

HISTORY

BASKETBALL HISTORY

The Beginnings

Basketball was introduced on the Harvard campus in 1900 by John Kirkland Clark, an 1899 Yale graduate enrolled at the Harvard Law School. Clark, who captained the Elis as a senior, served in the same capacity for the Crimson's first entry and is likely the only person who can boast to having captained teams at both schools.

Harvard debuted with an 11-8 season, highlighted by a victory over Holy Cross at Hemenway Gym in its first game against an intercollegiate opponent. The Crimson hit double figures in wins twice more that decade, finishing 11-5 in 1904-05 and 12-4 the following winter.

A Successful Return

Basketball was absent from campus between 1909-20 but returned through the efforts of director of physical training William Greer, Daniel Kelley of the physical training department, and Bernard Damon '20. Harvard called upon Edward Wachter, a successful coach and "the dean of U.S. basketball shooters," to rebuild the program. Wachter held the post for 13 years and enjoyed a span of nine winning seasons in a 10-year period, including a 16-6 mark in 1921-22. That Crimson squad swept rival Yale, 26-13 and 33-30.

It was during Wachter's tenure that the team moved to the Indoor Athletic Building. The IAB — familiar to today's readers as the Malkin Athletic Center — housed Harvard basketball from 1930 until the Crimson headed to Lavietes Pavilion (then Briggs Cage) in 1982.

On To The NCAAs

To many observers, Harvard's finest team was its 1945-46 NCAA tournament squad, coached by Floyd S. Stahl and captained by Wyndol Gray '46. One of the greatest players to suit up for the Crimson, Gray went on to star for the NBA's Boston Celtics and St. Louis Hawks. The efforts of Gray, Louis Decsi '46, John Gantt '47, Paul Champion '47, and guard Saul Mariaschin '47 - who would also play for the Celtics - allowed the Crimson to go through the regular season with just one defeat. Harvard earned its NCAA berth on the strength of a thrilling 39-37 triumph over Yale at a packed Boston Arena, and the team finished 19-3, which still stands as the school record for wins.

Notable Names

Harvard posted a 16-9 record in 1957-58 and continued building its strong tradition in the 1960s under coach Floyd Wilson. One of his best players was Merle McClung '65, a first team All-Ivy selection who later received a Rhodes Scholarship and, in 1993, was inducted into the school's hall of fame. McClung and Keith Sedlacek '66 helped the Crimson to perhaps the most talked-about upset in its history, an 88-82 win over Bill Bradley and the Princeton Tigers

(who were bound for the Final Four) in 1964.

Notables who suited up for Harvard in the 60s were J. Michael Crichton '64, author of Jurassic Park, and former vice-president Al Gore '69, who played for the 12-4 freshman team of 1965-66.

In the early 1970s, Harvard featured great scorers such as Dale Dover '71 (1,021 points), Tony Jenkins '74 (1,079) and James Brown '73 (1,242). Brown was inducted into the University's hall of fame with Floyd Lewis '73, who holds the single-season rebounding mark of 343. This duo helped the Crimson win the 1973 Beanpot championship with victories over Boston College and Northeastern.

Later in the decade, Glenn Fine '78, Harvard's career assist record holder until 1994, became the program's second Rhodes Scholar.

Harvard also had several well-known and successful coaches during this period. Tom "Satch" Sanders, a member of eight world championship teams while with the Celtics, was the Crimson's head coach from 1973 until 1977. K.C. Jones — another Celtics legend who coached Boston to a pair of NBA titles in the mid-80s — served as a Harvard assistant.

Setting An NCAA Standard

There were many more standout players in the 80s, including Don Fleming '82, a rare three-time first team All-Ivy selection. Joe Carrabino '84-85, the school's all-time scoring leader with 1,880 points, helped Harvard to a 15-9 mark in 1984-85 that included an 8-0 start. From 1988 until 1992, Ralph James '92 became the first player to lead the Crimson in scoring four-straight years. He set the program's single-game scoring mark with 41 points in a 105-97 win over Penn at The Palestra during his junior season.

In 1983-84, Harvard established an NCAA record for team free throw shooting that still stands more than two decades later. The Crimson hit an amazing 82.2 percent of its attempts, prompting former Louisiana State coach Dale Brown to have his team don "Beat Harvard" t-shirts for several years to get them to concentrate better at the foul line.

Another Impressive Run

Over the past several seasons, Harvard has been one of the Ivy League's most successful programs, boasting the circuit's third-best record since 1995-96.

The 1998-99 season was notable for impressive nonleague wins at Boston College and Santa Clara, while 2002-03 marked the eighth straight year Harvard reached double figures in victories, another school record.

A series of tremendous players have led the Crimson to these heights. Tim Hill '99 graduated as Harvard's all-time assists leader. Dan Clemente '01, a two-time first team All-Ivy selection, graduated with the most three-pointers in program history (220) and finished fourth on the school's all-time scoring list (1,484 points). Both players were Ivy Rookie of the Year recipients.

Other prominent players from recent times are Kyle Snowden '97, twice a first team all-league choice and the program's all-time leading rebounder (913), and career steals leader Andrew Gellert '02 (242), who led the Ivies in that category in three-straight years.

Elliott Prasse-Freeman '03 became the league's career assists leader after leading the Ivies in helpers in all four of his seasons. Brady Merchant '03 also capped an outstanding career by setting Harvard's single-game scoring record with 45 points in the 2003 season finale against Brown.

Matt Stehle '06 finished a standout career with a pair of All-Ivy accolades as well as ESPN The Magazine All-America status after a 2005-06 season that saw him rank among the league leaders in an astounding nine statistical categories. After leading the league in rebounding for two seasons and starting the last 81 games of his career, Stehle finished his career ranked among the top Crimson of all-time in points (1,151), rebounds (689), blocked shots (111) and steals (142).

The 2006-07 season saw two more seniors, Brian Cusworth '07 and Jim Goffredo '07 emerge as stars with Cusworth averaging 17.4 points and 9.1 rebounds while Goffredo garnered ESPN The Magazine All-America status by averaging 15.4 points per game.

In the last two seasons, the Crimson has defeated Michigan and Boston College amidst a rising stream of talent and competitiveness.
