BRIEF HISTORY OF LEWIS & CLARK WOMEN'S SOCCER

Soccer has been a popular sport on Palatine Hill throughout the history of the school. It was decided in 1979, however, to take it from popular to an organized varsity sport for Lewis & Clark College women. The Pioneers began organized varsity competition in the Northwest Soccer League, playing against opponents such as the University of Washington, Washington State, Oregon State, and University of Oregon, as well as more evenly matched opponents such as Puget Sound, Whitman, and Western Washington. In 1980, still playing in this varied league, the Pioneers had their first and only All-American soccer player, goalkeeper Lori Kats.

The National Soccer Coaches' Association, the organization who voted on the All-American awards, did not differentiate between Division I, Division II, and III, and NAIA in the infancy of the award in the early 80's. Kats was deemed one of the best soccer players in the country, not just at her level of play. In 1981, the Pioneers became a feared soccer power in the Pacific Northwest, posting a 13-3-3 record and a league championship. The team finished fourth in the regional tournament. After another stellar year in 1982, the Pioneers withdrew from the Northwest Soccer League as the Northwest Conference of Independent Colleges decided to sponsor soccer as a sport.

Randy Nordlof took over the coaching duties, a job that he handled admirably for six full seasons, the longest tenure of any Lewis & Clark women's soccer varsity coach. Nordlof led the women to a 53-34-10 record during his tenure. Nordlof's 1983 team also posted a 13-1-2 final record and a 1983 District II championship. He followed that with another 13-win season in 1984. The Pioneers have finished with double-digit wins in a season three times, twice under Coach Nordlof and once with Tom Flora in 1981.

In 1988, former HM All-Conf. halfback Amy Brooks (1980-83) went from attacking the goal on the field to attacking the goal with a clipboard, taking over the coaching duties from Nordlof. Brooks coached for two seasons (1988-89) before handing the game planning over to another Pioneer soccer alum, former All-NCAC and All-District II goalkeeper, Jill Towstik. Towstik played for Brooks in 1988 and 1989 and then was named the final coach of the varsity program in 1990. In 1991, mainly due to budgetary constraints, soccer reverted back to being a club sport. It then became one of the most popular club sports on campus with many fervent supporters hoping to find a way for it to regain varsity status. Their persistence paid off. It was decided that women's soccer would return as a varsity sport in 2004. For the 2003 season, soccer returned in a junior varsity form, trying to gear up for a triumphant return to varsity play in the Northwest.

On September 3, 2004, soccer did just that, returning in a big way. In the first game back as a varsity program, Coach Todd Anckaitis' squad had a decisive 9-0 road victory at Cascade College. Anckaitis' team had a huge 2-1 victory over UC Santa Cruz and a 0-0 tie with Cal State Hayward to remind everyone that soccer was back at Lewis & Clark. After setting the foundation for soccer's return, Coach Anckaitis turned over the reigns in 2005 to Lisa Unsworth, a former Canadian National Team member. Under Unsworth, the Pioneers earned their first Northwest Conference victory since 1987, a 2-1 victory over George Fox in Newberg on Sept. 24, 2005. The Pioneers went on to a 5-9-2 mark in Conference play in 2005.
