

BULLDOG HISTORY

As Louisiana Tech roars deeper into the new millennium, the Bulldog basketball program can look back to its humble beginnings, to the successes of today and the many memories in between. The Louisiana Tech Bulldog basketball team won its first game in 1925 and collected the school's 1,000th victory during the 2000-01 season. Tech has gathered 19 20-win seasons, 19 conference championships, six NCAA appearances and six NIT appearances. The program has produced 737 all-conference players, nine conference Players of the Year and 15 conference Coaches of the Year. Success hasn't been easy for Louisiana Tech, but the coaches and the players that helped build the Bulldog program know that the hard work has been well worth the effort. The Bulldog basketball team knows it will keep alive Louisiana Tech's biggest tradition, SUCCESS!

Louisiana Tech began its collegiate basketball history during the 1925-26 season under the direction of the school's first basketball coach R. C. Kenny. Kenny, who was the football coach for the 1925 season, guided the Bulldogs during the inaugural season.

The Bulldogs dropped their first two collegiate contests to Centenary before picking up the school's first win with a victory over Louisiana College. Although some of the scores during that season were unrecorded, the Bulldogs did finish the season with a 7-7 record.

Coach Robert S. Wynn became the second coach in Louisiana Tech history when he took over the Bulldogs during the 1926-27 season. Wynn coached for five seasons and collected a 61-55 career record. In his first season he led the Bulldogs to their first winning season and first conference championship as Louisiana Tech won the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association championship in only its second year of existence.

Under Wynn, the Bulldogs repeated as SIAA champs the next season, posting a 15-10 record during the 1927-28 season. The 15 wins would stand as the most victories in a season by a Bulldog team until 1945-46. Tech closed out the decade finishing 12-13 in 1928-29 and 13-12 during the 1929-30 season. During that last season, Louisiana Tech picked up its 50th win with a victory over Shreveport "Y".

The 1930's was the roughest decade for the Bulldog basketball program. The .486 winning percentage during that time is the lowest in Tech history. Despite the losing record, the Bulldogs still managed five winning seasons during the decade.

Wynn coached his last season in 1930-31, guiding the Bulldogs to a 7-12 record.

Coach Hal Lee took over the program from 1931-34. Tech went 4-9 in his first season, but he quickly guided the team to consecutive winning seasons with 8-4 and 12-6 records.

Coach L. P. McLane took over the basketball program from 1934-36 and totalled a 26-12 record. McLane also served as the school's football coach from 1934-38. Among Tech's victories during his tenure was the school's 100th victory, a 36-19 win over Louisiana College.

In 1936, Coach Herb Duggins became the fifth coach in Louisiana Tech history and guided the team for four seasons. The Bulldogs had two consecutive losing seasons during Duggins' first two years but rebounded to go 10-8 in 1938-39.

The 1940's ushered in a new era in Louisiana Tech men's basketball history as Coach Cecil Crowley, the winningest coach in the program's history, led the Bulldogs to four conference championships. Crowley coached for two seasons, winning the LIC in year two in 1941-42 with a 13-8 record.

The program was discontinued for two seasons, 1942-43 and 1943-44 because of World War II. When the games resumed, football coach Joe Aillet took over the program for one season, guiding the Bulldogs to a 5-12 record in 1944-45.

Crowley returned for the 1945-46 season and would remain head coach of the Bulldogs until 1964. Crowley immediately picked up where he left off and led Louisiana Tech to three straight conference championships.

During the 1947-48 season, the Bulldogs picked up the school's 200th victory with a 56-46 win over Mississippi College.

In 1948, Louisiana Tech became a part of the Gulf States Conference, posting an 11-11 record their first season and an 11-9 record in 1949-50.

Crowley still remains at the top of the Louisiana Tech coaching list for career wins. During his 21 seasons, the most ever by a Louisiana Tech basketball coach, Crowley led the Bulldogs to eight conference championships.

