Crimson captain has guided Harvard to its first back-to-back 20-win seasons since 1992-93 and 1993-94, captured ECAC Hockey and Ivy League championships, claimed two NCAA tournament berths, led his team to three league championship games, coached two All-Americans and set a new standard for wins by a Harvard coach in his first three seasons.

The owner of a 73-52-11 (.577) career record, Donato accumulated 56 victories in his first three years. He is the third Harvard coach to total 50 wins in his first three seasons, joining Bill Cleary '56 (51 wins), who caoched Donato at Harvard and Ronn Tomassoni (50).

Donato, who won an NCAA championship as a Crimson player, played in the Olympics and enjoyed a 13-year NHL career, was introduced as the Robert D. Ziff Head Coach of Harvard Men's Ice Hockey July 2, 2004.

Donato, a 1991 graduate, is just Harvard's sixth head coach since 1950. He is the eighth Harvard alum to serve as the program's head coach. The appointment is Donato's first coaching position.

He did not look like a rookie coach in his debut season behind the bench in 2004-05, leading the Crimson to a 21-10-3 record, runner-up finishes in the ECACHL regular season and tournament and an NCAA tournament appearance. Donato's 2005-06 Harvard squad followed with another 21-win season, captured the ECACHL and Ivy League championships and made another NCAA appearance. Donato is the only head coach to take Harvard to the NCAA tournament in each of his first two years.

As an undergraduate, Donato etched his name alongside Harvard's all-time greats. He finished his career 11th on the Crimson's career scoring chart (50 goals, 94 assists, 144 points) and remains 12th in that category. He earned All-ECAC and All-Ivy League accolades while serving as the 95th captain of Harvard hockey in his 1990-91 senior season.

Donato was named Most Outstanding Player of the 1989 NCAA Frozen Four, where Harvard downed Minnesota, 4-3, in overtime in the NCAA championship game. That contest, held in the Gophers' backyard (St. Paul, Minn.), saw Donato net a pair of goals, one that tied the game at 1-1 midway through the second period and another that gave the Crimson a 3-2 lead with seven minutes to go. Donato scored three goals and added a pair of assists in the tournament.

He earned the Donald Angier Hockey Trophy as the team's most improved player in 1989 and accepted the Ralph "Cooney" Weiland Award for spirit and devotion to Harvard hockey in 1991

A native of nearby Dedham, Mass., Donato was a member of seven United States national teams, including the 1992 Olympic team. He tied for the team lead in scoring with four goals and three assists in eight games in the Olympics and posted 11 goals and 22 assists in the pre-Games schedule. He also played in the World Championships in 1997 (4-2-6 in 8 GP), 1999 (2-6-8 in 8 GP) and 2002 (1-3-4 in 7 GP) and in the 1988 World Junior Championship (3-2-5 in 7 GP).

Donato was selected by the Boston Bruins in the fifth round of the 1987 NHL Entry Draft (98th overall), and he signed with his hometown club in March 1992 following the Olympic Games. His 13-year pro career included stops in New York (with the Rangers and Islanders), Los Angeles, Ottawa, Anaheim and St. Louis. He returned to the Bruins as a free agent in July 2003.

His NHL career spanned 796 games, in which he scored 150 goals with 197 assists for 347 points. Donato had eight goals, 18 assists and 26 points in 58 career Stanley Cup playoff games. He scored 25 goals in 1996-97, becoming the first U.S.-born player to lead the Bruins in goals in a season.

Donato played at Catholic Memorial School, where he graduated as the school's all-time leading scorer. The son of Michael and Mary Donato, Ted and his three brothers were all active in intercollegiate athletics. Brother Michael played baseball at Princeton; Chris played hockey, baseball and football at Williams; and Dan played hockey and baseball at Boston University. Their sister, Paula, is a plastics engineer.

Donato is a resident of Scituate, Mass., with his wife, Jeannine, and their four children: Ryan, Jack, Nolan and Madelyn.

"Obviously this is a special place for me. I embrace the history and tradition of Harvard hockey and the quality of people who are involved with the program. Harvard is the greatest combination of superior academics and competitive athletics in all of college sports, and that is a tradition that I hope to carry on. I have the opportunity to work with a number of outstanding people, and I'm very excited about the future of this program."

The Next Level

Donato is one of seven former NHL players who are active Division I head coaches. He ranks second among them in NHL games, goals, assists and points.

SEAN MCCANN '94

Assistant Coach

Sean McCann, a former Crimson captain and Hobey Baker Award finalist, serves his seventh season behind the bench as an assistant coach at his alma mater in 2008-09. His day-to-day responsibilities for the Harvard hockey program include off-campus recruiting, working with the Crimson defense and assisting with special teams.

McCann has helped develop a strong defensive unit at Harvard. The 2004-05 Crimson finished second in the nation with a goals-against average of 1.88. That squad surrendered just 64 goals, the fewest goals allowed by a Harvard team since the early 1970s. In four of his six seasons, the Crimson has ranked among the top 20 nationally in team defense, including fourth in 2002-03 with a goals-against average of 2.29, 18th (tie) in 2003-04 (2.61) and 11th in 2007-08 (2.32). Harvard ranked 23rd nationally in scoring defense in 2005-06 (2.63) and 26th in 2006-07 (2.73).

One of McCann's strongest coaching attributes comes from his being a former student-athlete at Harvard. This allows him to share first-hand knowledge with recruits and players, drawing on his experience of success both in a Crimson sweater and beyond.

A native of North York, Ont., McCann graduated from Harvard with a A.B. in history in 1994. He was a standout defenseman from 1990-94 and was Harvard's 98th captain. McCann appeared in 120 games, notching 32 goals and 43 assists for 75 points. He holds the school record for goals by a defenseman in a season (22).

McCann's best collegiate season was his final one. He scored 22 goals, totaled 39 points and earned All-ECAC, All-New England and All-America honors in addition to being a finalist for the Hobey Baker Award. Over his four-year career, the Crimson was 74-30-16 with one Beanpot, three ECAC regular-season championships and one ECAC tournament title and made two NCAA tournament appearances. For his efforts, McCann was named to the ECAC All-Decade team for the 1990s.

He was the first pick overall (Florida Panthers) in the 1994 NHL Supplemental Draft and went on to a seven-year career in the IHL and AHL. In more than 500 professional games, McCann scored 117 goals and recorded 174 assists (291 points). He was the IHL Rookie of the Year with the Cincinnati Cyclones in 1994-95 and served as an assistant captain with three teams. Twice he earned an "Iron Man" award, in 1995-96 with the Greensboro Monarchs (AHL) and in his final season (2000-01) with the Houston Aeros (IHL).

McCann is married to the former Emily Buxton '94, who was a standout women's lacrosse and field hockey player for the Crimson as an undergrad. The McCanns reside in Needham, Mass., with their children, Cooper and twins Emma and Chase.

