Ram Legends: Frank Keaney

When most people think of Frank Keaney, they remember racehorse basketball, fast-breaking offenses and the Rams piling up victory after victory on the hardwood.

But Keaney spent 21 years (1920-40) as Rhode Island's head football coach, as well. He is the school's second winningest coach registering 70 victories during his tenure. Inheriting a team that had posted a 0-7-1 record in 1919, he sought to rebuild the Rams, a process that would take three years. From 1929-36, Rhode Island posted winning records in seven of eight seasons, going 37-26-4 (.582) over that span.

His biggest win on the gridiron came on Oct. 5, 1935 when the Rams battled powerful Brown. The Rams had lost to the Bears 23 straight times and were shutout in the first 13 games between the two teams.

Such was the Rams' record entering the contest against their intrastate rival. As coach Frank Keaney led his charges onto the Brown Stadium gridiron in front of 15,000 fans, a chorus of whistles and catcalls greeted their new Keaney Blue uniforms and white Kangaroo leather shoes, probably the first football team ever to be so attired.

As usual, Brown was favored against the Rams. The Rams had lost their first two games of the season without even scoring a point. Rhode Island lost the season-opener, 32-0, at Holy Cross before falling, 7-0, at Maine a week later. The game was the season-opener for Brown.

Brown had 80 players in uniform while the Rams dressed just 13. Despite their decided underdog status, Keaney had his team prepared for coach D.O. McLaughry's Brown squad. The game was a thriller that is still talked about today as one of the greatest games ever between the two state teams.

Rhode Island marched 94 yards for a score in the first quarter and hit pay dirt on a nifty gallop by Bob Mudge to put the Rams ahead, 13-0, at halftime. Brown rallied and scored on a 65-yard lateral play in the third quarter to cut the lead to 13-7. But the stubborn Ram defense was never again threatened and a late interception by Justin McCarthy assured a victory for the Rams.

Pandemonium broke loose when the game ended. Keaney was carried the length of the field by his ecstatic players and the Rhode Island faithful. The victory celebration over the Ivy League power lasted several days with a dance celebration at Rhodes-on-the-Pawtuxet, a campus rally on the Quad and a full Monday holiday for the entire college courtesy of college president, Carl Woodward.

A portly, wide-faced Irishman, Keaney belonged to the old fashioned school of coaching that stressed character over technique. "My psychology of it is that you've got to feel victory if you're going to win," he declared. To his players, he was fond of emphasizing the difference between Will to Win and Love to Lose. "As far as techniques of the game, he was probably the worst coach I ever had," admitted one player. "But as far as being able to psyche teams up and get them ready for games, he was super. He had a great way with all his players, from the substitute to the star."

To compensate for football teams that lacked size and number, Keaney stressed conditioning above all else, seeking both to outlast opponents and to minimize injuries. His players were expected to play every minute of every game.

Impatient with the conservative style of play then in fashion, he searched for ways to open up the game. In football he was one of the first to employ the double wing formation, running it with double and triple backfield lateral plays that flabbergasted coaches who shrank from any thrown ball as if it were a live grenade. His baseball teams ran opponents dizzy. The fast break was but the logical extension of this impulse to basketball.

That Keaney cared more for the opinion of the fans than of his peers was made evident when he advised his fellow coaches at a New York luncheon, "Give the crowds action. If some coach puts up a screwy defense, use a screwier offense. Then if you lose, pivot and go home." To critics of his style he said simply, "We don't say we're right, but you've got to stop us."

During his long coaching and teaching tenure at Rhode Island - spanning more than four decades from the 1920s to the late 1940s - Keaney was constantly experimenting with new ideas both as a coach and as a chemist, as well as a foot hardener suitable, a potent-smelling lineament for aches and pains and distinctive school color "Keaney Blue," also known as "Rhody Blue."

Before Keaney concocted his special shade of powdery blue, Rhode Island's colors had been white and royal blue. But Keaney, after spending considerable time mixing a variety of blue and white paints together in his on-campus laboratory, came up with his special shade of blue - a light, soft tint all but the same color as the University of North Carolina's. Later, after Keaney Gym was finished in 1953, Keaney set up a small lab in a third floor room - now the football player's lounge - in the southwestern corner of the building where he refined the color to match his exacting specifications.

