HOYA TRADITION

IN ITS FIRST 100 YEARS, THE GEORGETOWN BASKETBALL PROGRAM HAS BEEN HIGHLIGHTED BY RICH TRADITION ...

Historical records show us the accomplishments of future Congressman Henry Hyde and his team in the 1940s. Professional achievement tells us of the academic rigor and athletic pursuits of the 1960s that helped shape Paul Tagliabue, former Commissioner of the NFL. Trophies, awards and championships are evidence of the success John Thompson Jr. compiled in the 1970s, 80s and 90s and John Thompson III in the 2000s.

It is the total combination: academic and athletic excellence, focus, dedication and hard work instilled in Hoya teams throughout the last century that built men who would not only conquer the basketball court, but serve their communities.

This is the tradition of Georgetown University and its basketball program.

Fred Fees

1907

Georgetown beats Virginia, 22-11, in the first intercollegiate game in school history. The team posts a record of 2-2 in the first season. Maurice Joyce is hired as the team's first coach for the 1907-08 season.

1914

Though completed in 1906, Ryan Gymnasium is only used for intercollegiate competition from 1914 through 1927. Most frequently used venues prior to the construction of McDonough are McKinley Tech HS, Uline Arena, and the National Guard Armory.

1919

Led by Fred Fees and Andrew Zazzali, the Hilltop basketball team compiles a 21-2 record over the 1919 and 1920 seasons.

1928

In his first season as head coach, Elmer Ripley paces the Hoyas to a mark of 12-1 overall. Ripley was the coach from 1927 to 1929, from 1938 to 1943, and from 1946 to 1949. He is inducted into the Basketball Hall of Fame in 1973.

1932

In his first season as head coach, young Fred Mesmer manages only six wins against 11 losses, but from his hometown high school, he recruits Ed Hargaden, who goes on to become the first of Georgetown's 31 All-American selections in basketball.

1942

Buddy O'Grady, Al Lujack and Don Martin graduate and are selected by the National Basketball Association. They are the first of 52 Hoyas to play in the NBA.

1943

Future Congressman Henry Hyde replaces Andy Kosticka (off to war) in the lineup, and the team defeats DePaul with big George Mikan, to advance to the finals of the NCAA championship against Wyoming.

1943-45

Basketball is suspended for the remainder of World War II.

1950

Tom O'Keefe becomes the first of 38 Hoya players to score 1,000 points in a career. He later serves as head coach from 1960-66.

1951

The construction of McDonough Gymnasium is completed in time to host the Eisenhower inaugural ball and the start of the 1951-52 season.

1953

Led by Bill Bolger, a strong senior class takes the Hoyas to their first postseason appearance in 10 years, earning a bid to the then-premier NIT.

1962

Paul Tagliabue, future commissioner of the National Football League, finishes as the second-ranked career rebounder for the Hoyas.

1963

Behind the scoring and ball-handling of the backcourt tandem of Jim Christy and

Jim Brown, the Hoyas take down No. 1-ranked and defending NCAA champion Loyola of Chicago at a holiday tournament in Philadelphia.

1970

A 17-year postseason drought ends when the Hoyas are selected to play the Pete Maravich-led LSU Tigers in the NIT. This high point is followed two years later by the low point of a 3-23 season and a search for a new coach.

1984

All-America center Patrick Ewing wins an Olympic gold medal in Los Angeles as a member of the U.S. men's basketball team. He earns a second gold in 1992 as a member of the U.S. "Dream Team" in Barcelona.

1984

The Hoyas complete a remarkable 34-3 season, win their third BIG EAST tourney title, and beat Houston in the NCAA title game for the first national title for the program.

The 2008-09 basketball season marks the 25-year anniversary of Georgetown's first, and only, national championship in men's basketball.

The Hoyas completed a remarkable 34-3 season, won their third BIG EAST Tournament title and beat Houston in the NCAA title game.

Seven players from that team were selected by teams in the NBA Draft between 1984 and 1987, led by Patrick Ewing, who averaged 16.4 points, 10.0 rebounds and 4.1 blocks and was named the BIG EAST Player of the Year. Ewing was the first pick of the 1985 NBA Draft, selected by the New York Knicks, and was later recognized as one of the 50 Greatest Players in the history of the NBA.

Fred Brown, a senior guard who was part of the team that lost in the 1983 championship game, was selected in the eighth round of the 1984 draft by the Atlanta Hawks.

David Wingate, who was a second round pick of the Philadelphia 76ers in 1986, was second on the team in scoring with 11.2 points per game.

Michael Jackson, a second pick of the New York Knicks in 1986, was third on the team in scoring with 10.0 points per game.

Bill Martin averaged 8.9 points per game as a junior and then earned All-America honors as a senior in 1985, when he was a second round pick of the Indiana Pacers.

Ralph Dalton, a key reserve on the team, appeared in 36 games and averaged 2.7 points per game. He was selected in the seventh round of the 1986 Draft by the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Reggie Williams, a freshman who was named to the All-Rookie Team and was a first round pick of the Los Angeles Clippers in 1987, scored 16 points in the championship game.

1984 NCAA Champions

1985

Georgetown wins its fourth BIG EAST title, but falls to Villanova in the NCAA title contest. It is the Hoyas third NCAA championship final in four years (with two defeats by a total of three points).

1987

High scoring Reggie Williams helps lead the Hoyas to the BIG EAST regular-season title, the tourney championship and a spot in the NCAA Elite Eight.

1989

Behind the all-round play of guard Charles Smith, the Hoyas win their fourth BIG EAST regular-season title, sixth BIG EAST tourney championship and advance to the NCAA Elite Eight.

1989

Head coach John Thompson Jr. boycotts two games in protest of the NCAA's adoption of "Proposition 42," bringing national attention to issues of misuse of standardized testing and exclusionary financial legislation; the rule is later changed.

1990

Alonzo Mourning and Dikembe Mutombo are named BIG EAST Co-Defensive Players of the Year. Later, as NBA professionals, they both receive the Walter Kennedy Citizen Award.

1992

Georgetown wins its fifth BIG EAST regular-season title and advance to the NIT title game. Thompson Jr. is named the BIG EAST Coach of the Year; Mourning is named Player of the Year.

1995

Allen Iverson is named Rookie of the Year and Defensive Player of the Year in the BIG EAST. The Hoyas advance to the Sweet 16 of the NCAA.

1996

The Hoyas win their sixth BIG EAST regular-season title and Iverson is again the Defensive Player of the Year in the conference.

1997

The Hoyas new home is the 20,600-seat MCI Center, now named Verizon Center. The Hoyas win their seventh BIG EAST regular-season title.

2001

Georgetown advances to the Sweet 16 of the NCAA tourney.

2002

In the longest game in team history, the Hoyas lose to Notre Dame in four overtimes, 116-111.

2004

John Thompson III is named the head coach, and leads the team to a post-season berth.

1943 NCAA SEMIFINALS

"Believe it or Not ... By Ripley"

Facing basketball legend George Mikan and his veteran DePaul squad, an inexperienced team of Hoyas approaches its second ever game in the NCAA tournament. The Hoyas are 3-to-1 underdogs and opposing coaches claim that "DePaul will name its own score!" against the younger Hoyas.

Playing before a crowd of 14,085 on March 25, 1943, at Madison Square Garden, The Hoyas trail throughout the opening frame and are down by seven as the half winds down until a 50-foot shot at the buzzer by Georgetown's Lloyd Potolicchio narrows the DePaul lead to 28-23.

The Hoyas storm back in the second half, building a 40-36 lead with 10 minutes remaining when GU's John Mahnken, who had been neutralizing Mikan, fouls out. At this point, all appeared lost, as Georgetown has no one tall enough to stay with Mikan.

Against all expectations Coach Elmer Ripley brings 6-3 Henry Hyde off the bench to contain DePaul's 6-10 big man, which Hyde does through the conclusion of regulation. The Hoyas win a 53-49 decision, prompting a Hoya fan to shout out the quote of the tournament: "Believe it or not ... by Ripley!"