PATRICK FOLEY

Assistant Coach

Patrick Foley, a former USA Hockey assistant coach and three-year captain at New Hampshire, is in his second season as an assistant coach with the Crimson.

Foley directs the Crimson's penalty-kill unit. Harvard killed 84.9 percent of the power plays it faced in his first season, good for 24th nationally. In ECAC Hockey play, the Crimson had the league's top penalty kill at 91.3 percent. He also served as an an assistant coach for the U.S. National Junior Team at the 2008 International Ice Hockey Federation World Junior Championship in the Czech Republic.

A native of Milton, Mass., Foley came to Harvard following two years as an assistant coach with the U.S. National Team Development Program, where he helped guide Team USA to a gold medal in the 2006 IIHF Under-18 World Championship and a silver medal at the 2007 championship.

Foley worked primarily with NTDP forwards during practice, with responsibility for team defense and penalty killing. He helped groom a group of 13 NTDP players chosen in the 2006 National Hockey League Entry Draft and saw NTDP forwards taken with the first two overall picks in the 2007 draft. He helped direct NTDP teams to a gold medal at the 2005 Four Nations tournament in Finland and a silver medal at the 2006 Five Nations in Russia.

Off the ice, Foley was in charge of evaluation and recruitment of potential players. A former NTDP player himself, Foley spoke to hockey associations across the nation on behalf of USA Hockey, served as the alumni liaison to the NTDP and monitored players' host families and academic progress. He twice served as a USA Hockey level 4 coaching certification symposium speaker. He also served as the director of the NTDP Summer Hockey School.

Foley was the second UNH player ever to serve as captain for three straight seasons. He helped the Wildcats to Hockey East titles and trips to the Frozen Four in 2002 and '03. He was a finalist for the 2004 Hockey Humanitarian Award, played for the 2000 U.S. National Junior Team and was drafted by the Pittsburgh Penguins in 2000.

A Dean's List and Hockey East All-Academic honoree, Foley earned a kinesiology degree from New Hampshire in 2004. While in school, he founded Team 25, a charitable organization. In that role, he organized an auction that raised money for a teen center and arranged for UNH hockey players to take stuffed animals to children in hospitals. Foley also participated in the first NCAA conference and seminar on celebratory behavior and rioting among college sports fans.

Foley attended St. Sebastian's School in Needham, Mass., before moving to Michigan and graduating from Pioneer High School while playing for the U.S. National Under-18 Team. Following his UNH graduation, Foley returned to the Boston area and worked in the community relations office of the Boston Red Sox.

Foley resides in Charlestown, Mass.

BRUCE IRVING

Volunteer Assistant Coach

Bruce Irving returns for his seventh season with the Crimson program. Irving serves as the head coach for the junior varsity program in addition to his duties as an assistant with the varsity squad, focusing his time with the team's goaltenders.

With Irving's coaching last seasaon, Kyle Richter earned the Ken Dryden Award as ECAC Hockey's top goalie. He was selected to the All-ECAC and All-Ivy League first teams and was a New England All-Star after posting ECAC Hockey's top goals-against average (1.82) and save percentage (.935) in league play.

Irving helped mentor Dov Grumet-Morris '05 to a standout career, culminating in an brilliant 2004-05 campaign. Grumet-Morris was a Hobey Baker Award finalist, an AHCA All-American and the Walter Brown Award recipient as the top U.S.-born player in New England. Grumet-Morris closed the season second in the nation with a 1.63 goals-against average. He played three of his four seasons under Irving, finishing as Harvard's all-time leader in saves (3,081) and second on the career goals-against average list at 2.25.

The graduation of Grumet-Morris left the Crimson without an experienced goalie heading into 2005-06, but under the guidance of Irving, John Daigneau '06 had a outstanding season. He led Harvard to an ECAC Hockey League title, earning Most Outstanding Player honors in the conference tournament.

In 2006-07, Justin Tobe '07 ranked second in the ECACHL with a 2.26 goals-against average under the guidance of Irving.

A native of Newbury, Mass., Irving was a goaltender at Cornell while pursuing his degree in electrical engineering, which he received in 1985. Irving also earned an M.B.A. from Northeastern in 1991.

CHAD KRAWIEC

Athletic Trainer

Chad Krawiec is in his fourth season as a member of the Harvard sports medicine staff. Krawiec works with men's hockey, football and men's swimming and diving.

A 1997 graduate of Boston University with a B.S. in athletic training, Krawiec received an M.S. in motor control from Penn State in 1999.

Krawiec joined the Crimson staff after spending six years as an assistant athletic trainer at Northeastern, where he worked with men's and women's hockey, men's and women's track and field and field hockey. He was a graduate assistant while at Penn State, working with women's soccer, men's gymnastics, men's and women's track and field and men's and women's tennis.

In addition to his athletic training responsibilities, Krawiec is a lecturer and clinical instructor in the athletic training curriculum programs at Northeastern University and Boston University, as well as Harvard's site coordinator for clinical athletic training students from those programs.

Krawiec is a licensed athletic trainer in Massachusetts and an active member of the National Athletic Trainers Association, Eastern Athletic Trainers Association and Athletic Trainers of Massachusetts.

SPORTS MEDICINE

The aim of Harvard University Sports Medicine is to provide the highest quality care for varsity and junior varsity undergraduate intercollegiate student-athletes. These services are provided by a trained and licensed professional staff in a professional and ethical environment using the most current concepts and technologies. From the first preseason practice in the fall through the last event of the spring season, the athletic trainers and sports medicine professionals provide prevention, treatment and rehabilitation as well as emergency care for nearly 1,500 athletes involved in Harvard's intercollegiate varsity and junior varsity programs.

The staff is comprised of seven nationally certified athletic trainers, two board-certified physical therapist/certified athletic trainers, an x-ray technician, one orthopedic surgeon, one orthopedic physician and one internal medicine physician. It is a teaching affiliate of the Harvard Medical School, Boston University's Sargent College, Massachusetts General Hospital Institute of Health Professions and Northeastern University's Bouve School. The staff also has orthopedic physician consultants who specialize in the hand and the spine.

The main athletic training and sports medicine facility is located in Dillon Field House, adjacent to the Bright Hockey Center. Renovated in summer 2007, the training room includes over 7,500 square feet of treatment, exam and rehabilitation space. The facility also includes four newly installed therapeutic whirlpools (two hot, two cold), a casting room and orthotics fabrication room as well as a medical records room, doctor's and private exam rooms. The training room is equipped with ultrasound, electrical stimulation, cardiovascular and weight training equipment as well as specialized rehabilitation equipment.