But Keaney had something more; a restless imagination and a flair for showmanship. The fast break in basketball was not the only product of his maverick genius; there was a touch of originality in everything he did. A native of Boston, Keaney graduated from Bates in 1911. He played professional baseball and coached high school before coming to Rhode Island in 1920 as athletic director, coach of all sports and chemistry instructor. Later he even produced a light blue dye, known as "Keaney blue," a color his teams wore in place of the school's official color, royal blue.

In 28 years as Rhode Island's legendary basketball coach, Keaney compiled an impressive 401-124 record, but the numbers scarcely measure his achievement. He turned a game of patterned plodding into forty minutes of frenzied excitement while overflow crowds, delighted at the spectacle of racehorse basketball, howled their approval. In an era when most teams did well to score 40 or 50 points a game, Rhode Island averaged nearly 80 and routinely led the nation in scoring.

Keaney retired from active coaching in 1948 and was inducted into the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame in 1960, the Hall of Fame's second year. Frank William Keaney passed away on Oct. 10, 1967 at the age of 81.

Ram Legends: Hal Kopp

In May, 1998, Hal Kopp, the winningest football coach in Rhode Island annals, passed away at the age of 89. Never far from the gridiron, he served as an honorary assistant coach and helped broadcast Rhode Island football games on radio well into his 80s and was a regular at Ram football games until 1997.

Growing up at Perry Point, Md., Kopp was exposed to the world of athletics at an early age. Perry Point was a government reservation hospital complex, and at the end of World War I, the reservation employed Kopp's father and kept young Hal busy in the recreation program.

He learned to play baseball, mostly because he was the only one who would agree to crouch down behind the plate and catch the patients who were pitching. Many of the patients were shell-shocked from the war, others had lung damage from mustard gas attacks, and others were unbalanced for one reason or another. But every afternoon during the summer, the instructors would be out on the field working with the patients. And soon Kopp became a regular in their games.

In high school, he also took up basketball, soccer and football, and it wasn't long before people started noticing the talented halfback's gift for the gridiron game. By his senior year, he decided he would attend Western Maryland and play his college ball for coach Dick Harlow. A rugged 200-pound running back, Kopp gained more yards against archrival Maryland in his sophomore season than the entire Terrapin backfield. In his senior season, he was selected to play in the very first North-South game, held in Baltimore Stadium. Aligned with players from Mississippi, Alabama and throughout the deep South, Kopp and his teammates practiced for one week before the big game. The day of the game, it snowed six inches. For many of his teammates it was the first time they had seen snow.

A good spring on the baseball diamond helped him garner a brief stint with the Washington Senators after college, but after bouncing around the baseball ranks, he stumbled upon a coaching opportunity with a former Harlow assistant, Jimmy Dunn at Northeastern, and decided to take it. He had married his college sweetheart, June, and the couple had one son, Karl.

His career in coaching was just beginning to take hold when Pearl Harbor was bombed, plunging the United States into World War II. Kopp was called up as a first lieutenant and saw combat during the allied invasion of North Africa. But his coaching career was not on hold for the duration. Due to a stateside assignment, he was able to return home to serve as assistant coach at Brown and later at Connecticut, while head of the ROTC program. After the war ended, Kopp was discharged from the Army and joined Harlow as a line coach at Harvard. After Harlow's retirement from coaching, Kopp spent a spring with Connecticut, before moving on to Yale. When Connecticut began looking for a new head coach, Kopp believed his time had come. What he didn't know was that a former teammate would beat him out for the job.

But all was not lost. At the same time, Rhode Island, a small school whose football program was third in athletic importance to basketball and track, was shopping for a head coach. Kopp was offered the job at his first meeting with Vice President Dr. Harold Browning. In his book, "I've Seen It All," Kopp writes about his first few months at the URI helm: "With the help of the alumni secretary, Charlie Hall, the student body and Dr. Browning, I was able to offer a few scholarships to some of the Rhode Island high school players.

"I was wont to say that I had 21 boys and 19 sea gulls at our first spring practice. Despite my small squad, we did well the first year. In fact, we beat the University of Connecticut. It was great satisfaction to me — beating (new Connecticut head coach) Art Valpey. While I was at Rhode Island, my teams never lost to Connecticut, Massachusetts or Northeastern. We also won three out of four games with Brown."