Don Weber vs. LSU

1975 ECAC-SOUTH FINAL

Georgetown defeats West Virginia at the Morgantown Coliseum, 3/18/75

Down one with under 10 seconds left, freshman Derrick Jackson connected on an 18 foot shot with two seconds remaining. The basket gave the Hoyas an improbable 62-61 win over West Virginia at the Morgantown Coliseum in front of 14,00 hostile Mountaineers. The win in the ECAC-South final entitled the Hoyas to their first NCAA Tournament appearance since 1943.

1970 NIT

Never Underestimate the Power of a Hoya

Senior guard Mike Laska drew the unenviable and seemingly impossible task of containing LSU's basketball legend "Pistol" Pete Maravich when the Hoyas faced the Tigers in the 1970 NIT. To everyone's disbelief, Laska played the defensive game of a lifetime. In the first ten minutes of the game, the NCAA's all-time leading scorer had but one field goal. For the game, Maravich shot 6 for 16 from the field and had 20 points overall, a performance he called "pitiful". To Hoya fans, it was something else entirely.

With Maravich under wraps, LSU's front line of 6-8 Danny Hester, 6-8 Al Sanders, and 6-9 Bill Newton took advantage of its height. With the ball going inside, the Tiger trio combined for 56 points and 43 rebounds, and three Hoyas (Adrian Laughna, and senior Paul Favorite) fouled out in the process.

Still, the Blue and Gray would not quit. Trailing 81-74 with 3:08 to play, the Hoya defense went to work, and LSU would not score another field goal the rest of the game. A pair of Georgetown goals narrowed the count to 81-78 with under a minute to play, and as Maravich looked to dribble out the clock, he was fouled. With the game on the line, Maravich missed the front end of the one-and-one, and the Hoyas were still alive.

Coming down the court, Art White sank two of his team-high 28 points to narrow the score to 81-80 with 0:17 left. Maravich was quickly fouled again to stop the clock. He later told the New York Daily News that "I remembered the way my dad (LSU coach Press Maravich) got on me for missing the other one, so I figured I'd better make it." Despite the cries of every Hoya fan in the building, Maravich sank both free throws, and a final Hoya score closed out the 83-82 LSU win.

THE SHOT EVERYBODY SAW

Georgetown defeats George Washington at McDonough Gymnasium, 2/22/78

With time running out (0:02) and the Hoyas down by two, Craig Esherick hoists a 35 footer which ties the game as regulation expires. The Hoyas go on to defeat the Colonials 78-77 in overtime. The Hoyas' third one-point victory in six days, prompts GW Coach Bob Talent's analysis; "God is smiling on them this year."

After GW's Les Anderson hits a 12 foot fade-away jump shot in the closing seconds, the Hoyas call a timeout. Steve Martin then inbounds the ball to Esherick, standing on just the other side of the half court stripe. Closely guarded by Anderson, Esherick pivots to his right and launches a shot which draws nothing but net.

"The shot was designed for Derrick Jackson. He's our number one clutch shooter," said Esherick. "But during the timeout Mr. Thompson told me to look for the ball too. I had a perfect look at the basket."

Asked about his feelings, Esherick calmly replies, "Every time I shoot it, I expect it to go in."

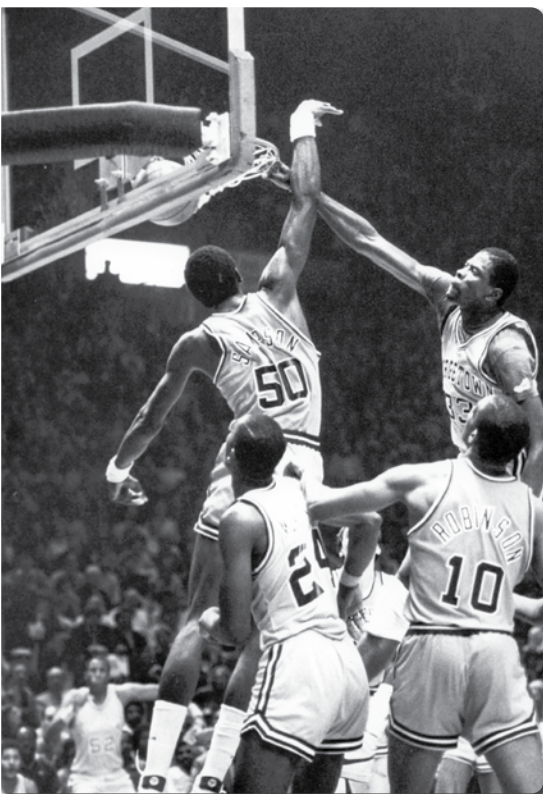

Years later Esherick, then Georgetown University's 16th head men's basketball coach, wondered about the game, "I know how big McDonough is and I remember how many people I thought were in the building, but I just can't explain it ... I've had so many people tell me they saw that shot, I found myself wondering if the game was somehow in a gym that seated 25,000 people."

Patrick Ewing vs. Ralph Sampson

LAST GAME AT MANLEY

“Manley Field House is officially closed.” ... GU Defeats No. 2 Syracuse, 2/13/80

Despite shooting only 21 percent from the field in the opening half and trailing 16-30 at intermission, the Hoyas rally to defeat the No. 2 ranked Orangemen 52-50 in the final game in Manley Field House. Led by the inside play of Craig “Big Sky” Shelton, and Ed “Postman” Spriggs as well as the clutch free throws of Eric “Sleepy” Floyd, the Hoyas ended the nation’s longest Division I home court winning streak at 57.

Down by 15 with 14 minutes remaining, the Hoyas heard the Syracuse fans begin a chorus of Auld Lang Syne, but refused to give up. Maintaining defensive pressure, the Hoyas pounded the ball down low and chipped away at their deficit. The Orangemen, struggling from the stripe, found their key scorer, Roosevelt Bouie, neutralized.

Syracuse’s attempt to protect their lead in the final 10 minutes proved unsuccessful. Floyd, Shelton and Spriggs scored from the field, answered only by a single free throw by Bouie, making the score 49-44 with 2:10 remaining. Shelton hit two free-throws at the 1:15 mark to bring the score to 48-46. Marty Headd of Syracuse was fouled and made a free throw for the final Orangemen points with 34 seconds remaining. Spriggs and Floyd closed out the scoring for Georgetown, paving the way for Coach Thompson’s famous quote: “Manley Field House is officially closed.”

1982 NCAA FINALS

Thompson vs. Smith

In a matchup which pitted friends against each other, coach John Thompson Jr.’s Hoyas faced Dean Smith’s Tarheels in the NCAA Finals on March 29, 1982 at the Superdome in New Orleans.

61,612 fans in attendance saw the Hoyas surge to an early 12-6 lead, the biggest of the game. At intermission Georgetown held a one-point edge, 32-31 in spite of Patrick Ewing being whistled for five goaltending calls in the opening minutes.

Freshman guard Michael Jordan swished a 16-foot jumper from the left side with 16 seconds remaining to provide the title game’s final points as North Carolina edged Georgetown, 63-62. Georgetown guard Fred Brown’s errant pass directly to Tar Heels forward James Worthy prevented the Hoyas from attempting a potential game-winning shot in the closing seconds.

Patrick Ewing paced the Hoyas with a double-double, scoring 23 points and grabbing a game leading 11 boards. “Sleepy” Floyd contributed 18 points while Eric Smith added 14 tallies. For UNC, Worthy scored 28, Jordan had 16 points and nine boards while Sam Perkins poured in 10 points.

One of the most enduring images from that game is the video of John Thompson wrapping Fred Brown in a bear hug after the game. “I told him not to worry, that he had won more games than he lost,” Thompson said later, “I didn’t think about it, I just felt he needed it”. Two years later the hug would be repeated for an entirely different reason.

