THE AMERICAN

UNT officially joined the American Athletic Conference on July 1 and will compete in all sports in the league beginning this fall entering a new era of increased visibility and higher competition.

"I'm proud to see UNT join the American Athletic Conference, and I'm excited to see our athletics programs – and our entire university – elevated into a more prestigious conference like The American," UNT President Neal Smatresk said. "As UNT has grown and made numerous advances in our academic programs and research enterprise in recent years, we've emerged as the most comprehensive university in the Dallas-Fort Worth area and the fastest-growing in Texas. Joining The American is another example of UNT's commitment to excellence and is an exciting new beginning for us."

The Mean Green won seven conference championships over the last three years and took home the 2023 National Invitation Tournament in men's basketball. UNT also had three student-athletes reach the NCAA Outdoor Track and Field Championships for the first time since 1983. In January, UNT Football played in its sixth bowl game in seven years.

"It has been an exciting year for UNT Athletics, and that excitement continues as we transition to the American Athletic Conference," Vice President and Director of Athletics Jared Mosley said. "All of Mean Green Nation is looking forward to the new challenges, opportunities and successes that lie ahead in this new era of athletics at UNT."