After a 3-5 season in 1950, Kopp was called back to serve in the Korean War. Reassured his job would be secure when he returned, he reported to Fort Benning, Ga., where he became the athletic officer of the Combat Training Center and coached football and basketball. When the time came for duty assignments, Kopp was sent to Bremerhaven, Germany to begin a football program for morale purposes. When he returned to URI in 1952, he had only a week to get his players ready for the annual Brown game. His team defeated Brown for the first time in 14 years, and Kopp was on his way. The 7-1 record of his 1952 team was the best in school history.

He spent five seasons at the URI helm, and compiled a 28-11-2 record, the best winning percentage in URI coaching history. He was named the Rhode Island Coach of the Year three times and the New England Coach of the Year in 1955, after piloting his team through an undefeated regular season and then to a postseason game at the Refrigerator Bowl in Evansville, Ind.

In 1956, Kopp left Rhode Island to become the first non-Mormon head coach at Brigham Young. After three seasons there, the Mormon lifestyle and the Hal Kopp philosophies were blending like oil and water. He knew his contract would not be renewed and so he accepted a position at Boston University as a line coach.

After coaching eight colleges, two all-star games, and two army teams, Kopp decided in 1964 to give high school coaching a try. He was just as successful in the high school ranks, putting together an undefeated season in 1965 and continuing until the 1971 season. Then, he decided to retire from coaching. But giving up an addiction cold turkey is never easy; and so when Bentley called to say they were going to start a program, the renowned coach knew he had to help. He spent the next five seasons developing Bentley into a solid Division III program.

June and Hal both retired from the Massachusetts school system at the same time, moving back home to Narragansett. But he still couldn't stay away from the game — after all, it had been his life for nearly 70 years. In 1993, he surpassed Amos Alonzo Stagg's longevity record as the oldest active coach in college football.

In his own words, Hal Kopp's career was symbolized by "So many friends. So many victories. So much in the 'win' column, after all."

Ram Legends: Tom Ehrhardt

It has been more than a decade since Rhode Island quarterback Tom Ehrhardt and his outstanding supporting cast made back-to-back appearances in the NCAA I-AA playoffs, but if any memories are eternal, then the 1984 and 1985 Ram teams not only etched their place in the Rhode Island record books, but also in the minds of their faithful fans.

Those two teams are a part of Rhode Island lore, and the atmosphere surrounding them permeated throughout the state and the region. "I remember thinking that URI was never going to lose when he (Ehrhardt) was in the game," said Ram alumnus and assistant gymnastics coach Mike Franco. "You had a sense that he would get it done. He had an intangible quality that allowed him to put his team over the top and he and (Brian) Forster were a great tandem."

The 1984 and 1985 teams combined for a 20-6 record, won two Yankee Conference Championships, and won two NCAA playoff games - the last Ram teams to make the post-season. Ehrhardt is quick though to credit his teammates for the teams' success. "Our offensive line was strong, we had a solid defense and great receivers," said Ehrhardt, who holds every Ram passing record after spending just two years at Rhode Island.

Ehrhardt and his golden arm transferred to Kingston from then Division II C.W. Post because he liked coach Bob Griffin's pass oriented offensive style. But in his first start for the Rams in 1984, he was far from great, completing just seven of 14 passes for 71 yards and suffered two interceptions in a 31-21 win over Howard - a game he left injured in the third quarter.

Following a win over Lafayette in his second game and a loss to Holy Cross in week three, Ehrhardt began to click. He passed for 272 yards and two touchdowns as the Rams blasted Maine 27-0. A week later, he showed his prowess, throwing for 410 yards and five touchdowns in a 34-13 rout of state rival Brown.

The Rams rolled through their schedule unscathed for the next four weeks as Ehrhardt had passing performances of 408 yards against Massachusetts and 425 versus Northeastern. With an 8-1 record and a perfect Yankee Conference mark, the Rams traveled to Durham, New Hampshire and dropped a 14-12 decision to the Wildcats. In the final week of the regular season, Ehrhardt tossed three touchdown passes to Dameon Reilly and one to Bob Donfield in a 29-19 win over Connecticut giving the Rams the league title.

After an opening round playoff bye, Rhode Island hosted Richmond at Meade Stadium. Ehrhardt, who along with Griffin were inducted into the school's Athletic Hall of Fame in 1996, rose to the occasion. The Rhode Island signal-caller completed 34-of-53 passes for 389 yards and Forster caught a school record 18 passes as Rhode Island downed the Spiders 23-17 setting up a semifinal match-up at Montana State.