2008-09 Sports Medicine Staff

Dr. Arthur Boland, Team Physician, Head Orthopedic Surgeon
Dr. Frank Wang, Physician
Dr. Mark Steiner '72, Physician
Dr. Lars Richardson '91, Orthopedic Surgeon/Physician
Brant Berkstresser, Head Athletic Trainer
Gary Geissler, Director of Clinical Rehabilitation
TK Kennedy, Assistant Athletic Trainer
John King, Assistant Athletic Trainer
Catie Kopischke, Assistant Athletic Trainer
Chad Krawiec, Assistant Athletic Trainer
Helena Malczewka, Assistant Athletic Trainer
Tim Smith, Assistant Athletic Trainer
Stephen Traynor, Assistant Athletic Trainer
Randy Widtfeldt, Assistant Athletic Trainer

Many services are offered through the athletic training room, including orthopedic clinics four days each week, internal medicine clinics twice a week and a sports nutritionist every other week. In addition, x-ray is available in the athletic training room for immediate visualization of orthopedic injuries. Student observation in the orthopedic clinic helps facilitate interaction and confidential case discussion between athletic training students, physical therapy students, medical students and sports medicine staff.

DAN PERLMUTTER

Assistant Director of Strength & Conditioning

Dan Perlmutter has served as the assistant director of strength and conditioning at Harvard since April 2005, following a stint as interim director of the strength program from September 2004 until March 2005.

Perlmutter is responsible for the development and implementation of strength and conditioning plans for Harvard's men's and women's hockey, men's and women's soccer, women's volleyball, men's and women's fencing, coed and women's sailing, men's and women's track and field and alpine and nordic skiing teams.

Prior to working at Harvard, he served as an assistant strength coach at Springfield College from 2002-04. He also spent the summer of 2004 as an assistant strength coach at Holy Cross and with the American Hockey League's Worcester IceCats.

Perlmutter has worked as a strength coach for the USTA Competition Training Center in Boston and has done private strength training with several professional and Olympic hockey players, as well as an Olympic hammer thrower.

He earned an M.Ed. in applied exercise science from Springfield in 2004 and a B.A. in communication studies from George Washington in 1998.

A Cambridge native, Perlmutter resides in Arlington, Mass., with his wife, Amy, and daughters Mia and Jordan.

STRENGTH & CONDITIONING

The Harvard strength and conditioning department is committed to providing the highest level of athletic preparation for all varsity student-athletes. The primary goal is to maximize the potential of each individual student-athlete throughout his college career. Every student-athlete matters.

Each of Harvard's 41 varsity teams receives comprehensive support and effort from the strength and conditioning staff during designated training times. The strength and conditioning staff works closely with each sport's head coach to implement the most effective year-round training.

Through the guidance of strength coaches, student-athletes develop skills such as discipline, perseverance, goal-setting, teamwork, mental toughness and work ethic. These instill habits that will lead students to better and healthier lives.

The cornerstones of Harvard strength and conditioning are intensity and consistency. Harvard runs a full-service program, focusing on strength, power, speed, agility, conditioning, flexibility, recovery, nutrition and injury prevention and management. Strength training emphasizes multi-joint, multi-plane movements such as power cleans, squats and upper-body presses. Rotational movements, balance and stability, unilateral exercises and core training are also priorities. All programs are specialized to match team goals at given times of the year. Speed, agility and conditioning are tailored to the needs of each sport. Flexibility, recovery, nutrition and injury prevention are incorporated into all team training programs.

Harvard strength and conditioning is committed to the idea of sound mind, sound body. It honors the values of the university and supports the principles of the Ivy League and the NCAA.

The Palmer Dixon Strength and Conditioning Center is one of the premier strength and conditioning facilities in the country. Few, if any, facilities can match Palmer Dixon's ability to accommodate large teams in such a variety of strength training and conditioning areas with top-of-the-line equipment.

Since its completion in March 2007, Harvard student-athletes have enjoyed training on state-of-the-art equipment in the spacious 24,000-square-foot facility. The layout of the building is designed for full-service training for each athlete and team since every aspect of a complete training regiment is housed in the center.

Training amenities include:

- 24 all-rubber Olympic weightlifting platforms by Sorinex.
- 24 full bumper plate sets by Uesaka.
- 24 nine-foot Power Racks with three-way chin-up bars by Power Lift.
- 24 Olympic benches adjustable from 0-90 degrees by Sorinex.
- 24 full sets of iron plates by York.
- 24 18-inch step-up plyometric boxes.
- 24 dip and chin-up belts.
- Two full sets of dumbbells, ranging from three to 130 pounds.
- Three Hammer Strength Jammers.
- A 21,000-square-foot all-purpose turf floor.
- 12 40-yard lanes with cross-lanes every five yards located in the middle of the facility. Athletes engage in footwork, dynamic warmup, dynamic flex, speed and agility training, interval conditioning and dynamic strength training, all in the strength and conditioning center.
- 12 pulling sleds by Power Systems.
- Speed and agility training equipment storage space.
- Indoor and outdoor medicine ball walls measuring 40 feet wide by eight feet high.
- 50 medicine balls ranging from one to 20 pounds.
- 24 stability balls and stability pads.
- A 3,000-square-foot loft filled with 30 pieces of indoor conditioning equipment such as Spinner, Airdyne and stationary bikes as well as treadmills, ellipticals and stairsteppers.
- Men's and women's locker rooms.
- Strength and conditioning offices.

Located in the Soldiers Field Athletic Complex, the Palmer Dixon Strength and Conditioning Center sits adjacent to Bright Hockey Center.

The facility and the entire strength and conditioning program are managed by a highly trained staff of four full-time coaches. Director of strength and conditioning Craig Fitzgerald oversees the facility along with assistant directors Dan Perlmutter and Tim Mullen and assistant strength and conditioning coach Emily Saul.

The Palmer Dixon Center had served as an indoor squash and tennis facility before it was converted to Harvard's varsity athletics training center in 2007. It is named for William Palmer Dixon '25, who was a two-time national squash champion, a former president of the Harvard Varsity Club, and a longtime supporter of Harvard's athletics program.

CRIMSON, WHITE AND BLUE

The Harvard men's hockey team has a proud tradition of association with international competition, and current Crimson players are carrying on that trend. Jimmy Fraser (left) represented Harvard and the United States in the 2007 International Ice Hockey Federation World Junior Championship in Leksand and Mora, Sweden. He served as an alternate captain on Team USA, helping the team capture the bronze medal.

Fraser also spent two seasons in the U.S. National Team Development Program, captaining the U.S. Under-17 and U-18 National Teams. Teammates Chad Morin, Ryan Grimshaw and Colin Moore (below, counterclockwise from top left) also played for the U.S. NTDP teams before coming to Harvard. In August 2007 Doug Rogers (top right) competed in the National Junior Evaluation Camp, playing games against teams from Sweden and Finland.