Although some of the records are missing, at least two Bulldogs, Tom Herrin and George Latham, were named All-Conference.

Under head coach Cecil Crowley in the 1950's, the Bulldogs recorded the second highest winning percentage for a decade in the school's history. In fact, Louisiana Tech only recorded one losing season in the entire decade.

The decade also brought in a new facility for the basketball team as Memorial Gym was opened in December of 1952. The Bulldogs opened the building in grand fashion by winning the first game 107-49 over Henderson State, marking the first time a Bulldog team broke the century mark in a single game against a college opponent.

Tech captured its first Gulf States Conference championship in the 1952-53 season, going 17-10 and breaking the school record for most wins in a season. Two years later, the 1954-55 team became the school's first 20 game winner, going 20-10 and capturing another GSC championship. That season, Louisiana Tech captured its 300th win with a 85-55 victory over Centenary.

The Bulldogs picked up their second 20-win season in 1958-59 behind the leadership of Tech's first basketball All-American Jackie Moreland. Moreland led Louisiana Tech to a 21-4 record while averaging 21.1 points a game. Moreland was named first team All-American in 1958-59 and 1959-60, and later went on to play in the NBA with the Detroit Pistons. Teammate Ray Germany was named honorable mention All-American in 1958-59 and was named to the second team in 1959-60.

During the era, Louisiana Tech had 11 players earn All-Gulf States Conference honors, while Crowley earned two GSC Coach of the Year awards.

The Bulldog teams of the 1960's brought forth three conference championships and all-conference players like Jerry Hood, George Corley and former Lady Techsters' head coach Leon Barmore.

The decade started on a bad note as the Bulldogs had three consecutive losing seasons, the longest stretch in Louisiana Tech history. Along the way, Tech gathered its 400th school victory with a 68-64 win over Ole Miss. The Bulldogs rebounded during the 1963-64 season, the last under Coach Cecil Crowley, to win the school's fourth Gulf States Conference championship.

Louisiana Tech found a worthy successor to Crowley when it named Scotty Robertson as the school's eighth head coach. Robertson coached from 1964-74 and gathered a 161-86 record at Tech.

In 1966-67, Robertson's third season at the helm, the Bulldogs collected their third 20-win season and picked up another GSC championship with a 20-8 record. The squad also became the first Louisiana Tech team to play in the NCAA Tournament

The Bulldogs ended the decade on a good note by winning their sixth GSC title during the 1969-70 season while being led by a freshman named Mike Green, who would later go on to set most of Louisiana Tech's offensive records. That season, the Bulldogs also picked up their 500th win with a 100-84 defeat of Texas A&M.

Fifteen Bulldogs earned All-Gulf States Conference honors, while Moreland was named the Conference Player of the Year in the 1969-70 season. Crowley picked up his third Coach of the Year award in the 1963-64 season while Robertson earned his first during the 1966-67 campaign.

Under the guidance of Coach Scotty Robertson and behind the play of Mike Green, the Bulldogs opened the 1970's with a bang. The 1970-71 squad picked up another 20-win season, the school's fourth, going 23-5. The squad also became the second Louisiana Tech team to play in the NCAA Tournament.

In 1971, Louisiana Tech became a member of the Southland Conference and celebrated the inaugural season of the league by picking up the school's fifth 20-win season with a 23-3 record.

Mike Green returned for his senior season in 1972-73 and helped lead the Bulldogs to an 18-8 record while averaging a school record 30.9 points per game. His efforts that season earned him the AP Player of the Year honors and first team All-American status. Green left Louisiana Tech having scored 2,340 points, a record that still stands today. The 6-10 senior, who was chosen by the Seattle Supersonics, was the fourth overall player selected in the NBA draft in 1973.