BATTLE OF THE BIG MEN

Ewing vs. Sampson, 12/11/82

The Dec. 11, 1982 matchup of giant centers, 6-11 sophomore Patrick Ewing and 7-4 senior Ralph Sampson, was also a battle between the No. 3 ranked Hoyas and the No. 1-ranked Cavaliers. The sellout crowd of 19,035 at the Capital Centre saw a game which was decided in the final four minutes of play.

At intermission the Cavaliers enjoyed a 10-point bulge, 33-23. Virginia led by as many as 14 (41-27) early in the second half, but the Hoyas continued to apply defensive pressure while improving their shot selection and put together a 10-2 streak to move the score to 43-37 with 13:41 left to play.

With 3:47 remaining, freshman David Wingate hit a 20 footer, knotting the score at 59. Four seconds later UVA’s Craig Robinson made a pair from the stripe putting Virginia back up by two, 61-59. At the 3:15 mark Anthony Jones’ 18 footer evened the score at 61. Eleven seconds later Othell Wilson’s work from the stripe put the Cavaliers back up by two. Although Virginia was held scoreless from the field in the final 5:50, three key whistles against the Hoyas in the final 95 seconds (travel, charge and shooting foul) gave UVA the chance to win the game from the stripe, which they did.

The Hoyas outrebounded their opponents 42-38 and Patrick Ewing led Georgetown with 16 points, eight rebounds and five blocks. David Wingate added 12 tallies and Anthony Jones scored 10 points while leading the Hoyas’ rebounding with nine boards. Sampson had a double-double for Virginia with 23 points, 16 rebounds and seven blocks.

1984 NCAA FINALS

National Champions

Georgetown’s Patrick Ewing and Houston’s Hakeem Olajuwon, the nation’s two most celebrated centers, faced off against each other as the Hoyas and Cougars fought in the Seattle Kingdome for the national title. “Phi Slama Jamma” had missed their opportunity the year previously, falling to NC State by two points on a buzzer beating put-back, while the Hoyas had been downed by a single point two years earlier when North Carolina's James Worthy caught Fred Brown's errant pass. Each team resolved there would be no flukes in this contest.

TOP GAMES IN HOYA HISTORY

Co-captain and defensive catalyst Gene Smith, sidelined by a foot injury sustained in the semifinal victory over Kentucky, watched his team take a lead with 32 minutes to play which they would never relinquish. Making extensive use of his team's depth, coach John Thompson Jr. kept sending in waves of fresh Hoyas until Houston succumbed to the pressure.

Five Hoyas scored in double figures in the 84-75 victory. Reggie Williams scored 19, David Wingate added 16, Michael Graham had 14, Michael Jackson contributed 11 and Patrick Ewing dropped in 10 points and led the team in rebounding with nine boards. For the Cougars, Alvin Franklin scored 21, Olajuwon had 15 points and nine boards and Michael Young added 18 tallies.

The impact of winning the National Championship can never be fully assessed. It is not only a pinnacle of college basketball that only a handful of schools has reached, but it is also a vindication of all of the suffering and sacrifice that precedes it as well. For Georgetown that image is indelibly marked by the hug that Thompson Jr. gave Fred Brown after the victory, this time in celebration rather than consolation.

John Thompson Jr. in the "sweater game"

Horace Broadnax vs. Houston

THE SWEATER GAME 1985 vs. St. John's

In a much heralded rematch of No. 1 vs. No. 2, Madison Square Garden was the scene of the Hoyas' revenge on St. John's head coach Lou Carnesecca's Redmen. Earlier in the season the defending national champions had been upset by the Chris Mullin-led Redmen at the USAir Arena, 66-65, costing Georgetown its top position in the national polls. With a national television audience on CBS and a sold out Madison Square Garden, the late February contest had all the excitement of the NCAA Finals.

Carnesecca, whose team was 24-1 coming into the contest had explained his team's good fortune with a "lucky sweater" which he wore on the sidelines. The New York media had adopted this piece of superstition and hyped the sweater's powers to mythic proportions. When coach John Thompson Jr. came out during warm-ups and opened his jacket to expose a replica of the sweater, the sophisticated New York crowd roared with delight.

The roars quieted as the game went on and the No. 2 Hoyas beat the No. 1 Redmen, 85-69. After tying the game at 22 and 26 in the first half, the Redmen fell to the Hoyas pressure defense, trailing by nine at intermission 50-41. St. John's opened the second half with a jumper which eased the deficit to seven, but then the Hoyas went on a run, putting the margin into double digits, effectively putting the contest out of doubt.

Patrick Ewing scored 20 points, led the Hoyas with nine boards and had six blocks. Reggie Williams paced all scorers with 25 points, added seven rebounds and six assists while David Wingate added 12 points six rebounds and four assists. For the Redmen, Chris Mullin scored 21 points and Walter Berry had 16 points and 10 rebounds.

2001 NCAA TOURNAMENT "Just the way we planned it"

Nathaniel Burton's lay-up at the buzzer gave the Hoyas (24-7) a 63-61 victory against Arkansas (20-11) in the First Round of the NCAA West Regional in Boise, Idaho. With the score knotted at 61, the Hoyas held for the last shot with Burton dribbling at the top of the key. With leading scorer Kevin Braswell covered, Burton drove to his left by a Razorback defender and released the ball as the clock expired to give GU its first NCAA Tournament victory since the 1995-96 season.

Kevin Braswell led GU with 12 points and four assists. Mike Sweetney had his fifth double-double of the season with 10 points and 12 rebounds, pacing the Hoyas in the rebounding category. Ruben Boumtje-Boumtje had nine rebounds, and Anthony Perry came off the bench to record 10 points, rounding out a trio of Hoyas in double figures.

Georgetown trailed by as many as seven points with 11:12 remaining in the contest and its hopes of advancing suffered a blow when co-captain Kevin Braswell picked up his fourth foul with 10:36 to play. After Braswell's foul, the Hoyas rallied to score the next seven points to tie the game at 52-52. GU's defense held Arkansas scoreless for almost four minutes during the run.

"Yes," head coach Craig Esherick confirmed in the post game press conference, "the play went just the way we planned it." His pointed look at Nathaniel and the snickers from the players did nothing to wipe the look of innocence from the senior forward's face.

BATTLE OF ATTRITION Quadruple OT vs. Notre Dame, 2/9/02

In the longest game in Georgetown history, the Hoyas fell in quadruple overtime to Notre Dame by a score of 111-116.

Mike Sweetney set career highs in scoring and rebounding as he led all scorers with 35 and all rebounders with 20 boards. He also had six assists, one turnover, six blocks and one steal in his 13th double-double of the season. Wesley

TOP GAMES IN HOYA HISTORY

Mike Sweetney vs. Notre Dame in the 1984 national championship

Wilson also set a career high in scoring with 26 points. Wesley had seven boards and five blocks. Kevin Braswell scored a different double-double with 12 points and 10 assists. Drew Hall contributed 10 points and set a career high in rebounds with eight.

The Irish were scorching hot in the first frame, shooting 58% from the field and leading the Hoyas by as many as 12 points with 1:52 remaining. The Hoyas, however, revealed the tone of the game in the half's waning seconds as they ran off seven unanswered to trail by five, 43-48.

The second half saw the Hoyas outshoot the Irish, 44% to 40%. Notre Dame proved however, that they were no more willing to let the game slip away than the Hoyas were. When Graves missed a trey in the final two minutes, Sweetney answered with a deuce in the paint. Carroll replied with a two of his own and Georgetown could not find a good shot in the final five seconds of regulation.

The first overtime saw only four points scored by each team as both squads demonstrated their defensive determination. Once again the Hoyas put themselves in good position with the ball in hand and the score tied with 17 seconds remaining, but Braswell's trey hit rim, glass, rim and jumped out.

The second overtime marked the departures for excessive fouls of Timmerman and Swanigan for ND, and Wesley Wilson for GU. Courtland Freeman also made his way to the bench after falling on his back after a hard foul. The battle of the closing seconds was intense as Humphrey rebounded a Braswell miss only to have the ball stolen by Drew Hall. Braswell's three with just five seconds remaining on the clock did not go and a third overtime was required.

