CHASING HISTORY

The Buckeye senior trio of Bo Jordan, Kyle Snyder and Nathan Tomasello have a chance to accomplish something no group has ever done in NCAA wrestling history. They could become the first teammate trifecta to all earn their fourth All-American status in the same year.

STABLE FULL OF HORSES

Ohio State's roster is littered with All-Americans, totaling seven, yes, count 'em, SEVEN returning All-Americans. In addition to the three mentioned above, Micah Jordan, Joey McKenna, Myles Martin and Kollin Moore have also found their way to the NCAA podium in past seasons.

THE CHAMP

HE'S GOLDEN | In Rio, a then-20-year-old Kyle Snyder became the youngest Olympic gold medalist in U.S. wrestling history and first OSU Olympic champion since 1924.

IN THE LAST TWO YEARS | Since September of 2015, Snyder has won two World championships, two Big Ten championships, two NCAA titles and an Olympic gold medal.

FIRST SINCE '60 | Snyder became the first active Ohio State student-athlete to win Olympic gold since Jerry Lucas (basketball) did so at the 1960 Games.

'MATCH OF THE CENTURY' | In a bout that was dubbed "The Match of the Century," Snyder defeated Olympic and two-time world champion Abdulrashid Sadulaev of Russia, 6-5, to win the 97-kilogram gold medal and clinch Team USA's first men's freestyle world team title in 22 years at the 2017 World Wrestling Championships.

THE JENNINGS WRESTLING FACILITY

A critical program element needed to attract the best and brightest athletes is the facilities in which they study, train and compete. As a result, the Ohio State wrestling program is in need of a new practice facility – their classroom – wherein they can train and hone their skills.

The importance of superior training facilities cannot be overstated. It's where young men become seasoned athletes. It's where student-athletes learn the intrinsic values of sacrifice and determination – values that are integral to achieving success beyond the sport.

"WHEN YOU HAVE A FACILITY TO THE STANDARD THAT THIS ONE IS GOING TO BE, IT SCREAMS VALUE; IT SCREAMS IMPORTANCE; IT SCREAMS THAT WHEN YOU COME HERE, YOU ARE GOING TO BE TREATED IN A FIRST-CLASS WAY."
– TOM RYAN, HEAD WRESTLING COACH

To ensure this success, the Department of Athletics is building a dedicated wrestling practice facility. The new structure will include a state-of-the-art practice facility, along with offices for coaches and student-athlete space. The facility will be located within the Athletics District, giving the student-athletes a place to call home.

With private investment in a new practice facility, coupled with the development of the Covelli Center where the wrestling team will compete, Ohio State Wrestling will have all of the key ingredients to achieve their vision of consistently competing for Big Ten and NCAA Championships.