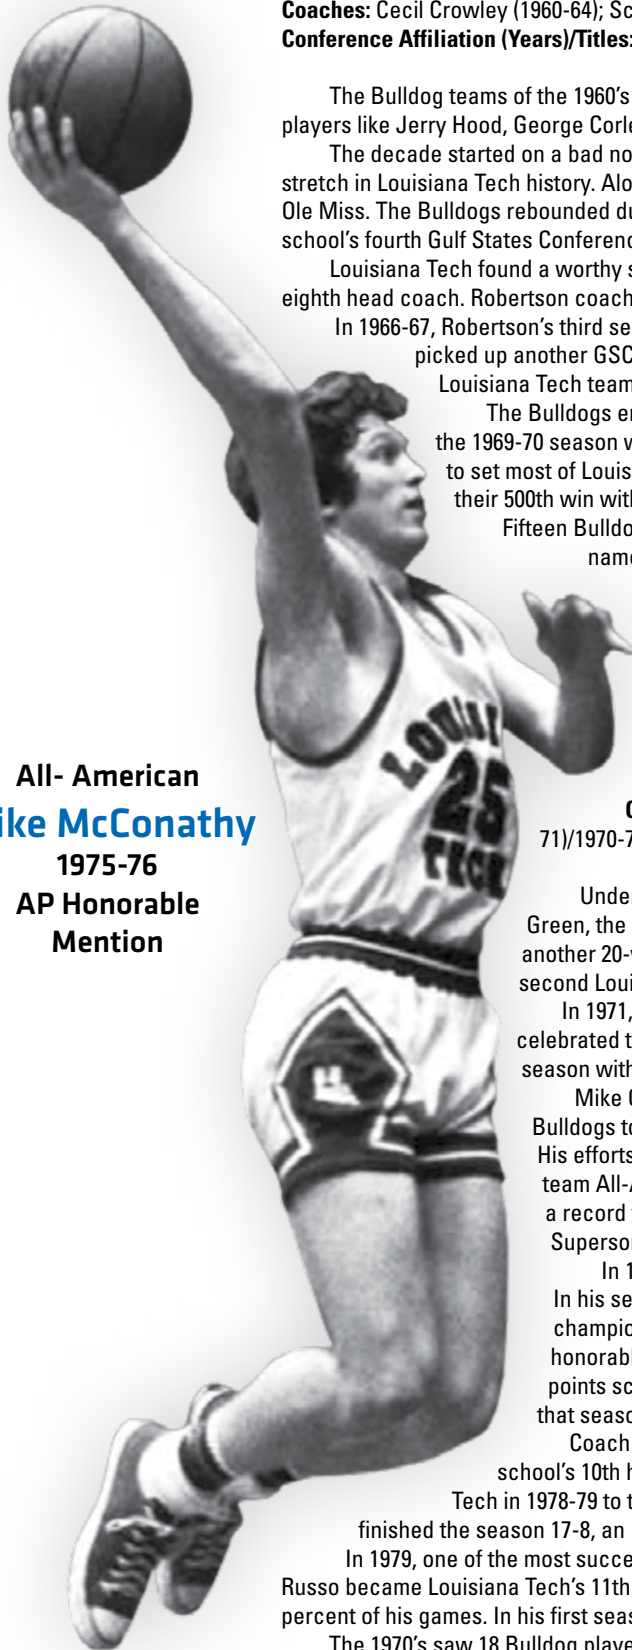

In 1974, Coach Emmett Hendricks became the ninth coach in school history. In his second season, Louisiana Tech claimed its second Southland Conference championship behind the leadership of Mike McConathy. McConathy was named honorable mention All-American that season and finished his career second in points scored with 2,033, behind only Green. With a 89-84 win over Arkansas State that season, Louisiana Tech picked up the school's 600th victory.

Coach J. D. Barnett took over the Bulldog program in 1977 to become the school's 10th head coach. After a 6-21 season in his first year, Barnett guided Louisiana Tech in 1978-79 to the second biggest turnaround in school history. The 1978-79 squad finished the season 17-8, an 11 game win difference over the previous season.

