SAVANNAH LAND

Savannah Wheeler becomes just the ninth Lady Raider overall to be named conference player of the year and the third to be named CUSA Player of the Year. The guard has been sensational this season, leading the league in scoring (17.5 ppg), assists (150), assist/turnover ratio (2.1), and minutes (37.8). Already the CUSA all-time free throw record holder, Wheeler also recently cracked into the top three on the all-time leader scorers list. The recent graduate and five-time CUSA Player of the Week also earned First Team All-Conference honors.

– #RevUpThe4Wheeler –

NOT IN HER HOUSE

Anastasiia Boldyreva burst onto the scene this season and established herself as one of the top rim protectors in the nation en rout to being the first Lady Raider to be named CUSA Defensive Player of the Year.

She currently leads the league and ranks fourth in the nation with 93 blocks on the season – a Lady Raider single-season record. The junior also earned First Team All-Conference and All-Defensive Team honors. She has played a crucial part in the Lady Raiders having a top 10 defense nationally. MTSU is currently holding opponents to just 51.8 points per game and scoring 75.1 for an average scoring margin of 23.3.

With four blocks against LA Tech, the junior surpasses Kay Wilbanks to become the all-time blocks leader with 193 career blocks. Boldyreva's eight blocks against Jax State ranks third all-time in blocks per game by a Lady Raider.

STREAKS

The Lady Raiders have the sixth longest winning streak in the nation at 18 games and the fifth longest winning streak against conference opponents at 24 games.

PLAYING WITH THE LEAD

- MTSU has been outstanding with the lead and closing games out under HC Rick Insell.
- MTSU is 392-39 all-time when leading at the half under Insell.
- MTSU is 431-20 when leading at the 5-minute mark under Insell.

ROAD RAIDERS

- MTSU has enjoyed great road success under HC Rick Insell.
- The Lady Raiders are 171-87 overall on the road under Insell, for a 65 percent winning ledger.
- Insell's teams are 70-20 on the road in CUSA play (76 percent), and 128-31 (79 percent) in conference road games overall (CUSA & Sun Belt).

A MTSU WIN WOULD...

- MTSU would move to 1,027-454 all-time.
- MTSU would earn its fifth CUSA Championship.
- MTSU would move to 20-5 all-time in the CUSA Tournament - sixth CUSA championship appearance.

SHOOTERS SHOOT

The Lady Raiders are 147-18 (.885) under Head Coach Rick Insell when connecting on 10 or more Three-Point Field Goals in a game.

CAREER LEADERS

Savannah Wheeler ranks fourth in the nation in career free throws made (643) and sixth in career free throw attempts (758).

The graduate also ranks eighth in nation in scoring among active career leaders with 2303 career points.

MENTOR VS. MENTEE

Memphis Head Coach Alex Simmons, Tennessee Head Coach Kellie Harper and NM State Head Coach Jody Adams each played for Head Coach Rick Insell prior to their collegiate careers.

Simmons played for Insell at Shelbyville Central HS, while Adams and Harper played AAU ball for Insell at the Shelbyville Sports Shop.

Insell went a perfect 5-0 against his former players in 2023-24, with a pair of wins over Memphis, a neutral site win over Tennessee and a pair of wins over NM State.

POINTS. POINTS. POINTS.

With 18 points against UTEP, Savannah Wheeler became the 10th player in Conference USA history to eclipse 2,000 career points.

With eight points against NM State, Jalynn Gregory became just the 34th Lady Raider in program history to eclipse 1,000 career points.

With eight points against LA Tech, Courtney Whitson eclipsed 1,500 career points. She is just the 12th Lady Raider in program history to accomplish that feat.

With 22 points against LA Tech, Wheeler eclipsed 1,000 career points in a Lady Raider uniform – just the 35th Lady Raider to do so.

With 16 points against LA Tech, Boldyreva became the 36th Lady Raider to eclipse 1,000 career points.

FOR THE LOVE OF CHARITY

With 13 free throws against NM State, Savannah Wheeler became the Conference USA all-time leader in career free throws made with 579.