Assistant coach Patrick Foley was an NTDP assistant before joining the Harvard staff and served an assistant caoch of the 2008 U.S. National Junior Team, which competed at the 2008 IIHF World Junior Championship in the Czech Republic. Two of Harvard's Canadian players, Alex Biega and Alex Killorn, have represented their province as members of Quebec Under-17 teams. See page 125 for a full list of Harvard players who have suited up for U.S. and Canadian Olympic and national teams.

YEAR IN REVIEW

2007-08 SEASON RECAP

In a year of streaks, the 2007-08 Harvard men's hockey team had its best run at the end of the season, narrowly missing the ECAC Hockey title and the NCAA tournament and re-establishing itself as one of the nation's top teams.

It was one season that felt like three distinct campaigns. The Crimson got off to a 6-2-1 start, climbing to a No. 12 national ranking. Harvard then struggled through its next nine contests but lost just twice in the final 11regular-season games before putting together one of its trademark playoff runs to reach the league championship final for the sixth time in the last seven years.

Harvard finished the season ranked 16th in the USCHO.com/CSTV Division I Men's Poll and in the PairWise rankings that determine the NCAA Championship field. The Crimson finished one win shy of ECAC Hockey's automatic NCAA berth and two spots back of the final at-large selection in the PairWise.

The team was led, appropriately, by its two captains. David MacDonald guided the top defensive unit in ECAC Hockey. With Dryden Award-winner Kyle Richter in net, the Crimson allowed a league-low 1.86 goals per ECAC contest. MacDonald was a second-team All-Ivy League pick, while Richter earned first-team selections from the Ivy League and ECAC Hockey. Alex Biega made the ECAC third team and garnered All-Ivy honorable mention.

Mike Taylor, MacDonald's co-captain, paced the Harvard forwards. Taylor, a second-team All-Ivy pick, was one of the nation's top players in the final two months of the season. He notched at least a point in the final 14 games of his career, igniting the Crimson's late-season run and finishing with a team-high 35 points and 23 assists. He and MacDonald were also key parts of a Harvard penalty kill that allowed a league-low nine goals in 103 ECAC opponents' power plays.

Jon Pelle, a semifinalist for the Walter Brown Award as the top U.S.-born player in New England, led the team with 14 goals. Doug Rogers was the second-leading goal- and point-scorer with totals of 13-19-32, while Biega led Harvard's defensemen with 22 points (3-19-22). Ian Tallett, Biega's defensive partner, shared with Rogers the team plus/minus lead at +13.

The Crimson was also successful in the classroom, placing 15 players on the ECAC All-Academic Team. The total was the league's third-highest and good for second among Ivy schools.

Harvard looked like a title contender from the season's first weekend. Following a 2-1 loss to defending champion Clarkson in the opener, Harvard pulled away to a 6-1 win against No. 16 St. Lawrence, ECAC Hockey's reigning regular-season champ. Richter made a career-high 42 saves in the win. The next weekend, he backstopped Harvard to a 3-0 win against No. 16 Rensselaer and a 4-0 blanking of Union, becoming the second Crimson goalie and first in 25 years to post shutouts on consecutive nights.

Harvard lost just once in its next five games, as Brian McCafferty scored the game-winner in a 2-1 home win against rival Cornell, Doug Rogers struck in overtime to beat Boston University by the same score, Michael Biegea netted the first three goals of his career in a 3-3 tie at Yale and Taylor netted the game's only goal—a highlight-reel, shorthanded effort in the third period—at home against Dartmouth.

A 4-2 loss at No. 19 Rensselaer started a midseason skid that saw the Crimson play strong games at Vermont and No. 18 Quinnipiac, only to come away with ties in both contests. Harvard also made its first trip to the Buckeye State to compete in the Ohio Hockey Classic, facing the host Buckeyes and No. 16 St. Cloud State.

The Crimson seemed to solve its problems over the January exam break. A two-goal night by Jon Pelle paced Harvard in a 3-1 win at Dartmouth Jan. 26, the team's best overall performance of the season to that point. A 4-2 loss at Brown followed, but the Crimson rebounded with three goals in the first seven minutes of a 3-1 win against No. 14 Northeastern in the opening round of the 56th Beanpot. The Crimson killed all six NU power plays and held its third straight opponent to 20 shots or fewer on the way to its first Beanpot final appearance in a decade.

After Matt McCollem's first career goal and 14 third-period saves helped Harvard hold off Union for a 3-2 win, the Crimson returned to TD Banknorth Garden for a classic championship-game matchup with No. 7 Boston College, the eventual 2008 NCAA champion. Harvard rallied from two goals down in the final nine minutes of regulation before Nick Petrecki scored at 7:07 of overtime to lift the Eagles to a 6-5 win. Taylor scored twice, including the game-tying goal with less than five minutes left to complete a comeback from a 5-3 third-period hole. He added an assist for the Crimson, which fell just short of its 11th Beanpot title and first in 15 years. Rogers had a goal and two assists in the final, while Tallett was +7 in the two Beanpot games.

Undaunted by what could have been a heartbreaking loss, the Crimson built momentum from its Beanpot comeback, going 5-0-1 to close the regular season. The run started with a 3-2 home win against No. 17 Princeton fueled by a Rogers hat trick. The Crimson then rolled over 16th-ranked Quinnipiac, 4-1, and posted a 6-1 drubbing of Ivy nemesis Yale. Against the Bulldogs, Richter made 37 saves and became the first Crimson goaltender to score a goal.

Jimmy Fraser tallied the third-period winner in a 2-1 victory against Brown on Senior Night at Bright Hockey Center. Following a tie at Colgate, the Crimson also won on Cornell's Senior Night. Seniors Taylor, Paul Dufault and Tyler Magura scored Harvard's goals in a 3-1 win at Lynah Rink to close the regular season.

The wins did not end with the regular season. Led by a Dave Watters hat trick, the Crimson defeated Quinnipiac, 11-0, in the playoff opener, the first of a three-game quarterfinal series. Harvard set a program postseason goals record, came within one goal of the overall ECAC tournament record and matched the largest margin of victory in tournament history. The Crimson outshot the Bobcats, 48-29, and scored one more goal than it did in all of December. It was Harvard's largest victory margin in 15 years, and Watters posted the first five-point game by a Harvard player since 2003.

The Bobcats posted a 7-4 win in Game 2, but Taylor once again came through in the deciding game. The senior notched two goals and an assist in his final game at Bright to lead Harvard to a 3-1 victory and a trip back to Albany for the championship weekend.

Pelle scored twice and Richter made 31 saves to propel the Crimson to a 3-1 semifinal win against Cornell and yet another ECAC final appearance. Pelle scored again in the title game, but Princeton goalie Zane Kalemba stopped Harvard's other 35 shots in a 4-1 win for the No. 15 Tigers.

