

MARAUDERS SOCIAL MEDIA POLICY FOR SCHOLAR-ATHLETES

Statement of Care

The University of Mary takes seriously the responsibility to care for the growth, development, and success of our scholar-athletes. The formation of personal virtue and strong character is fundamental to the mission of Marauders Athletics and is a shared responsibility of coaches, scholar-athletes, and administration. Our scholar-athletes bring honor to the University and our community. It is a privilege and a serious calling to accompany and guide young hearts and minds as they embrace adulthood and the ideals of Christian maturity.

Hardship, disappointment, and frustration happen in every human life, and dealing with them well is a hallmark of adulthood. An adult takes responsibility for his or her life, surroundings, and community. The temptation to complain or murmur is sometimes strong, but the adult chooses to act (if there is something that can be done) or to endure (if the circumstances are out of his or her control). The Rule of Saint Benedict identifies murmuring as the most serious and destructive sin against the value of community. More than anything, the everyday difficulties of life are meant to be overwhelmed by interior habits of gratitude for the many blessings and opportunities each of us has been given. The University of Mary fails if we are unsuccessful in assisting our students – especially our scholar-athletes – to live in this way.

When scholar-athletes mimic a broader culture that takes to social media to express concerns or frustrations, this mission of the Athletics Department and the University of Mary is damaged in several ways, including the following:

- Third parties—including the media, faculty, future employers, and NCAA officials—can easily access social media profiles, including personal information. This access includes pictures, videos, comments, and posts. Inappropriate material found by third parties can have long-lasting effects upon a scholar-athlete, even while it damages the reputation and public perception of the University of Mary.
- Marauders Athletics is heavily funded by the enrollment success (recruitment of new students and retention of existing students) of the University and by generous donors from the general public. Irresponsible use of social media effectively undermines the University's ability to fund athletic scholarships, equipment, and team travel, as well as salaries and benefits for coaches and their families.

Coaches and University administration have a responsibility to provide appropriate channels for scholar-athletes to articulate frustrations and grievances and likewise participate in the development and growth of the campus community.

Statement of Policy

University of Mary scholar-athletes are representatives of the University and the community. By nature of their participation in NCAA Division II athletics, University of Mary scholar-athletes are public figures. Because scholar-athlete conduct directly affects the University's good name, the Athletics Department requires scholar-athletes to exercise good judgment in their use of social media websites and to conduct these activities in a responsible, respectful, and lawful manner. Accordingly, scholar-athletes shall refrain from posts that could be considered terrorizing, menacing, or harassment, regardless of underlying intent (e.g., "it was only a joke").

Scholar-athletes are thus prohibited from making any social media posts or public statements on personal accounts or anonymously that reflect negatively upon the University, or with the intent or consequence of causing harm. Scholar-athletes found to be in violation, as determined by athletic or University administration, will be subject to disciplinary action, including temporary or permanent suspension from the team and scholarship funding, as well as possible expulsion from the University.

Certain actions are specifically prohibited by the NCAA, as follows:

- Scholar-athletes are required to abide by all team policies, athletic department policies, and NSIC and NCAA rules when utilizing social media websites.
- Scholar-athletes are not permitted to initiate communication with a prospective scholar-athlete as a result of the prospective scholar-athlete's recruitment by University of Mary.
- It is not permissible to comment on injuries, officiating, or team matters that could reasonably be expected to be confidential to team members.

Best Practices and Reminders for Scholar-Athletes

- Think twice before posting. If the post would reflect poorly on the University of Mary—which is affording you numerous benefits and opportunities—don't post. If you wouldn't want your coach, parents, or future employer to see your post, don't post.

- Respect the dignity of every human person, and strive to do what is right and good.
- Remember that many different audiences view your posts, including fans, alumni, kids, local authorities, parents, faculty, etc. Even adjusting your permissions cannot entirely prevent your posts from being accessed by unintended audiences.
- Remember that even anonymous accounts online are easily traced back to individuals, who will then be held accountable for the content and damage done by that anonymous account. Every digital action leaves a trail.
- The internet is permanent. Even if you delete something, a digital record of that post remains.

If you are ever in doubt about whether your activity online or on social media is appropriate, consider carefully whether it upholds and positively reflects the University of Mary's values, as well as those of the Athletics Department and your personal values. You are encouraged to approach your coach(es), Athletics Department administration, or the University Chaplain if you are struggling with or have questions about the appropriate use of social media.

As a scholar-athlete, you are a valued member of the University of Mary community, and you are encouraged to follow appropriate channels to express your concerns. Should you have a concern that you would like to discuss, the appropriate channel for this communication is as follows:

Team Captain → Coach → Athletic Chaplain → Faculty Athletic Representative [FAR] → Director of Intercollegiate Athletics → Executive Vice President