SHARPSHOOTERS

With a pair of triples against GCU, Wheeler became just the 16th player in CUSA history to eclipse 200 career made three-point field goals.

With four three-point field goals against Sam Houston, Courtney Whitson became the all-time record holder at Middle Tennessee with 260.

With eight three-point field goals against Jax State, Jalynn Gregory became the 17th player in CUSA history to eclipse 200 career made three-point field goals.

QUEEN ON THE BOARDS

Courtney Whitson became just the fourth Lady Raider in program history to surpass 900 career rebounds in MTSU' 70-45 win over Houston.

The graduate became just second Lady Raider in program history to eclipse 1,000 career boards -joining Ebony Rowe.

RACE TO 1,000

Middle Tennessee became just the 25th school in NCAA Division I women's basketball history and the third in Conference USA to reach 1,000 program wins on Thursday, Nov. 9 when the Lady Raiders defeated the Florida A&M Rattlers 93-48.

INTERNATIONAL FLAVOR

MTSU has seven international players on its 2023-24 roster, spanning from Canada, Hungary, Russia and Spain.

Middle Tennessee's has the third most international student-athletes on its roster (seven) and the third most countries represented (six).

The Lady Raiders have a short history when it comes to landing international players. Prior to the 2023-24 season, only 10 internationals have suited up for the Lady Raiders in program history.

PORTAL SUCCESS

Several student-athletes have found a new home at MTSU and enjoyed great success on the floor at MTSU as a transfer students.

Dor Saar (Maine to MTSU in 2021)

- Hit 90 3-point field goals in one season at MTSU, Saar averaged 11.9 points and dished out 126 assists during the 2021-22 season in leading the Lady Raiders to the semifinals of the Postseason WNIT in 2022.
- Named Second Team All-Conference USA in 2021-22.
- Ranks third on the Lady Raider single-season three-point field goal list (90).
- Ranked 14th nationally in three-point field goals made in 2021-22 (90).

Kseniya Malashka (VCU to MTSU in 2020)

- In two seasons with MTSU, Malashka averaged 15.1 points in 2022-23 and 13.6 points in 2021-22 as she helped MTSU secure a school-record 55 wins during her two seasons for the Lady Raiders.
- Twice named the Conference USA Sixth Player of the Year.
- Conference USA Regular Season and Tournament Champion in 2022-23.
- Drafted 35th overall by the Chicago Sky in 2023.

Savannah Wheeler (Marshall to MTSU in 2022)

- In her first season at MTSU, Wheeler averaged a team-best 15.1 points per game – starting all 30 games she appeared in.
- First Team All-Conference Selection in 2022-23.
- Three-Time Conference USA Player of the Week in 2022-23.
- Conference USA Regular Season and Tournament Champion in 2022-23

Sifa Ineza (FIU to MTSU in 2023)

- Freshman All-CUSA in 2022-23 at FIU
- Averaged 8.1 points, 3.0 rebounds at FIU
- Paced FIU with 45 made 3-pointers, ranked eighth in CUSA in 2022-23

TOUGH COMPETITION

Middle Tennessee will play a tough non-conference slate highlighted by a neutral site matchup with the Tennessee Lady Vols in Huntsville, Alabama and a trip to the Bahamas to play in the Battle 4 Atlantis. With 17 possible non-conference opponents on the schedule, the Lady Raiders have a chance to face 12 teams that finished in the top 150 of the NET Rankings last season and 10 that finished in the top 100 before heading into league play. MTSU has the toughest strength of schedule in Conference USA and the 88th overall.

FUTURE LADY RAIDER

Middle Tennessee head coach Rick Insell announced the addition of 2022 Tennessee Miss Basketball Savannah Davis during the first day of the NCAA Early Signing Period on Wednesday, Nov. 11th..

Davis, a dynamic guard out of McKenzie, Tenn., led McKenzie High School to back-to-back state championships and was named the tournament MVP in 2022 and 2023. A three-time TSWA All-State Selection, Davis averaged 18.8 points and 6.4 rebounds per game as a sophomore and 18.7 points and 6.2 rebounds per game as a junior.