Taylor finished as the league's top playoff scorer with 11 points on three goals and eight assists. Pelle, meanwhile, scored five power-play goals in five tournament games to earn a all-tournament selection alongside Alex Biega.

The Crimson put the final touches on the season at the team's banquet April 19 at the Harvard Club of Boston. Fraser and McCafferty were tabbed as 2008-09 captains, and Taylor was crowned team MVP with the awarding of the Tudor Cup. Tallett received the Angier Trophy as the team's most improved player, while Michael Biega and McCollem shared the Percey Award as top rookies. MacDonald and Magura received the Weiland Award for devotion to hockey. Along with the rest of the senior class, they were recognized for guiding the Crimson to a successful season and paving the way for more wins in the future.

TEAM AWARDS

John Tudor Memorial Cup

Michael J. Taylor, Jr. '08

Trophy awarded annually to the most valuable member of the Harvard hockey team, determined not by ability alone, but by the qualities of sportsmanship, leadership and team cooperation. Finally, and most importantly, the recipient must have the vague quality which John Tudor called "the old come through in the pinch." This trophy was presented by the members of the Porcellian Club who were classmates of John Tudor '29, captain of the 1928-29 hockey team.

Donald Angier Hockey Trophy

Ian M. Tallett '10

Awarded annually to the player showing the greatest general improvement during the year. Mr. Angier was a member of the Harvard hockey team in 1920, 1921 and 1922 and kept a keen and continued interest in the sport. Mr. Angier, until his death Sept. 4, 1949, presented to the winner a silver cigarette case upon the cover of which was etched a replica of the hockey player that appeared on the trophy with the following inscription: "The Angier Trophy, Awarded Annually to the Player Showing the Greatest General Improvement During the Year."

MAJOR HARVARD AWARDS

The William J. Bingham Award

First awarded in 1954, the Bingham Award is given annually to the male member of the graduating class of Harvard College who–through integrity, courage, leadership and ability on the athletic fields–has best served the high purpose of Harvard as exemplified by the late William J. Bingham '16, former director of athletics.

1954	T. Jefferson Coolidge	1986	Scott M. Fusco
1964	Eugene Kinasewich	1987	Mark Benning
1971	Joseph V. Cavanagh	1989	B. Lane MacDonald
1973	Kevin F. Hampe	1990	Carl J. Young
1983	Mark E. Fusco	1991	Peter Ciavaglia

The Carroll F. Getchell Manager of the Year

In 1981, the Committee on Athletics decided to name the Manager of the Year Award, established in 1972, for the late Carroll F. Getchell, a long-time business manager in the Department of Athletics. Each year the department recognizes that manager in the senior class "who has best displayed integrity, courage, leadership and ability" during his/her years of participation.

1979	Yuki A. Moore	2000	Yvonne Kao
1989	Jason S. Wenglin	2002	Masa Hoshino
1991	Julie J. Rim	2005	Brendan Connell
1997	Andrew Gunderson

The Francis H. Burr '09 Scholarship

A scholarship fund established in memory of Francis H. Burr by his friends to be awarded to a senior who combines as nearly as possible Burr's remarkable qualities of character, leadership, scholarship and athletic ability.

1928	John P. Chase	1967	Dennis McCullough
1932	W. Barry Wood	1969	Robert T. Bauer
1952	Dustin M. Burke	1984	Kenneth J. Code
1963	David L. G. Johnston

The Francis J. Toland Service Award

The Francis J. Toland Service Award is awarded annually in recognition of outstanding contribution to Harvard and its neighboring communities. The award honors Fran Toland, who served as the athletics business manager for more than 40 years prior to his retirement in 2000. The addition of this award was announced at a celebration of his career of service to the University and the Department of Athletics in June of that year.

2004 Robert J. Fried

The John P. Fadden Award

This award was established in 1966 in honor of the late John P. Fadden's service as a trainer and friend to Harvard athletes for many years. The award is given annually to a senior student (varsity, JV or intramural) who has overcome physical adversity to make a contribution to his/her team.

1971	Joseph V. Cavanagh
1975	Leigh Hogan
1988	Jerald J. Pawloski
1990	Scott McCormack

The John P. Reardon Men's Award

This award, established in 1987, is named in honor of John P. Reardon '60, director of athletics from 1977 to 1990. The prize is presented annually to the senior male varsity athlete who exemplifies the qualities of excellent scholarship, character, leadership and athletic ability.

1996	Kirk G. Nielsen
2004	Robert J. Fried

Rob Fried '04 accepted both the Reardon and Toland Awards at the 2004 Senior Letterwinners Dinner

CRIMSON BLOODLINES

Blood runs Crimson at Harvard, and anyone who plays hockey here is part of a big family. Historically some have taken that a step further, as at least 41 sets of brothers have worn the crimson, black and white uniform and earned varsity letters for their efforts. Harvard has also had numerous father-son combinations, and we now see the branches of the family tree growing over into the women's game, with some father-daughter letterwinner combinations as well. Below is a sampling of families who boast multiple Major H winners.

IVY LEAGUE HOCKEY HISTORY

League competition between Ivy teams began in 1934 and, except for the war years of 1944-46, has operated without interruption. Originally the league was composed of Dartmouth, Harvard, Princeton and Yale, and was known as the Quadrangular League. Army joined the group in 1941-42, making it the Pentagonal League. Army dropped out in 1946-47 and was replaced by Brown in 1948-49. The teams became formally known as the Ivy Group in 1955-56. Cornell became a member in 1958-59, and Pennsylvania joined in 1967-68. Penn withdrew its team after the 1977-78 season, when the school dropped hockey as a varsity sport. The eighth league member, Columbia, has never fielded a varsity hockey team as a member of the Ivy Group.

The 1963 team poses with the Hobey Baker Trophy, given annually to the Ivy champion. Holding the trophy is team captain Tim Taylor '63, who went on to a long coaching career with Yale and the U.S. National Team.

ECAC HOCKEY REGULAR-SEASON HISTORY

In terms of tradition, no conference can lay claim to a richer history than ECAC Hockey. Home to 12 prestigious ice hockey programs, it is a conferece filled with traditon, legendary players, coaches and administrators and an exciting future. The league is the birthplace of collegiate ice hockey, and member institutions have been sponsoring the sport for more than a century. In fact, Harvard took part in the first intercollegiate hockey game (against Brown) among schools still sponsoring the sport Jan. 19, 1898, making the Crimson-Bears series college hockey's oldest active rivalry. Two years prior, Yale faced Johns Hopkins in the first recorded intercollegiate hockey game.