In 1979, one of the most successful coaches in the school's history took over the program. Coach Andy Russo became Louisiana Tech's 11th men's basketball head coach and during the next six seasons he won 69 percent of his games. In his first season, the last of the decade, Russo led the Bulldogs to a 17-10 record.

The 1970's saw 18 Bulldog players named to the all-conference team, with Green and McConathy earning Southland Conference Player of the Year awards. In 1978-79, Joe Ivory won SLC Newcomer of the Year. Coach Robertson grabbed his second Coach of the Year award, Coach Hendricks took two during the decade and Coach Barnett claimed one.

There is no doubt that the 1980's were the premier decade in the history of the Louisiana Tech men's basketball program.

The 1980-81 season was just the beginning as the Bulldogs picked up their sixth 20-win season with a 20-10 record. After an 11-16 record during the 1981-82 season, Louisiana Tech was ready to see something new.

Louisiana Tech constructed a new basketball arena, the Thomas Assembly Center that was completed and ready for the 1982-83 season. Fans were also anticipating the arrival of a new player, Karl Malone, who would also be ready to play that season.

Louisiana Tech would lose the very first game in the TAC but it quickly became home for the team as the Bulldogs rattled off 40 straight home wins following the loss. Malone would also make an impression, leading the team to a 19-9 record while being named All-American honorable mention. The Bulldogs also picked up the school's 700th victory with a 59-39 win over Texas-Pan American.

Malone and company took the Bulldogs to new heights during the 1983-84 season, guiding the team to a 26-7 record, the Southland tournament title and a berth to the NCAA Tournament. Louisiana Tech defeated Fresno State in the first round of the tournament before squaring off against Houston's Phi Slamma Jamma led by Akeem Olajuwon. Malone scored 18 points but the Bulldogs fell short 77-69 to the eventual national runner-up. Again, Malone was named honorable mention All-American.

The 1984-85 season will go down as one of the school's greatest seasons as the Bulldogs notched a 29-3 record, the best in Louisiana Tech history. The Bulldogs again won the Southland Conference championship and received a berth to the NCAA Tournament.

Tech won its first round game 78-54 over Pittsburgh and defeated Ohio State 79-67 in the second game to advance to the Midwest Regional to face No. 1 seed Oklahoma. The Bulldogs forced the Sooners to overtime but Oklahoma's Wayman Tisdale sank a last second shot in the extra period to win the game 86-84.

Malone was named second team All-American and was drafted in the first round of the NBA draft by the Utah Jazz.

Coach Russo and Malone were gone after the 1984-85 season but walked Tech's 12th head coach Tommy Eagles and next superstar Randy White.

In 1985-86, the Bulldogs continued their success with a 20-14 record, their third 20-win season in a row. Louisiana Tech made it to the postseason again with an invitation to the NIT. The Bulldogs knocked off Northern Arizona, McNeese State and Providence on the way to the NIT Final Four in New York. Playing at Madison Square Garden, Louisiana Tech dropped a 79-66 decision to Ohio State but rebounded in the consolation game with a 67-62 victory over Florida.

Louisiana Tech won its second conference championship during the 1986-87 season. The Bulldogs went 22-8 for their 10th 20-win season and the fourth consecutive. Tech advanced to the NCAA Tournament for the third time in four years. During the season, the school grabbed its 800th win with a 67-62 victory over Lamar.

The 1987-88 season brought a new conference as the Bulldogs joined the America South Conference. Louisiana Tech won the championship in its first season, collecting a 22-9 record and receiving another invitation to the NIT.

The Bulldogs continued their 20-win streak the next season, going 23-9 with wins over Fresno State and LSU. Tech won the America South Tournament and received an automatic bid to the NCAA Tournament, its sixth trip. Tech defeated LaSalle 83-74 but lost in the second round to Oklahoma. White would be named honorable mention All-American for his efforts and was drafted in the first round of the NBA draft by the Dallas Mavericks.