Like Ehrhardt's first game in Keaney blue, the last game of the 1984 season is one he wishes he could forget. With the Rams leading 20-18, Ehrhardt forced a pass that was intercepted on the Montana State three-yard line and returned 97 yards for a touchdown. Rhode Island did not recover, fumbling the ensuing kickoff to set up another Bobcat score. The Rams lost 32-20. "I still have the tape of that game," said Ehrhardt. "You look at it and say 'Why did you throw it?' That interception probably cost us the national championship."

If the end of the 1984 season was disappointing, 1985 started off even worse for Ehrhardt and the heralded Rams. Three plays into the season-opener against Delaware, Ehrhardt left with an injured hip pointer and the Rams fell to the Blue Hens 29-13. Rhode Island also lost All-America defensive back Tony Hill for the season on the fourth defensive play of the game when he fractured his arm.

With Ehrhardt out of action against Howard in the next game, backup quarterback Greg Farland stepped in and threw two touchdown passes and the defense stepped up its play in a 46-0 drubbing of the Bison.

The return of Ehrhardt in week three saw him throw for 357 yards in a 34-14 win over Maine, but the following week, Brown would avenge their 1984 loss with a 32-27 win over Rhode Island despite 461 yards passing by Ehrhardt. Forster tied his own record of 18 catches for another record 327 yards in the loss.

As they did in 1984, the Rams went on a tear, winning their next seven games to finish the regular season at 9-2. Ehrhardt connected for 520 yards passing in a 45-38 win over Lehigh. It was November 16, 1985 when the Rams hosted the Huskies with an undefeated Yankee Conference season hanging in the balance, and after Ehrhardt hit for two first quarter TD passes and a 14-0 lead, it looked like Rhode Island was in control. Connecticut responded with five straight touchdowns and a 35-14 lead. At the half, the Rams trailed 42-28. The URI defense responded in the second half by shutting down the Husky attack while Ehrhardt continued to work his magic as he tossed four more touchdown passes after the break and the Rams rolled to a 56-42 win and the conference's automatic berth to the NCAA playoffs.

Ehrhardt's 566 yards passing set a new school standard as were his eight touchdown passes and his .667 passing percentage. Forster, who was named to the Yankee Conference all-time team, caught 16 passes for 205 yards and Reilly hauled in nine passes for 204 yards in the game.

"That was a memorable game," said a modest Ehrhardt, "because we fell behind by 21 points and came back and won to have an undefeated conference season."

Rhode Island opened the playoffs with a 35-27 win over Akron in Kingston and Ehrhardt was sizzling as he completed a school record 43 passes. In round two, the Rhode Island signal-caller was picked off six times in a 59-15 loss to Furman. He completed 39 of a record 78 attempts, but the interceptions, of which one was returned for a touchdown, led to the end of the season and Ehrhardt's impressive career.

"It was great experience," Ehrhardt, the only Rhode Island football player ever to have their uniform number (12) retired, said later. "As you get older and you work and have a family, you look back and appreciate it. That was really neat and I was lucky to experience it and we were fortunate to have a great team."

A great team led by a great player which left great memories and set a few records along the way.

Ram Legends: Pat Abbruzzi

It has been said that persistence pays off. For Rhode Island football coach Hal Kopp, it sure did. If it was not for his determination in recruiting local high school star Pasquale "Pat" Abbruzzi to spend his Saturday afternoons on the grass of Meade Stadium, Abbruzzi might have set a number of rushing records at Notre Dame or Boston College.

A life-long native of Warren, R.I., Abbruzzi was a three-sport star athlete in football, basketball and baseball at Warren High. Kopp had his eye on the All-State player and convinced the local product to stay in Rhode Island even though the Fighting Irish and Eagles had a heavy interest in him.

Kopp knew Abbruzzi had the potential to be good back, one to build his offense around and he didn't want this prized recruit to slip away. His hard-nosed pile-driving style of running, reminiscent of John Riggins and Earl Campbell, was tailor-made for Kopp's style of ball-control offense.

"He was the reason why I went to the University of Rhode Island," said Abbruzzi.

The 5-foot-9, 206-pound Abbruzzi was a hard-nosed, rock solid player who had the physical stature to take the constant pounding that he would take on a weekly basis.

In his four years at URI, the Rams had a 22-10 (.710) record and earned shares of the Yankee Conference title twice. In his freshman season, Abbruzzi recorded the longest run from scrimmage with a 99-yard touchdown run in the third game of the season against New Hampshire. The mark still stands today.