The conference's official formation was for the 1961-62 season, but that was hardly the beginning of organized Eastern hockey. The teams in the east competed against one another regularly, and two of the top teams from each of the Eastern and Western regions were selected for the NCAA tournament. Teams were listed by winning percentage, but no official standings were kept.

ECAC Hockey as we now know it is comprised of the hockey teams from Brown, Clarkson, Colgate, Cornell, Dartmouth, Harvard, Princeton, Quinnipiac, Rensselaer, St. Lawrence, Union and Yale. The ECAC schedule features a double round-robin format, which then determines seeding for the postseason tournament by virtue of standing at the end of the season.

* Preliminary game (1990-1997): In these seasons, the No. 10 seed played the No. 7 seed and No. 9 played No. 8 to advance into the quarterfinals. Harvard made just one appearance in this round, in the final season under the format.

 ECAC first round games were instituted with the 2003 championship, as the playoff format changed to a 12-team tournament in which the top four teams receive byes.

 The Lake Placid play-in game was instituted in the 1997-98 season, when the league went to a "final five" format in Lake Placid. In this format, quarterfinal winners advanced to the final five and were reseeded (if necessary) according to their regular-season finish. The No. 5 and No. 4 seeds played the preliminary game, with the winner advancing to the semifinal against the top seed. This format was abandoned after the 2002 championship.

ECAC HOCKEY ALL-DECADE TEAMS

1970s

Joe Cavanagh, Harvard (F, 1968-71) – Cavanagh splashed onto the scene in his sophomore year, winning ECAC Rookie of the Year honors (Ivy League freshmen were not eligible to compete on the varsity squad until 1973). He earned All-America honors in each of his three varsity seasons and twice led the Crimson to the NCAA tournament semifinals.

Other selections: Ron Wilson, (Providence, D, 1973-77); Rick Meagher (Boston University, F, 1973-77); Bill Blackwood (Clarkson, D, 1974-78); Lance Nethery (Cornell, F, 1975-79); Bruce Bullock (Clarkson, G, 1967-71); Jim Craig (Boston University, G, 1967-71); Brian Shields (Clarkson, G, 1973-77); Pete Brown (Boston University, D, 1972-76); Dave Taylor (Clarkson, F, 1973-77); Mike Eruzione (Boston University, F, 1973-77); Vic Stanfield (Boston University, D, 1971-75); Joe Mullen (Boston College, F, 1975-79); Gordie Clark (New Hampshire, F, 1970-74)

1980s

Mark Fusco, Harvard (D, 1979-83) – The 1980 ECAC Rookie of the Year was a three-time all-conference selection and the first ECAC hockey player to win the Hobey Baker Award (1983).

Scott Fusco, Harvard (F, 1982-86) – This two-time first-team All-American won the 1986 Hobey Baker Award. He was named all-conference first team three times and earned a spot on the NCAA All-Tournament team as a freshman.

Lane MacDonald, Harvard (F, 1984-87, 1988-89) – This two-time first-team All-American capped off a magnificent career by winning the Hobey Baker Award and being named the ECAC Player of the Year in 1989. The Crimson finished as the ECAC regular-season champion in each of his four seasons.

Other selections: Dave Fretz (Clarkson, D, 1981-85); Don Sylvestri (Clarkson, G, 1981-85); Ed Small (Clarkson, D, 1977-81); Steve Cruickshank (Clarkson, F, 1978-82); Joe Nieuwendyk (Cornell, F, 1984-87); Pete Lappin (St. Lawrence, F, 1984-88); Adam Oates (Rensselaer, F, 1981-85); Cleon Daskalakis (Boston University, G, 1980-84); Randy Velischek (Providence, D, 1979-83)

1990s

Peter Ciavaglia, Harvard (F, 1987-91) – Ciavaglia was a top forward for the Crimson during his four years, as he led the league in scoring in 1988-89 and again as a senior in 1990-91. Ciavaglia won the ECAC Player of the Year Award in his senior campaign and helped lead Harvard to the NCAA title as a sophomore.

Ted Drury, Harvard (F, 1989-93) – Drury had a terrific senior year for the Crimson, leading the team to the ECAC regular-season title and a berth in the NCAA Tournament. He was the ECAC Player of the Year in 1992-93 and was also a first-team All-America and all-conference selection. Drury went on to a successful career in the NHL.

Sean McCann, Harvard (D, 1990-94) – One of the top defensemen in Crimson history, McCann set the current single-season record for goals by a defenseman (22) as a senior. He helped his teams to regular-season titles in 1991-92, 1992-93 and 1993-94, and the ECAC Tournament championship in 1993-94. He also guided the squad to a berth in the NCAA Tournament semifinals during his senior campaign before losing in overtime to the eventual national champion, Lake Superior State.

Other selections: First Team: Martin St. Louis (Vermont, F, 1993-97); Todd White (Clarkson, F, 1993-97); Joe Juneau (Rensselaer, , 1987-91); Ray Giroux (Yale, D, 1994-98); Brian Mueller (Clarkson, D, 1991-95); Tim Thomas, (Vermont, G, 1993-97). Second Team: Eric Perrin (Vermont, F, 1993-97); Mike Harder (Colgate, F, 1993-97); Daniel Laperriere (St. Lawrence, D, 1988-92); Trevor Koenig (Union, G, 1994-98)

NCAA CHAMPIONSHIP HISTORY

The NCAA Men's Ice Hockey Championship has been held every year since 1948. Harvard won the 1989 title, has reached the final three times (1983, '86 and '89) and has made 21 trips to the tournament.

1989 NCAA CHAMPIONSHIP

"The Goal": Ed Krayer '89 (11) slides the puck past Minnesota goalie Robb Stauber after John Weisbrod '91 is hauled down in the slot.

"Peter Ciavaglia, perhaps the best faceoff man ever at Harvard, routinely won a draw in the Gopher zone. Krayer stepped into the left circle and laid a pass back to freshman Brian McCormack, who quickly sent a low shot netward, where Stauber made a pad save. Then, time stood still.

There was a rebound. It was there as clear as day for all to see. Weisbrod tried to get to it, but couldn't. He was being dragged down by a Minnesota defenseman. Finally, Krayer appeared.

He was cool, carrying the puck an extra stride across the crease, before sliding his backhander slowly toward its destination. Victory, like no other Harvard had ever experienced in athletics, had been achieved as the puck made its way across the line into the net."

— Jeff Bradley, Harvard News & Views, April 1989

Everyone knew Bill Cleary had a skilled team in 1989. Developed in the mold of its mentor—a former All-American, two-time Olympian and noted hockey purist who has always emphasized the fundamentals—the Cleary-led Crimson was a collection of pure skaters, deft puckhandlers and expert passers.

The only problem was, finesse teams didn't win national championships.

Or so the hockey world thought.