The last year of the decade would usher in a new coach, Coach Jerry Loyd, Tech's 13th head coach. Tech continued its winning ways, posting a 20-8 record and winning the school's fourth conference championship of the decade. The Bulldogs also played in the postseason in the NIT, the seventh year in a row that Louisiana Tech played after the regular season.

All in all, the 1980's produced eight 20-win seasons, seven post season appearances, four conference championships and two All-Americans. Seven of the 20-win seasons were consecutive as were all seven of the postseason appearances.

During the decade of the 80's, 16 players made the all-conference team, with Malone, White and Willie Simmons all earning conference Player of the Year awards. Malone and Reggie Gibbs picked up Newcomer of the Year awards during the decade. Coach Russo earned three Coach of the Year honors, Coach Eagles gathered two and Coach Loyd received one during that period.

Louisiana Tech continued its dominance in the early 1990's by going 21-10 and capturing the America South Tournament Championship during the 1990-91 season. The Bulldogs again advanced to the NCAA Tournament, the sixth time in school history.

The 1991-92 season marked a new conference for the Bulldogs as Louisiana Tech became a member of the Sun Belt Conference. Tech started the league on a good note by winning the league title with a 23-8 record, their ninth consecutive 20-win season. The NIT awaited the team that season to bring their postseason appearances to nine straight years as well. The Bulldogs also gathered their 900th win with a 76-62 victory over Jackson State that season.

But the string of consecutive 20-win season and postseason appearances would end the next season as the Bulldogs suffered their biggest decline, dropping to a 7-21 record. The 1993-94 season would be the lowest point in the decline as Tech finished the year 2-25, the lowest win total in school history.

In 1994, Coach Jim Wooldridge became Louisiana Tech's 14th head coach and immediately began to reconstruct the program. In his first season, Wooldridge guided the Bulldogs to the biggest turnaround in school history, picking up a 14-13 record, a 12-game improvement over the previous season.

For the next few years under Wooldridge's guidance, Louisiana Tech became competitive again. During the 1996-97 season, the Bulldogs played in the SBC Tournament final on ESPN, falling just short with a one point loss.

In 1998, Louisiana Tech named Coach Keith Richard as the school's 15th head coach. Richard immediately guided the Bulldogs back to another Sun Belt Championship with a 19-9 record, the first league title since the 1991-92 season. The 1999-2000 season would go a step further as Louisiana Tech collected its 16th 20-win season with a 21-8 record. The season would also be monumental because the Bulldogs picked up the program's 1000th victory with a 85-62 win over Nicholls State.

Twelve Bulldogs earned all-conference honors during the decade with Ron Ellis and Gerrod Henderson picking up Player of the Year awards. Derek Smith and Antonio Meeking received Freshman of the Year awards while Ellis and Craig Jackson picked up Newcomer of the Year honors. Coach Richard earned Sun Belt Conference Coach of the Year honors during the 1998-99 season.

Louisiana Tech carried its winning tradition into the new millenium with a 17-12 record in the school's last season in the Sun Belt Conference. That successful campaign gave the Bulldogs three consecutive winning seasons for the first time since the 1989 through 1992 seasons. The 2000-01 Bulldogs also become the first team in school history to record 10 or more conference wins in three consecutive seasons. Head Coach Keith Richard left the Sun Belt Conference with the sixth best all-time winning percentage in the league's history. His teams also won more conference games during his tenure than any other team in the league.

Following the 2000-01 season the Bulldogs jumped over to the Western Athletic Conference with successful results. The Bulldogs roared to a 22-10 mark, winning a Tech record 14 conference games to finish third in the WAC. The team advanced to the postseason for the first time since the 1991-92 season by accepting a NIT bid.