In the third overtime Notre Dame led by as many as five before the Hoyas were able to pull even. Like the preceding periods, the Hoyas had the ball with the score tied, but Riley's floater at the buzzer lofted across the rim, necessitating a BIG EAST record fourth overtime.

Riley, Sweetney and Braswell fouled out in the fourth overtime and ND's two-point lead proved insurmountable. The final was 116-111.

DOWN GOES DUKE

Hoyas top nation's No. 1, 1/21/06

Georgetown senior Brandon Bowman scored 23 points to lead five players in double figures as the Hoyas upset No. 1-ranked Duke in front of a sold-out crowd of 20,035 at Verizon Center. It was the first win for a Georgetown team over a team ranked No. 1 in the country since beating St. John's on February 27, 1985.

The Hoyas hit four of six free throws in the final 39 seconds and forced a turnover from Duke freshman guard Greg Paulus with four seconds left to seal the win. Georgetown led by 14 points at halftime and maintained that lead through the first eight minutes of the second half. Duke narrowed the gap to eight points, 66-58, on a layup from J.J. Redick — who scored a game-high 41 points — with 8:58 to play in the game. The Hoyas bumped the lead back up to nine points, 68-59, on a pair of free throws by sophomore guard Jonathan Wallace and the lead was again nine points, 70-61, after senior guard Ashanti Cook hit a pair of free throws with 6:15 to play.

Redick hit a three and a jumper, Jamal Boykin had a putback and Shelden Williams added a layup in a 34 second stretch to pull the Blue Devils within two points, 74-72, with 4:05 to play. However, the Hoyas forced two turnovers and got a layup from Wallace and a fast-break dunk from senior guard Darrel Owens as the lead grew back to six points with 2:09 to play. Sophomore forward Jeff Green hit one of two free throws with 1:44 to play to make it seven points, 79-72.

A dunk by Bowman with 1:15 to play gave the Hoyas an eight-point lead, 82-74, and the lead was at seven points (85-78) after Bowman hit two free throws. Sean Dockery hit a fast break layup and Paulus got a steal and a layup to pull within three points, 85-82, with 22 seconds to play, but Bowman and Wallace hit one of two from the line before forcing the final turnover as Georgetown hung on for the thrilling win.

2007 NCAA ELITE EIGHT

Georgetown puts away top-seeded North Carolina in OT; Earns first trip to Final Four since 1985

In an NCAA tournament full of incredible rallies, it was the Hoyas' turn against North Carolina. The Hoyas overcame an 11-point deficit in the second half, then ripped off 14 straight points in overtime to beat top-seeded Carolina 96-84 in the East Regional Final for their first trip to the Final Four since 1985.

Georgetown put the clamps on North Carolina in the game's final 15 minutes, limiting the Tar Heels to only one made field goal in 23 attempts, including their first 12 in overtime.

After Georgetown's Jonathan Wallace hit a 3 that tied it at 81 with 31 seconds left in regulation, the Tar Heels had a chance to win it, but freshman Wayne Ellington missed an open jumper from the wing right before the buzzer and Patrick Ewing grabbed the rebound.

In overtime, it was over in a hurry. Wallace scored inside, freshman DaJuan Summers dunked a minute later, and Jeff Green added a layup to make it 87-81. In that span, the Tar Heels missed their first five shots and the Hoyas went inside and got fouled - Summers made four free throws and Jessie Sapp added a pair. Summers' dunk extended the lead to 95-81 before Ty Lawson broke the scoreless streak with a 3 in the closing seconds.

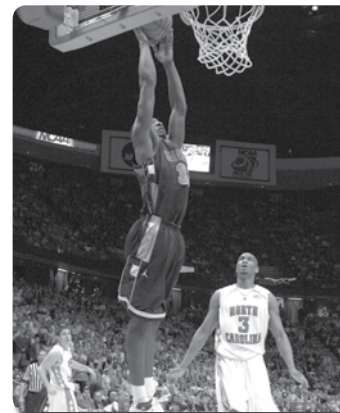

The Tar Heels jumped on top early in the game, opening up a 10-point lead in the first half on the Hoyas after a three-point play from Brandon Wright. A run late in the first half, capped by a jumper from Wallace, pulled GU to within six points, 50-44 at the break.

The teams battled back and forth in the opening minutes of the second half and Georgetown was able to pull within three points, 59-56, on a three-pointer from Sapp with just over 15 minutes left. That's when North Carolina went on a 10-2 run over a span of 2:44, taking a 69-58 lead with 12:22 to play. The Tar Heels maintained that lead, taking a 75-65 advantage on free throws from Marcus Ginyard with 7:19 remaining.

That's when Georgetown took over. A foul shot by Green, a layup by Sapp, another layup by Green and a dunk by Roy Hibbert, and it was 75-72 — a 7-0 spurt in 2:57. A pair of Wright free throws pushed the lead back to five points, 77-72, but Wallace hit a pair from the line and Ewing connected on a layup to make it a one-point game, 77-76. The Tar Heels responded and extended the lead back to three points on two occasions in the final two-plus minutes, but a missed jumper by Hansbrough with 45 seconds left gave the Hoyas a chance. Wallace calmly sank his three-pointer from the win with 31 seconds left, sending the game to overtime.

Basketball Hall of Famer John Thompson Jr.'s name is synonymous with success. Compiling 596 wins, the most of any coach in the history of Georgetown University, the magnitude of his achievements are undeniable.

On the Court

He amassed league leading records vs. all BIG EAST conference opponents (233-122) and captured seven regular season and six BIG EAST tournament championships. His Hoya teams received 24 consecutive invitations to postseason play, appeared in three NCAA Final Fours (1982, 1984, 1985), and won the national championship in 1984.

Thompson was named Coach of the Year a total of seven times. The BIG EAST honored him with the award following the 1979-80, 1986-87, 1991-92 seasons. After leading the Hoyas to the National Championship in 1984 he received the title from The United States Basketball Writers Association and The Sporting News. Following a consecutive return to the National Championship game in 1985 he was honored by the National Association of Basketball Coaches. He even garnered the award on a global scale when The United Press International honored him following the 1986-87 season.

Thompson had the privilege to be a part of the U.S. Olympic effort on several occasions. In 1988 as the Head Men's Basketball Coach, his team captured a bronze medal at the Seoul Olympics. He helped to secure the gold medal twice, once as an assistant coach for the 1976 squad and later as a member of the selection committee for the 1984 team.

In the Classroom

Though his impact on the hardwood is what has brought much of his acclaim, Thompson is also known for the commitment he showed to his players off the basketball court and in their lives as student-athletes. Always a stalwart in his desire for their futures after college, 76 of 78 players who stayed four years received a diploma, a 97% rate of graduation. It was this goal that led to his protest of "Proposition 42" which focused national attention on the issues of economic and educational discrimination.

JOHN THOMPSON JR.

In the Community

In 2000 he established The John Thompson Charitable Foundation to help improve the quality of life for disadvantaged children within the District of Columbia and other communities.

The Foundation awards grants to organizations that enhance children's lives, provide for continuing education, or support rehabilitation.

While coaching, he touched the local community through his establishment of Georgetown's "Kids and Cops" program, which still provides over 10,000 tickets per year for area youth to attend Hoya games. He was also instrumental in the beginning of D.C.'s 4-H program.