Harvard's clean, open-ice style of play may not have endeared the Crimson to hockey followers out West, where Eastern hockey had long been dismissed as a softer version of the game. But midway through the 1988-89 campaign, Harvard had forced everyone in the country to take notice. A convincing 5-1 thumping of previously unbeaten St. Lawrence on Jan. 14 launched Harvard to a perfect 15-0 record and the No. 1 ranking in the land.

The 15-0 mark matched the school's best start to a season since the 1930s. If that wasn't indication enough that 1989 was a special season in Harvard hockey, the Crimson's first Beanpot championship in eight years, clinched that February, surely hinted that this Crimson team was heading toward something extraordinary.

Harvard's top scoring line in 1989—dubbed the "Line of Fire"—remains arguably the best in school history, featuring captain Lane MacDonald, Allen Bourbeau and C.J. Young. MacDonald, the Hobey Baker Award winner in his senior season, and Bourbeau, also a Hobey finalist that year, had both played for the U.S. Olympic Team in Calgary in 1988. Young, along with fellow forwards Peter Ciavaglia and Ted Donato, would go on to play in the 1992 Olympics.

Led by that core of offensive stars and the rookie goaltending tandem of Allain Roy and Chuckie Hughes, the Crimson entered the playoffs with a 24-2 record, good for the ECAC regular-season championship.

The conference tournament, however, brought a stinging shock. In the seminfinals, Harvard dropped a 3-2 overtime decision to Vermont. The Crimson won its ensuing consolation match against Cornell, but the echoes of the jarring loss to Vermont were still ringing in its ears. It was, to say the least, a sobering defeat for a team with visions as grand as Harvard's.

But while some teams never recover after falling back to Earth, the great teams learn from the experience and find a way to rally back. To this day, Cleary still maintains that the loss to Vermont was precisely the dose of reality his team needed as it geared up for its championship run.

Harvard had as tough a challenge as one could imagine to start the NCAA tournament, facing off against defending champ Lake Superior State in the best-of-three quarterfinals. But after securing a 4-2 victory in the series opener, Harvard was able to complete the sweep in the second game, as Ciavaglia pulled off a hat trick to guide Harvard to a come-from-behind 5-2 win. In his postgame remarks, Laker coach Frank Anzalone, who had served on the Hobey Baker selection committee, admitted that the group had committed a gaffe in not naming Ciavaglia as a finalist.

Hobey consideration may have been nice, but Ciavaglia had other matters to attend to—namely Michigan State, the Crimson's semifinal opponent. Against the Spartans, Ciavaglia racked up a goal and three assists as Harvard exploded for six goals and Roy made the lead stand up. The rookie, who finished with 30 saves to earn all-tournament recognition, made at least two positively breathtaking stops, including a sprawling stick save on a wraparound effort by Michigan State's Bobby Reynolds in the first period. The Crimson rolled, 6-3, setting the stage for a clash of the titans in the championship game against Minnesota.

Playing in St. Paul, the Crimson wore their home white uniforms, but there was no doubt that the Golden Gophers owned the home-ice advantage. The pro-Minnesota crowd erupted early in the first period, when the Gophers drew first blood. But Harvard came storming back in the second, as Donato scored on a power play with a slap shot to tie the game.

Roy had been the hero against Michigan State, but in the championship, it was Hughes' turn in the Crimson's two-goalie rotation. The local product played beyond his years, as his 33 saves on the night kept the game knotted at 2-2 until late in the third period. Then, with seven minutes to play, Donato scored a second time to give Harvard a 3-2 lead.

But as his teammates mobbed him in celebration, the cool-headed Donato, who would be named the tournament MVP, was reminding his teammates, "This one's not over!" Indeed, Minnesota would not go quietly into the night. With just under five minutes to play, the Golden Gophers capitalized on a Harvard penalty to knot the score at three goals apiece. This epic battle was now headed to sudden-death overtime.

Early in the extra period, Minnesota pushed Harvard to the brink of defeat, ringing a would-be game-winning blast off the post of the Crimson goal. But hearing what was almost its own death knell, the Crimson rallied back to life. A face off in the Minnesota zone. Ciavaglia, perhaps the best draw man Harvard has ever had, tapped the puck to Ed Krayer, who fed a pass to freshman Brian McCormack. The freshman unleashed a low shot that bounced off the pad of Minnesota goalie Robb Stauber.

The rebound was loose. Finally, Krayer appeared and was able to corral the puck. Krayer, the senior veteran who had taken 1988 off from school, had struggled throughout much of 1989 to rediscover his niche on the team, finishing the regular season with just 14 points. In the playoffs, however, he re-emerged as a leader. And now, on the grandest of stages, he was poised to make sure history would never forget his name. In what appeared like slow motion, Krayer slid the puck through the legs of the diving Stauber and across the goal line. Victory belonged to the Crimson by the count of 4-3.

All at once, Harvard gained its first NCAA championship in any team sport and most of those in attendance, as well as any remaining skeptics of Eastern hockey, fell into a state of deafening quiet.

The scene immediately following Krayer's goal was priceless. In one of the more enduring, utterly heartwearming images from that magical night in Minneapolis, here was Cleary, with his face aglow and arms aloft, scrambling across the ice desperately looking for someone to hug.

The coach eventually found his players, huddled together in celebration. But what Cleary found in that joyous mob was more than just great hockey players; it was, in fact, a band of pure salt-of-the-earth types, a team that all of Harvard—and indeed, all of hockey—could take pride in.

He found MacDonald, the soft-spoken captain who played his entire career through chronic migraines that eventually impaired his vision. Bourbeau, the sixth-year senior who, Cleary once joked, had been around so long he'd probably played against Hobey Baker. He found Ciavaglia, whose play was so selfless that the coaches were constantly ordering him to shoot more; then Hughes, the irrepressible freshman and the son of a Boston police officer. He found Donato, who had turned down full scholarships to other schools for the chance to play at Harvard, where he worked part-time in the equipment room to help pay his tuition.

Cleary had won with a roster of kids who were students first, athletes second. They had won the title the hard way, facing the best three teams the West had to offer. As one astute Harvard observer noted, "the league with the reputation for being the toughest in college hockey was not tough enough in 1989."

And they did it all by virtue of their speed and skill, without clutching and grabbing, proving that hockey as it was meant to be played would never go out of style.

"Now hockey has a new set of heroes," wrote David Nyhan '62 of the Boston Globe three days after Harvard clinched the title. "What Cleary did for these kids and the world at large was to show them how a gentleman can take a squad of students and make them national champions. College athletics had forgotten that."

In the hotel lobby after the game, Cleary stood atop a coffee table amid a crowd of Harvard fans that had made the trip to Minneapolis. Reveling in what remains Harvard's crowning team achievement, Cleary raised the championship trophy and proclaimed through his boyish grin, "This isn't just for the hockey team, this is for every Harvard alumnus in the country … in the world."