The NIT invitation wasn't enough for the Bulldogs, who hosted UL-Lafayette in the first round and cruised to a 83-63 win over the Ragin' Cajuns. The Bulldogs followed with an 83-68 win over Vanderbilt, marking the season's second win over a Southeastern Conference opponent after the Bulldogs recorded an earlier win at Auburn.

Tech's home win over Vanderbilt set up a road match at perennial powerhouse Villanova. The Bulldogs trailed early but tightened things up late to set up a dramatic finish. Tech trailed by three points as senior Gerrod Henderson, renowned for his last-minute heroics, had the opportunity to tie the game at the buzzer. Henderson's shot was on line but hit the front of the rim as Tech's season ended with the 67-64 loss.

Two years ago a rollercoaster of a season saw the Bulldogs ride both winning and losing streaks on the way to a 12-15 finish. The team dropped its final five games after winning seven straight, making the Bulldogs hungry to turn things around the following season with a mixture of new and inexperienced Bulldogs.

That inexperience resulted in a 15-15 mark for Tech in 2003-04, but the emergence of WAC Freshman of the Year Paul Millsap, who led the NCAA in rebounds with 12.5 per game, gave the Bulldogs a bright future as more experience and talent was added to the team.

Richard dubbed that season "a successful rebuilding year," but the Bulldogs ended the 2004-05 season with a mediocre 14-15 overall record and fourth-place in the WAC at 9-9.

Six seasons into the decade, a Bulldog has been honored as an all-conference player following each campaign. Gerrod Henderson represented Tech on two consecutive all-league teams while Darrian Brown earned Western Athletic Conference Newcomer of the Year accolades following the 2001-02 seasons.