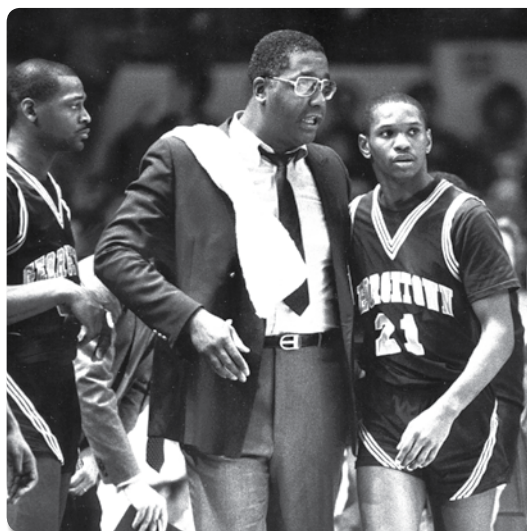

Thompson continues to assist organizations through a variety of professional advisory roles. He is a consultant, spokesman and board member to Nike, along with serving as Coach Emeritus and Presidential Consultant for Urban Affairs at Georgetown. The University awarded him for his lasting commitment to the Hilltop community with its two highest honors: the President's Award and the Patrick Healy Award.

Background

Coach Thompson's bachelor degree from Providence College was in economics and he also holds a master's degree in guidance and counseling from the University of the District of Columbia. He has received honorary degrees from Georgetown University, St. Peter's College, Wheeling College and most recently from the University of the District of Columbia.

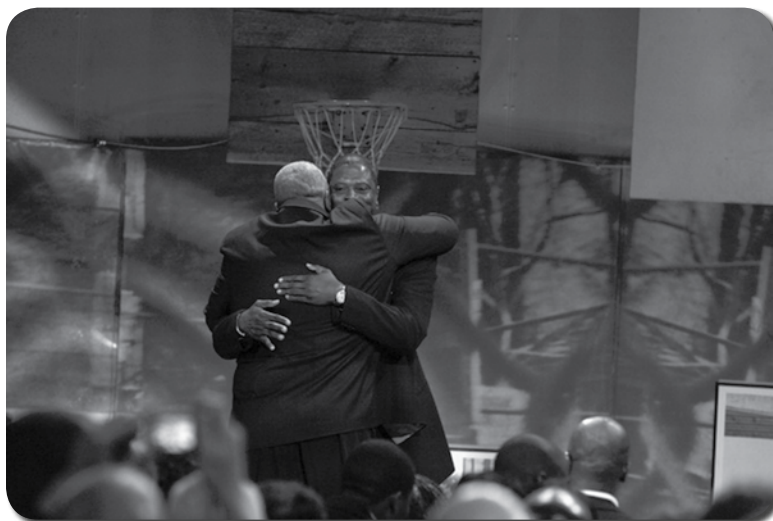

Prior to his arrival at Georgetown, Thompson was a highly successful high school coach, amassing a record of 122-28 at St. Anthony's High School in Washington, D.C. Before entering the coaching ranks, he played on two Boston Celtic World Championship teams under the tutelage of fellow Hall of Famer Red Auerbach.

While attending Providence College, Thompson led the Friars to the NIT Championship in 1963 and was named "New England Player of the Year" the following season. During his high school career, Thompson led John Carroll High School to 55 consecutive victories and two city championships and was named an All-American.

EWING HALL OF FAME CELEBRATION

Georgetown's Patrick Ewing Inducted into Basketball Hall of Fame

When he was a youngster, Patrick Ewing said that he once visited the Basketball Hall of Fame. On September 5 in a ceremony at Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame in Massachusetts, the former Georgetown men's basketball All-American became a member of it.

Ewing, selected as the greatest player to wear a Georgetown basketball jersey, was elected in his first year of eligibility along with Hakeem Olajuwon and Pat Riley. The other four members of the Class of 2008 included six-time NBA All-Star and former Notre Dame standout Adrian Dantley, Detroit Pistons owner Bill Davidson, legendary Immaculata University women's coach Cathy Rush and well-known television analyst Dick Vitale.

"I went to the Hall of Fame when I was younger and never thought in my wildest dreams I'd be [a part of it]," Ewing said during a press conference on September 5. "now I am. In grade school, never in my wildest dreams did I think I would possibly wind up being here, and now I am."

Ewing earned First Team All-America honors three times at Georgetown and led the Hoyas to the 1984 NCAA Championship and went on to become an 11-time all-star in the National Basketball Association and won two gold medals as a member of the United States Olympic Team.

"This means a lot," Ewing said of his election. "I'm being recognized for all of the blood, sweat and tears I've put into my 17-year career. Growing up in Massachusetts and having field trips to the Basketball Hall of Fame, I never really realized that one day I'd be in there. This is a dream come true."

Ewing was a three-time consensus First Team All-America selection (1983, 1984, 1985) on the Hilltop, helping the Hoyas to three NCAA Final Four appearances and the 1984 national title. He was named Most Outstanding Player of the 1984 tournament in helping the Hoyas to the championship.

"My four years at Georgetown were the best of my life," Ewing said. "I came to college a boy and left a man."

Ewing was asked about his freshman year at Georgetown, when the Hoyas won the BIG EAST Tournament and traveled west for the NCAA Tournament before losing to North Carolina in the NCAA Tournament.

EWING HALL OF FAME CELEBRATION

"That was my first NCAA tournament, it was great," Ewing recalled. "It was a wonderful tournament. We came out west ... we had some marvelous runs, we played Wyoming, kicked their butts, played Fresno state, kicked their butts, kicked everyone's butts on our way to the final four."

He was the first pick in the 1985 NBA Draft and went on to earn league Rookie of the Year honors in 1986 with the New York Knicks after averaging 20.0 points and 9.0 rebounds per game. Ewing scored 24,815 points during his 17-year NBA career to go along with 11,607 rebounds. Ewing spent 15 years with the Knicks and made 10 consecutive NBA All-Star appearances. He finished his playing career after stints with the Seattle SuperSonics (2000-01) and Orlando Magic (2001-02).

Ewing averaged 21.0 points, 9.8 rebounds and 2.45 blocks in 1,183 career games and was a member of the NBA's 50th Anniversary Team. He remains the New York Knicks' all-time leader in points, rebounds, blocked shots, steals and field goals made.

Ewing came to Georgetown after earning Parade Magazine National High School Player of the Year honors in 1981.

As a freshman in 1981-82, he averaged 12.7 points and 7.5 rebounds and earned second team All-BIG EAST Honors as the Hoyas went 30-7 and reached the Final Four. During his sophomore year in 1982-83, he averaged 17.7 points, 10.2 rebounds and earned First Team All-BIG EAST Honors as GU went 22-10 and reached the NCAA Midwest Regional Finals. Georgetown won the NCAA Championship during the 1983-84 season, posting a 34-3 record and beating Houston, 84-75, in the title game. Ewing finished the season averaging 16.4 points and 10.0 rebounds per game and earned First Team All-BIG EAST honors and league Defensive Player of the Year kudos. The Hoyas reached the NCAA title game during the 1984-85 season, with Ewing tallying 14.6 points and 10.7 rebounds per game. He capped off his career by being named the BIG EAST Player of the Year for the second-straight season, earning his third First Team All-BIG EAST nod and fourth BIG EAST Defensive Player of the Year award.

He still stands second all-time in scoring at Georgetown, averaging 15.3 points in 143 games, and is one of only four players in program history to score at least 2,000 points (2,184). Ewing is the all-time leader in total rebounds (1,316), most blocked shots (493) and most games played (143).

HOYAS IN THE OLYMPICS

Georgetown Hoyas have been part of our nation's effort in six of the last eight Olympic Games.

In 1976 Hoya coach John Thompson Jr. served as an assistant coach as the United States went 7-0 en route to a gold medal in Montreal, Quebec. When basketball made its first Olympic appearance on native soil in Los Angeles in 1984, the U.S. captured gold and Patrick Ewing was the tournament's leading shot blocker with 18.