BEANPOT TOURNAMENT

On Dec. 26, 1952, the four Division I hockey-playing schools in Boston came together for a two-day tournament at Boston Arena. The brainchild of sports promoter Walter Brown, the tournament was called the "New England Invitation Hockey Tournament." In the first game, Boston University defeated Northeastern, 4-1, while Harvard needed overtime in the nightcap to edge Boston College, 3-2. A total of 3,832 fans saw the Crimson claim the first championship the next night with a 7-4 win against the Terriers.

The following year, the tournament moved to Boston Garden, where a mere 711 fans turned out for the opening round in January. The event, soon to be called "The Beanpot," would rapidly grow in prestige, and the pride of being known as the best team in Boston produced fiercely competitive hockey that attracted the local fandom. By the 1960s, the tournament was being played on the familiar first two Mondays in February and was drawing sellout crowds to the Garden. One coach proclaimed the Beanpot "the social event of the season." With the closing of the Boston Garden in 1995, the Beanpot shifted next door to FleetCenter (now TD Banknorth Garden) in 1996. The event continues to draw capacity crowds and remains one of the most anticipated events in college hockey.

This prestigious event celebrates its 57th year in 2009, and the tournament promises to be as competitive as ever. The Crimson will take on Boston University in the first round Feb. 2 and will play either Boston College or Northeastern the following Monday, Feb. 9.

HOBEY BAKER MEMORIAL AWARD

Presented by the Decathalon Athletic Club in Bloomington, Minn., the Hobey Baker Memorial Award was established in 1981 and is awarded annually to the outstanding collegiate hockey player in the United States. A 40-pound, 16-inch-tall figure made of bronze and clear, etched acrylic, the Hobey has become recognized as college hockey's premier individual honor.

Harvard has produced three Hobey Baker Memorial Award winners: defenseman Mark Fusco '83 in 1983, forward Scott Fusco '85-86 in 1986 and forward Lane MacDonald '88-89 in 1989. The Harvard trio are the only Hobey winners in ECAC history, and only two schools, Minnesota and Minnesota Duluth have had more winners (four each). To this day, the Fuscos represent the only brother combination to win the Hobey and are one of four sets of brothers to be finalists. (Ted Drury '93 and younger brother Chris (Boston University '98) were both finalists. Chris won the Hobey as a senior.)

Harvard players have been named finalists on six other occasions. Scott Fusco and MacDonald were finalists in the seasons prior to their winning the award, while Allen Bourbeau '89, Peter Ciavaglia '91, Drury, Sean McCann '94 and Dov Grumet-Morris '05 were all finalists during their senior seasons.

BILL CLEARY '56

William J. Cleary, Jr. '56 — whose association with Harvard spanned six decades and included experiences as a student-athlete, coach and administrator — retired June 30, 2001. His Harvard career began in his early years as a program seller at Harvard Stadium, continued through his days as a standout player, included his 19-year head coaching tenure and concluded with his 11-year term as the Nichols Family Director of Athletics.

Cleary ranks among the greatest athletes to play for Harvard — lettering in both baseball and ice hockey — and still holds or shares seven school records in hockey. He was a first-team All-America selection in 1954-55 when he helped the Crimson to the Beanpot title, a berth in the NCAA Frozen Four and a 17-3-1 record.

In 1956, Cleary was a member of the U.S. Olympic hockey team that captured a silver medal. Four years later, he was the top scorer for the U.S. team that won gold at Squaw Valley, Calif. Cleary was also the leading scorer for the 1957 U.S. National Team and captain and MVP for the 1959 U.S. National Team.

Cleary, a Cambridge, Mass., native, graduated from Belmont Hill School in 1952. At Harvard, he earned a Bachelor of Arts in government and served in the United States Army from 1955 until 1957. After several years as a high school and college hockey official, he returned to Harvard in 1968 as the freshman hockey coach. After spending some time as the assistant varsity coach, he began his tenure as the men's hockey head coach in 1971. He posted a 324-201-22 record in 19 seasons. In 1989, he guided the Crimson to a 31-3 record and the NCAA championship, the first NCAA team title in school history. Under Cleary, Harvard reached college hockey's final four on seven occasions and advanced to the national championship game three times. Harvard also won two ECAC tournament titles, four Beanpot championships and 11 Ivy League championships under his guidance.

On numerous occasions, Cleary has been recognized for both his athletic ability and commitment to amateur athletics. He was the recipient of the Hobey Baker Legend of Hockey Award in 1993. In 1997, Cleary received the Lester Patrick Award for contributions to hockey, was named to the NCAA Ice Hockey 50th Anniversary Team, was chosen a U.S. Hockey Player of the Decade (1956-66) and was inducted into the International Ice Hockey Hall of Fame. In 1989, he was inducted into the United States Olympic Hall of Fame, which was followed by his selection as one of the "100 Golden Olympians" by the U.S. Olympic Committee in 1996. In 1999, he was named by Sports Illustrated as Massachusetts' 33rd best athlete of the 20th century. The Boston Globe, meanwhile, placed him 68th on its list of the top 100 New England athletes of the past century.

Cleary's retirement brought forth a landslide of recognition for the Harvard legend. On March 2, 2001, Cleary's No. 4 hockey jersey was retired in a ceremony at the Bright Center between periods of the Crimson's meeting with archrival Yale. It is the only jersey number retired in any sport in the history of Harvard Athletics, which includes 41 varsity sports and over 150 years of intercollegiate athletic tradition. Harvard's three Hobey Baker Award winners — Mark Fusco '83, Scott Fusco '85-86 and Lane MacDonald '88-89 — were on hand to watch as Tim Stay '01, who wore Cleary's No. 4, skated from the dressing room, removed his sweater and surrendered the number to Cleary at center ice. Stay wore No. 3 for the remainder of his career.

Two weeks later in Lake Placid, N.Y., Cleary was bestowed another honor, as ECAC commissioner Phil Buttafuoco announced that the trophy which is awarded to the regular-season champion would thereafter be known as the Cleary Cup, honoring the longtime coach and administrator for his contributions to the ECAC and college hockey as a whole.

ALL-AMERICANS

Harvard hockey players have a long history of being among the best players in the nation. Over the years, 24 different Crimson players have been named first- or second-team All-America a total of 36 times. Joe Cavanagh '71 and Mark Fusco '83 lead the steller group with three first-team selections each, while five players have received the recognition twice during their careers.

Following two seasons, 1985-86 and 1993-94, Harvard landed three players on the All-America teams. Following six seasons, there have been two Crimson players named to the squads. The most recent players to join these prestigious ranks were defenseman Noah Welch '05 and goaltender Dov Grumet-Morris '05, who earned first- and second-team honors, respectively, after the 2004-05 season.