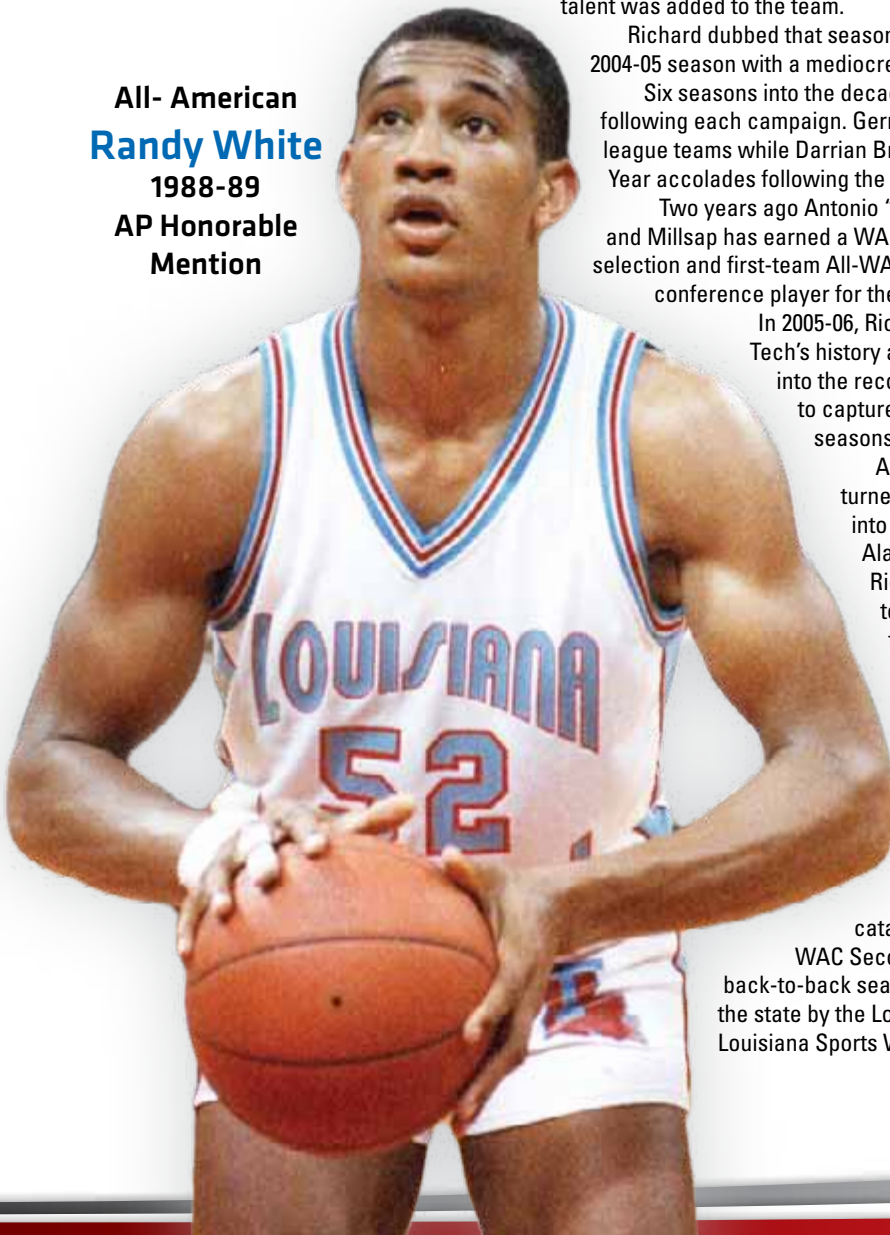

Two years ago Antonio "Tiger" Meeking was named a first-team All-WAC selection, and Millsap has earned a WAC Freshman of the Year award, second-team All-WAC selection and first-team All-WAC pick. He was also selected as a preseason first-team all-conference player for the 2005-06 season.

In 2005-06, Richard took 10 newcomers to the 18th 20-win season in Tech's history and to a sixth NIT appearance. Millsap also entered himself into the record books as the first athlete in the history of the NCAA to capture the rebounding championship in back-to-back-to-back seasons averaging 13.3 boards per game.

After electing not to renew Richard's contract, Louisiana Tech turned to nationally renowned Kerry Rupp to lead the Bulldogs into the future. Rupp comes to Tech from Mike Davis' staffs in Alabama-Birmingham and Indiana, while also serving under Rick Majerus at Utah. Rupp's renown comes from his ability to recruit and will look to return Tech to the glory days of the late 70's and early 80's. In season three of the Rupp era, the Bulldogs reached heights they hadn't seen in years with the program's 19th 20-win season and a spot in the postseason in the CollegeInsider.com Tournament. Tech got national attention due to their 18-2 start to the season as they earned votes in the AP and ESPN/USA Today Top 25 poll. They dominated games at the TAC going 12-2, the most wins since 2000. Kyle Gibson capped off a remarkable career by finishing 8th on Tech's all-time scoring list and finished in the top 10 in numerous categories. He and Magnum Rolle were selected to the all-

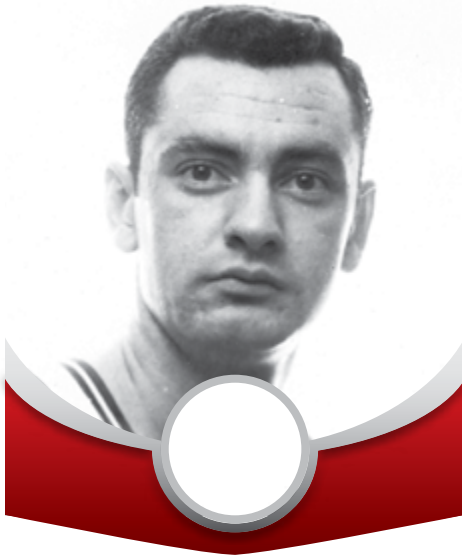

WAC Second Team. Rupp improved the team's record by nine wins in back-to-back seasons and in doing so, was named the Coach of the Year in the state by the Louisiana Association of Basketball Coaches as well as the Louisiana Sports Writers Association.