In the Rams' 27-7 win at New Hampshire on October 4, 1952, Abbruzzi was the story as he bulldozed his way for three touchdowns and set a single-game record of 306 rushing yards, a record that has never been equaled. He finished the season with eight touchdowns, rushing for 1,189 yards (then a school record).

He started his third year in the Rams' backfield with two touchdowns versus Northeastern in the season-opener. By the time the 1953 campaign ended, he had rambled for 959 yards on 170 carries (5.6 yards per carry) and scored a touchdown in each of the Rams' eight games that year.

In his senior year, a nagging ankle injury suffered in the season opener at Northeastern slowed him all season. But in his final game of his Ram career, Abbruzzi ran for 221 yards and two touchdowns in a 20-0 win over Connecticut. A fitting ending to a remarkable career.

Abbruzzi left a lasting impression on the Ram record books. He is URI's all-time ground gainer with 3,389 yards on 562 carries, is the leader in career touchdowns (25) and is fourth in career points (150). At Rhode Island, he established himself as the greatest back in team history and one of the best ever from the state.

The Rams' Little All-American in 1953 and '54, Abbruzzi holds a dozen New England, Yankee Conference and Rhode Island rushing records. Many of the URI records that he broke were held by his brother, "Duke," who played on the Rams from 1937-41.

Abbruzzi is the only player in the history of the Yankee Conference to be selected to the All-Conference team. He was selected the Rhode Island Athlete of the Year in 1953 and Rhode Island Italian-American Athlete of the Year in 1953 and 1954. In addition, he was also chosen as an All-New England selection twice.

After his illustrious career at URI, Abbruzzi opted to take his talents north of the border to Montreal, Canada. Despite being drafted by the Baltimore Colts in the third round in 1953, he decided on Canada because of a conflict regarding a bonus. Abbruzzi chose to play for the Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League. He played four seasons in Montreal and became one of the greatest all-time players in Canadian Football history.

In his first year, he recorded eight 100-yard games and subsequently was named the Canadian Football League's Player-of-the-Year in 1955. A member of the Alouettes' Hall-of-Fame, Abbruzzi holds a number of team records and was named to the league's All-Pro team each season.

He played for the Alouettes from in 1955-58, and holds the team record for rushing touchdowns in a game with four (at Toronto, Oct. 22, 1955) and is second on the all-time list in rushing with 3,749 yards, carries (700), 100-yard games (11) and touchdowns (45).

In his first two seasons, Abbruzzi set the team record for touchdowns in a season with 19 in his first year and then broke his own record with 20 the following season. He shares the record for points in a game with 24 versus the Hamilton Tiger-Cats on September 22, 1956. In his first season, he tied the team record for touchdowns in a game with four on two different occasions (versus Hamilton and Toronto) and recorded another four touchdown game the next year against the Tiger-Cats (September 22, 1956).

In three of his four seasons, Abbruzzi led the Alouettes in rushing. He ran for 1,248 yards in 1956, 1,062 in 1957 and 809 in 1957. He holds the team records for rushing touchdowns in a season with 17 and for the most touchdowns in a season by a rookie.

In 1972, Abbruzzi's feats were recognized as he was inducted into the University of Rhode Island Athletic Hall of Fame and he was inducted into the Providence Gridiron Club Hall of Fame in 1976.

After his playing days, Abbruzzi still stayed involved in the game he loved. He was a physical education teacher for 30 years and was a successful football coach for 26 years at his alma mater, Warren High School. He built the football program into one of the most respected programs on and off the field. His teams won a total of nine divisional and state championships, including a winning streak of 34 consecutive regular-season victories during the 1970s. He was honored as the Rhode Island School Boy Coach-of-the-Year in 1975. In addition, he is a member of the Canadian Football Hall of Fame.

In his illustrious football career on the high school, collegiate and professional levels, Pat Abbruzzi left a lasting impression on the game both in the United States and Canada. Abbruzzi, who passed away on June 3, 1998 will be remembered as one of the best football players in Rhode Island gridiron history.

Marshall Tyler

23-22-8 in 10 seasons

Marshall Henry (Tip) Tyler, an all-American at Amherst, became the first Rhode Island coach in 1898. He went 24-21-7 in 10 years while he concentrated first on heading up the remedial Preparatory Department and then on teaching math. He also coached baseball and women's hoops. Tyler was a math professor from 1906 until his death in 1942, becoming one of the most beloved figures on campus. Not one but two buildings have been named for him, including the current home of math and computer science.

