

IVY LEAGUE HOCKEY HISTORY

League competition between Ivy teams began in 1934 and, except for the war years of 1944-46, has operated without interruption. Originally the league was composed of Dartmouth, Harvard, Princeton and Yale, and was known as the Quadrangular League. Army joined the group in 1941-42, making it the Pentagonal League. Army dropped out in 1946-47 and was replaced by Brown in 1948-49. The teams became formally known as the Ivy Group in 1955-56. Cornell became a member in 1958-59, and Pennsylvania joined in 1967-68. Penn withdrew its team after the 1977-78 season, when the school dropped hockey as a varsity sport. The eighth league member, Columbia, has never fielded a varsity hockey team as a member of the Ivy Group.

The 1963 team poses with the Hobey Baker Trophy, given annually to the Ivy champion. Holding the trophy is team captain Tim Taylor '63, who went on to a long coaching career with Yale and the U.S. National Team.