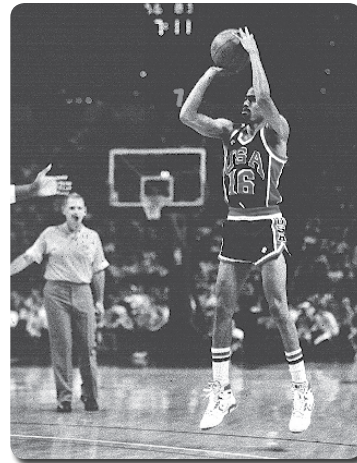

Thompson Jr. returned to Olympic competition as the head coach in 1988 in Seoul, Korea, along with Mary Fenlon. Charles E. Smith was second in assists on that 1988 team and helped the U.S. win a bronze medal.

After FIBA opened Olympic competition to include NBA players, Patrick Ewing was named to the 1992 "Dream Team" and led the U.S. in blocked shots on its way to gold in Barcelona, Spain. Alonzo Mourning also led his Olympic team in blocked shots in 2000, as the team won gold in Sydney, Australia.

In the summer of 2004 Allen Iverson and the U.S. won bronze, while he led the team in scoring.

Alonzo Mourning

Alonzo Mourning has been intensely involved in the development of community programs in South Florida where he resides with his family. Most of his outreach has been through Alonzo Mourning Charities, a public foundation that raises money in support of organizations that aid in the development and education of at-risk children and families.

Since its beginning in 1997, Alonzo Mourning Charities has raised $6 million to enhance the lives of some of South Florida's neediest residents through programs such as, 100 Black Men of South Florida, Honey Shine Mentoring Program, Children's Home Society of Florida and the Overtown Youth Center.

Most of the funds are raised during "Zo's Summer Groove," a five-day festival featuring youth basketball clinics, a golf tournament, a comedy show/concert, a youth summit, a benefit dinner, a block party and an all-star basketball game. Now in its 11th year, ZSG has become a staple in the South Florida community. ZSG works to promote community involvement by encouraging event participants to enjoy a weekend of activities that ultimately benefit the people of the area.

Mourning has also been instrumental in raising $2 million for kidney disease research through "Zo's Fund for Life," which also helps to provide medicine to kidney patients in need.

In addition, while playing for the Miami Heat, he donated $100 for each blocked shot to the Children's Home Society and Jefferson Memorial Hospital of Miami. A foster child himself, Alonzo and his wife host an annual holiday party for more than 100 foster children, personally buying presents and distributing them at the event.

Alonzo's charitable efforts have not gone unnoticed. In 2006 he was the fourth Heat member to receive the NBA Community Assist Award, awarded by the NBA to honor a player who reflects the leagues passion to give back. In 2003 he received the National Urban League's Outstanding Community Service Award, and the Silver Medallion Community Service Award by the National Conference for Community and Justice. In 2002 he also received the NBA's J. Walter Kennedy Sportsmanship Award, which is given to coaches or players for exemplary community efforts.

Allen Iverson

Originally started in 1998 as a way to raise money for the Boys and Girls Club of Greater Hampton Roads, Va., where Iverson grew up, his Crossover Foundation continues to expand each year. Named after his signature basketball move, his charity now raises money for student-athletes to go to college, as well as addressing the health, education, and social issues affecting today's youth.

This past summer Iverson announced that his foundation would donate $100,000 in scholarships to historically black colleges in North Carolina and Maryland

Allen is able to raise most of these funds through his annual Celebrity Classic, a star-studded softball game that takes place outside our nation's capital each summer.

This past July 14th the 5th Annual Allen Iverson Celebrity Summer Classic took place in Bowie, Md. Allen teamed up with other celebrities to raise $25,000 in scholarship money for local students to attend Bowie State University. In addition to Bowie State, students at St. Augustine College and Johnson C. Smith University have benefited from the Summer Classic.

Jerome Williams

After retiring from the NBA in 2005 after nine seasons, Jerome Williams spends the majority of his time giving back to the communities of Toronto, Detroit and New York, whose citizens gave him so much during his NBA career.

Since January 2006 he has held the role of Community Representative for the Toronto Raptors, working to help a city that he loves. Williams plays an active part in Raptors community initiatives, "focusing particularly on those that support at-risk youth and address social issues affecting the city."

In conjunction to his work with the Raptors, Williams continues to run his non-profit the "JYD Project", named after his NBA nickname "The Junkyard Dog." Through the program, Williams and his brother Johnny spend their time visiting schools to "motivate and educate students of all nationalities to embrace education and equip them with life skills necessary to become productive citizens."

Through his charity he runs eight different community-based programs. Some of JYD's initiatives include an academic incentive program, lifeskills workshops, "Tickets 4 Teachers", a mentoring program for troubled or incarcerated youth and a motivational tour focusing on the importance of self-esteem, respect for self and respect for the community.

Through the JYD Project he also served as executive producer of a Rap CD titled "Mission Possible" aimed at providing positive messages to kids. Thirty percent of the profits from the sale of the CD were donated to children's programs in Toronto.

During a trip to Africa with the NBA's Basketball without Borders program last September, Williams and his wife Nikkollette donated funds for a cafeteria and washroom to the impoverished

South African community, Kliptown, along with Dikembe Mutombo, John Thompson Jr. and other NBA players. After his retirement, Jerome has traveled to four continents with the NBA's Basketball Without Borders program, including helping children in Europe, Asia, Africa and South America. While in Africa, he was featured in Public Service Announcements to help educate the community about HIV/AIDS.

For his work in the community work, Williams has received many awards, including: 2000 National Home Team Community Service award for Outstanding Work in the Community by the Fannie Mae Foundation, The Sporting News' 2002 "Good Guys in Sports" and he was a finalist for the NBA's 2000 J. Walter Kennedy Citizenship Award.

Ramell Ross

After spending a year running international basketball clinics for the US State Department, RaMell Ross '05 decided to continue in the arena of international relations and spent the 2006-07 school year in Northern Ireland. He was there on behalf of Peace Players International, an organization that uses basketball to unite children in conflict areas around the world. In Northern Ireland RaMell worked to use the game to bridge the long standing divide between Roman Catholics and Protestants, to ensure that future generations would learn to respect and live in peace with one another.

As a Program Director, Ross was responsible for expanding PPI's East Belfast basketball club system, administering "twinning sessions" between Catholic and Protestant school children and running basketball clinics. These "twinning sessions" were the only interaction that these children of different backgrounds experienced with one another.

Dikembe Mutombo

He came to Georgetown on an academic scholarship, anticipating graduating with a medical degree, so he could return to his homeland and help its people. But life had other plans for this 7-2" student, and Dikembe Mutombo ended up on the Georgetown hardcourt, becoming one of the greatest defensive stoppers in the history of Georgetown basketball. Even though he went on to the NBA instead of medical school, he never let go of his desire to improve the lives of his countrymen

On June 20, 2007 he was inducted into the World Sports Humanitarian Hall of Fame at their 13th annual induction ceremonies. The Humanitarian Hall annually inducts individuals who are "world-class in athletic ability, role models in their community and have a strong record of humanitarian efforts". The eight-time NBA All-star was honored for his long-standing dedication to improving the health, education and quality of life for the people in his birthplace, the Democratic Republic of Congo and other parts of the world.