George Cobb

(1909-11, 1913-14)
17-16-5 in six seasons

George R. Cobb, a former Massachusetts standout athlete, took over the football and baseball coaching reigns from Marshall Tyler when he arrived in 1909 as an instructor in horticulture and physical education. He toughened up the schedule, taking on the Brown varsity for the first time in his very first game. Cobb gave up the coaching reins in 1912 to coach the junior varsity squad but returned to coach the varsity in 1913. His teams suffered 10 shutouts in his final 16 games posting a combined 4-9-3 mark in 1913 and 1914.

Robert W. Bingham

6-3 in one season

Standing in for George R. Cobb for one season, Robert W. Bingham led Rhode Island to a 6-3 mark in 1912, his only season in Kingston. A 1911 graduate of Brown, Bingham was just 23 years old when he took over the head coaching reins of the Rhode Island program. His squad posted five shutouts and outscored the opposition 105-52 for the season. After his departure from the sidelines, it would be 14 seasons (1927) until Rhode Island would again post a winning season (5-3).

Jim Baldwin

6-9-1 in two seasons

As the college neared its 25th anniversary, it hired James A. Baldwin as its first athletic director and head football, basketball and baseball coach. In two years, Baldwin's teams went 6-9-1 in football, 5-11 in basketball and 8-6 in baseball. The gridgers went scoreless in nine of 16 games but took out their frustration on Fort Adams with a 69-0 blowout in 1916, the second highest point total in school history. Baldwin left in 1917 to direct a YMCA program for American troops fighting in France.

Fred Murray

2-11-3 in two seasons

Fred J. Murray, the third in a series of athletic directors to last three years or less, struggled to keep the program afloat after America entered World War I in 1917. Most able-bodied junior and senior men left for military service or agricultural work, leaving a skeleton crew for sports. Murray's first squad went 2-4-2 in '17, but the college failed to field a team the following year. In 1919 the Rams scored just 31 points in a winless season, leaving Murray 2-11-3 for his brief career.

Frank Keaney

70-87-12 in 21 seasons

Frank W. Keaney is such an exalted figure as a Hall of Fame basketball coach that his two decades in football (70-87-2) are often overlooked. His teams were .500 or better 10 times in his final 14 years and beat Brown for the first time (1935). As a basketball coach, he invented the fast break and took the Rams to the 1946 NIT final, losing to Kentucky by a point in what was then considered the national title game. And as a chemistry professor, he invented Rhode Island's distinctive light blue color.

Bill Beck

12-22-2 in five seasons

A former player under Frank Keaney, William M.H. Beck was a football coach who is best remembered for another sport. He coached the baseball team for six years (1954-59), and Bill Beck Field was renamed in his memory in 1966. Beck was a campus fixture as teacher, coach and administrator from 1934 to 1960. After seven years as a Keaney aide, he became head football coach in 1941. The Rams went 5-2-1 in his first season, but served in World War II until '46. He went 12-22-2 overall in five seasons.

Bob Griffin

79-107-1 in 17 seasons

Robert L. Griffin, Rhode Island's second longest-serving head coach, won a school record 79 games (79-101-1), led the Rams to their only three NCAA playoff berths (1981, '84 and '85) with the highest national rankings in history (final rankings of No. 2 in '84 and No. 7 in '85). Griffin was a Ram assistant under Jack Zilly (1966-69) and led Bishop Hendricken High to a 9-1 mark in 1970 before becoming offensive coordinator at Idaho State. Named head coach in 1972, he led Idaho State to two 7-3 records in four years.

Tim Stowers

(2000-present) 22-35 in five seasons

Tim Stowers' five-year mark at Rhode Island (22-35) is somewhat misleading, considering he inherited a 1-10 team and went 3-8, then 8-3 in just his second season. In 2001, he led the Rams to their first winning season in six years and their first national ranking (No. 20) since 1985. The Rams have played 20 nationally-ranked teams in his five years at the helm. A former Auburn lineman (1977-78) and assistant (1979-83), he joined the Georgia Southern staff in 1985 and helped win three I-AA titles in five years. Named head coach in 1990, he guided the Eagles to a national crown in his first season and was 51-23 in six years.