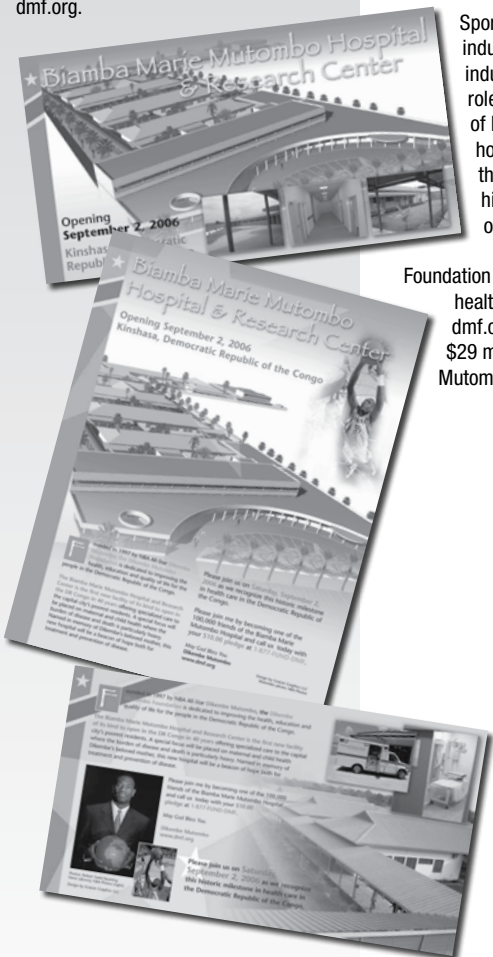

In 1997 he formed the Dikembe Mutombo Foundation with the stated goal of improving the overall physical health of his native people. Through the Foundation (www.dmf.org), Mutombo contributed $15 million toward the $29 million cost of building the new 300-bed Biamba Marie Mutombo Hospital and Research Center in the capital city of Kinshasa. The first one constructed in the entire country in over 40 years, the hospital opened in September 2006 and provides specialized care to the city's poorest residents, while training Congolese health professionals with the latest developments in health care

"As a community we have seen what kind of diseases have come to attack us and destroy the fabric of our society," said Mutombo upon receiving his Humanitarian award. "(Diseases) continue to take our lives and cut our lives short. I have been chosen to go out and make a difference. The most important thing in our lives is our relationship to humanity. We need to be an example for our children and our grandchildren."

Mutombo learned about his country's medical deficiencies firsthand when his mother died of a stroke in 1998. She was unable to get to the hospital, which was 10 minutes away, because of civil arrest, and she was forced to combat a stroke without medical attention. The hospital with her name sits on a 12-acre site on the outskirts of Kinshasa, where about a quarter of the city's 7.5 million residents live in poverty. The average life expectancy in DRC is 45, with one out of every five children dying before their fifth birthday.

"I love Dikembe," said Rockets vice president Tad Brown in an interview with The Houston Chronicle. "I love that he represents everything that is good about a person in a position of prominence in the sports world doing great things to help his

“When America serves others in this way, we show the strength and generosity of our country. These deeds reflect the character of our people. The greatest strength we have is the heroic kindness, courage, and self-sacrifice of the American people. You see this spirit often if you know where to look — and tonight we need only look above to the gallery.

“Dikembe Mutombo grew up in Africa, amid great poverty and disease. He came to Georgetown University on a scholarship to study medicine — but Coach John Thompson got a look at Dikembe and had a different idea. Dikembe became a star in the NBA, and a citizen of the United States. But he never forgot the land of his birth, or the duty to share his blessings with others. He built a brand new hospital in his old hometown. A friend has said of this good-hearted man: ‘Mutombo believes that God has given him this opportunity to do great things.’ And we are proud to call this son of the Congo a citizen of the United States of America.”

countrymen. He is the epitome of what you would look for in a humanitarian using his fame and fortune to do great things.”

In conjunction with the hospital groundbreaking, Mutombo took part in the administering of oral polio vaccines as part of the Polio Eradication Campaign in the Congo, which saw 8.2 million children under the age of five successfully vaccinated during its two-week period. Mutombo is also a spokesman for CARE, the international relief agency, and he was the first Youth Emissary for the United Nations Development Program, which educates countries about resources to help young people improve their futures.

He has also been instrumental in the NBA’s “Basketball Without Borders” international initiative which provides basketball instruction, health seminars and community outreach to youth in underprivileged areas. Since he is fluent in five African languages, Mutombo heads the annual NBA contingent of players and coaches, including John Thompson Jr and fellow Hoya Jerome Williams in 2005, to that continent. The program assembles 100 campers from more than 20 countries across Africa. The International Basketball Association (FIBA) selects the young players, ages 16-19 on their basketball skills, leadership abilities and overall dedication to the sport. Along with basketball instruction and competition, the camp incorporates seminars on leadership, education, sportsmanship and healthy living. The week is highlighted by extensive community outreach activities focused on HIV/AIDS awareness and prevention

In conjunction with the program, Mutombo’s foundation has provided dormitories, cafeterias and recreational facilities to African communities. In addition, in 1996 he paid for uniforms and expenses for his homeland’s women’s basketball team to attend the Olympic games in Atlanta.

Mutombo has also been recognized for his contributions by the following groups: The Sporting News’ top 99 “Good Guys in Sports” in 2000 and 1999, was one of 20 winners of the 1999 President’s Service Awards (our nation’s highest honor for volunteer service), the NBA’s 1999 Henry P. ## Former Georgetown Standout Sead Dizdarevic Brings Hoya Basketball to His Hometown in Montenegro

In August 2008, former Georgetown men's basketball player Sead Dizdarevic had the chance to do something he had wanted to do for a long time. Along with several of his former teammates and one of his coaches, Dizdarevic was able to bring the Hoyas to his home country in Montenegro.

Dizdarevic – along with former teammates Ashanti Cook (C'06), Darrel Owens (C'06), Amadou Kilkenny-Diaw (C'06) and RaMell Ross and current Director of Basketball Operations Matt Henry – said that upon reflection, the trip was something that he had always envisioned.

Upon donning the Blue & Gray jersey at Georgetown in 2003, Dizdarevic had hoped he could put a trip like this together. As a youngster, he dreamed of playing basketball. At one point, he considered dropping out of school to pursue his passion, but his parents encouraged him to continue his education.

That led him to North Highland High School in California, where he enrolled as an international exchange student. Georgetown followed by offering him the opportunity to earn his degree – he did, in government, in 2007 – and to play basketball. On the Hilltop, Dizdarevic was a part of the 2006-07 Final Four team and helped the Hoyas reach the postseason in three straight years.

After pursuing a professional career overseas following his graduation, Dizdarevic returned to the Nation's Capital with the thought of bringing Georgetown basketball to his country.

He worked with the United States Embassy in Montenegro, secured funding from the U.S. State Department and Opportunity Bank and contacted his friends to help him out.

The six Hoyas left in mid-August for Herceg Novi, Montenegro, where they conducted a series of eight clinics for 50 youngsters from the age of 13 to 16, 40 from Montenegro and 10 from Croatia.

"We taught them about basketball, but we also told them about the importance of education, which is really the most important thing for me," Dizdarevic said. "I wanted to show them that someone who came from the same background as them can accomplish so much. There were times when I wanted to quit school and just play, but the opportunities I had can be reached by them too."

Having his former teammates there to help him along the way was a big plus too.

"Each of the guys who came to my home did the same thing as me, they used their ability to play basketball to get an education," said Dizdarevic, who works at Georgetown's Center for Intercultural Education and Development. "The point of the visit wasn't just to show them the proper way to shoot or to set a screen, it was to show them that they combine both, playing basketball and getting an education, to better themselves."

"It was a great experience," Henry said. "Sead really put a lot of time into planning this out and I think I can speak for the other guys in saying that it was a once-in-a-lifetime type of experience."

Dizdarevic's original idea was to have one of his Georgetown teams make a preseason tour of Montenegro, but that was too difficult to arrange. He developed this current idea with Judith Jones, a public affairs officer at the U.S. Embassy in Montenegro.

"A lot of it is a tribute to Sead," Cook told the Washington Post. "He's very caring and likes to give back. He's just a really, really good friend, and someone you can trust. So why not drop what you're doing for a week to hang out with him and help him and see how his culture is?"

The clinic was such a success and received such favorable reviews that he is hoping to do it again in the future.

"The guys who went with me seemed to really enjoy it," Dizdarevic said. "It meant so much to me just to go back and be someone who was once in their shoes, but it was really the starting point for a dream I've had for so long. It was one of those times where a dream becomes a reality and it was as good as I thought it would be."

HOYAS ON WALL STREET

Georgetown Basketball Players Taste Experience of Business World During Visit to New York Stock Exchange

Throughout the storied history of the Georgetown basketball program, much has been written about the Hoya legends that return to the Hilltop to work out with each year's current group of players. But for sophomore Chris Wright and senior Bryon Jansen, they found that the Georgetown network extends far away from McDonough Gym and far beyond the basketball court.

In early August, Wright and Jansen travelled to New York City to visit with Georgetown alumni on Wall Street for the opportunity to learn more about the inner-workings of America's financial capital. It was the second time in two years that a pair of Hoyas had the option, as recent graduates Jonathan Wallace and Tyler Crawford made the trip a year ago.

On the first day, the players had the chance to meet with former Georgetown center Ralph Dalton (C '85). They met with him, as well others at Merrill Lynch, visited numerous trading desks and learned about different markets.

The duo then met with Steve Paluszek (B79) during the afternoon and then went to the New York Stock Exchange before having dinner. Paluszek, a member of the Georgetown University Wall Street Alliance who is a supporter of both the men's and women's basketball programs, is the Principal Investment Manager for PRB Advisors, LLC.

"I remembered hearing about when the guys went last year and thought it would be a neat experience," Wright said. "Both Jon and Tyler told me it was a once-in-a-lifetime type of experience, to visit the Exchange and to meet so many people. I'm really glad that we had the chance to do it."

"Chris and I were joking because in the last article, all of Jon and Tyler's quotes were like, [working on Wall Street] is just like basketball, so we were joking how we didn't want to have quotes like that," Jansen said. "I found myself putting my foot in my mouth afterwards, because I can't deny there were a lot of connections, like all of the real-time decisions where they know they are going to have mistakes and be able to deal with those mistakes and still keep going with all the energy they have."

For Wright and Jansen the trip to New York was a chance to see up close what they have only read about and seen on television. It was also an education in what goes on behind the scenes.

"One of the most eye-opening aspects was getting out on the floor," Wright said. "It's a lot different from what you think and being down there, you realize how hectic it is. It was amazing to see how things fast move for them. I just tried to absorb as much as I could."

"For me it's always been a text-book knowledge of what goes on and what I've read in magazines," Jansen said. "I read The Economist all the time and so I see some of the impact of how things are affected, but I've never seen the hands-on, people behind the numbers, the people behind the companies and the banks."

Despite it being their first trip to Wall Street, Wright and Jansen easily found common ground amongst the people they encountered. "I felt very welcome there," Wright said. "We would walk into a room with a hundred people that I didn't know or didn't recognize and then after being there for a half an hour I realized that a good portion of them were Georgetown alumni so it made Bryon and I feel very welcome and we felt like we fit in very well."

Along the way they came across a few familiar faces, namely former Georgetown center Ralph Dalton (C '85), who helped the Hoyas win a National Championship in 1984 prior to his work on Wall Street.

"It was interesting to meet with him because he talked to us much less about his job and the financial world and more about life in general," Wright said. "Being able to come through Georgetown and the basketball program and to see what he's doing now, it showed what we can accomplish too."

SUMMER HOOPS AT GEORGETOWN

For almost 20 years, future NBA stars and D.C. playground legends have made names for themselves in the James "Jabbo" Kenner League — the highlight of D.C. summer hoops. It is where Georgetown fans first laid on eyes on Allen Iverson, when he dropped 40 points in his first outing as a Hoya.

Familiar names have graced the Kenner League with their skills — Steve Francis, Sam Cassell, Brendan Haywood, Gilbert Arenas, Moochie Norris and Cuttino Mobley, are just a sample. But the fan favorites don't stop there, as some of D.C.'s greatest playground legends have also showcased their talents in McDonough Arena during the summer. One storied game featured a battle of NBA players squaring off against a group of D.C. street ball heroes. Steve Francis thought his 59 points were enough to secure the win, but Curt "Trouble" Smith put up 62 to lead the locals to a 121-120 decision over the NBA stars.

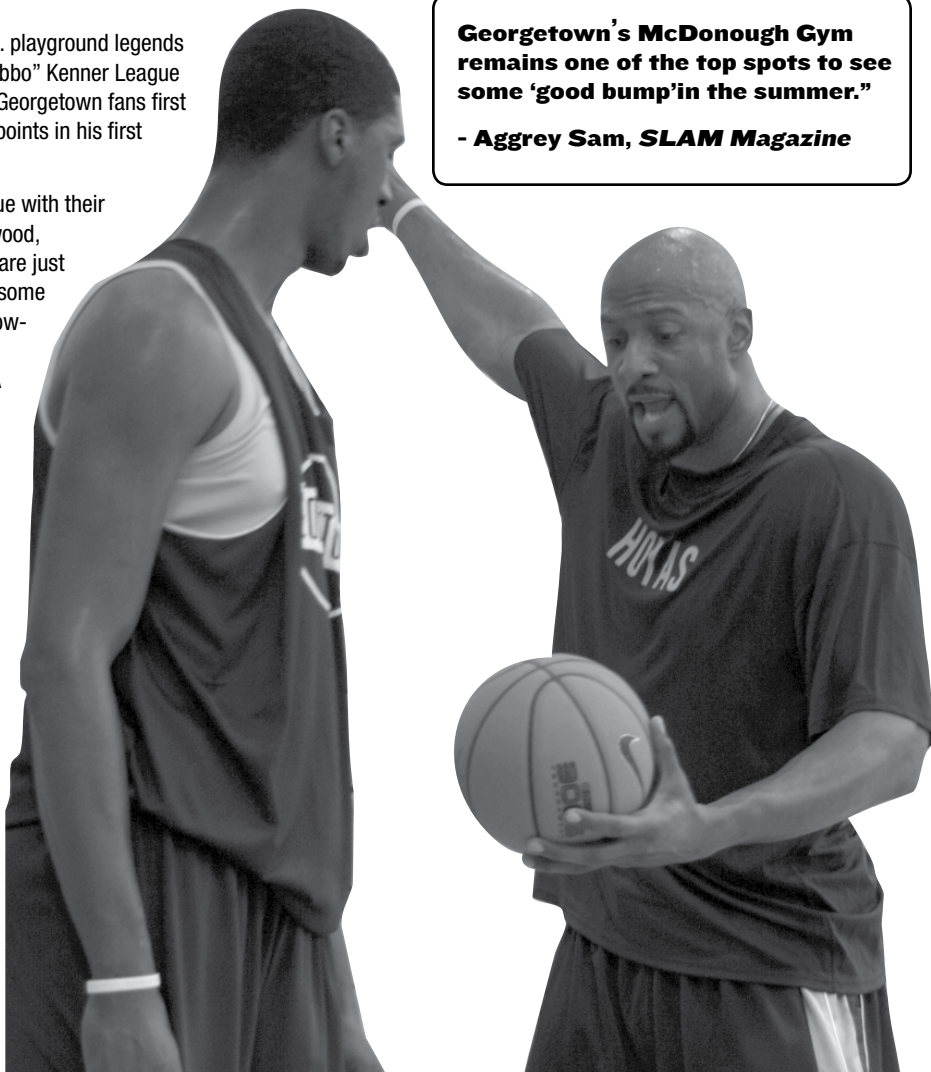

Georgetown fans enjoy the Kenner League because they get the chance to see how their players stack up against this level of talent. Year in and year out the Hoyas don't disappoint, including capturing three of the last four league titles.

Two summers ago, Roy Hibbert and Jessie Sapp led "Clyde's" to the league championship. It was the third-straight year that Hibbert has been on the championship team and his second title with "Clyde's". During the summer of 2004, the "Tombs" represented by Jeff Green, Jonathan Wallace, Tyler Crawford and Hibbert beat out the competition for the crown.

But summer runs do not end with the Kenner League. Weekly pick-up games take place in McDonough Arena that attracts some of the best levels of talent in the nation. When pros are in the D.C. area, McDonough is where they come for the best competition.

Georgetown's McDonough Gym remains one of the top spots to see some 'good bump'in the summer.'

The Kenner isn't your typical summer league because defense is as necessary as no-look passes. If you can't strap up, you won't play in the Kenner. The league has sent more than 30 players to the pros.