On Dec. 19, 2023, the future Lady Raider set the TSSAA State Record for most Three-Point Field Goals in a game. Davis went 17-of 21 from beyond the arc and tallied 60 points on the night.

Senior Spotlight: Savannah Wheeler has been the key cog in back-to-back Conference USA Regular Season Championships, leading the team in scoring average in both of her seasons in the Blue and White. Her senior season has been her best yet.

No coach in Middle Tennessee women's basketball history has produced the success that Rick Insell has in 18 seasons. Since his arrival to Middle Tennessee in 2005, Insell has led the Raiders to 11 NCAA Tournament appearances, six WNITs, coached five All-Americans and grew four WNBA Draft picks.

In his 18 seasons, the eight-time hall of fame inductee has established a track record unlike any other in the Lady Raiders' rich women's basketball history, while also creating lofty expectations. In 18 seasons leading his alma mater's women's basketball program, Insell has also positioned Middle Tennessee as one of the winningest programs nationally.

HEAD COACH RICK INSELL

Has produced 1,208 total victories in a career spanning 40-plus seasons. Record entering 2023-24 season:
433-151 record at Middle Tennessee | 775-148 record at Shelbyville Central HS
Inducted into the Tennessee Secondary Schools Athletic Association Hall of Fame, 2003... Inducted into the National High School Hall of Fame, February 2007. He is one of only six Tennesseans, and just the fourth coach, elected... 2010 recipient of the Naismith Basketball Hall of Fame's Morgan Wootten Award for Lifetime Achievement for High School Girls Basketball... Inducted into Tennessee Sports Hall of Fame, 2012... Inducted into the Cannon County Sports Hall of Fame, 2013... Inducted into the Women's Basketball Hall of Fame, June 2017... Inducted into the Blue Raiders Sports Hall of Fame, September 2017... Inducted into the Basketball Coaches Association of Tennessee (BCAT) Hall of Fame, October 2021.

MTSU WOMEN'S BASKETBALL 2023-24 SEASON PRE-VIEW

Luke Cameron – MTSU Sidelines

Entering his 19th season at the helm, Middle Tennessee women's basketball coach Rick Insell continues to have the same goal, making the NCAA Tournament.

Insell believes that in basketball as in other things, one's reach should exceed their grasp.

"Goals are not meant to be realistic. Goals are meant to make you stretch," Insell said.

The Lady Raiders return four starters from last year's Conference USA regular season and tournament championship team: Courtney Whitson, Savannah Wheeler, Jalynn Gregory and Anastasiia Boldyreva.

Playmaking guard Courtney Blakely is no longer with the program, and versatile forward Kseniya Malashka graduated and was selected by the Chicago Sky in the third round of the 2023 WNBA Draft in April.

New to the program are Florida International University transfer Sifa Ineza and several freshmen: center Iulia Grabovskaia, 2023 Tennessee Class AA Miss Basketball Jada Harrison, guard Zahira Arizmendi Rubio, forward Dora Van Rijs and forward Stanislava Kabernick.

Gracie Hamby and Gracie Dodgen return after using a medical red-shirt last season. Meioshe Mason and Jada Grannum are back in the post, and Ta'Mia Scott returns and looks to contribute significantly from her guard position.

Looking at this year's squad, Insell says MTSU has more size than it has had in the past. This alludes to the eight Lady Raiders that are at least six feet tall.

The team also benefits from the leadership and experience of fifth-year athletes Whitson and Wheeler.

Insell stresses that players need not play significant minutes on the court to have an impact on the team.

"Our philosophy is how are you going to help the team become a better team? A good attitude and positive energy at practice and at team meals," Insell said.

MTSU opens up play on Oct. 27 with an exhibition game against the University of Tennessee-Southern and then on October 30 against the University of the Columbians. The non-conference slate includes Memphis, Florida A&M, Princeton, Southern Illinois-Edwardsville, Houston, Belmont, Tennessee, Tennessee Tech, Stephen F. Austin, Northern Kentucky and Grand Canyon University. In November, MTSU will also take part in the Battle for Atlantis tournament in the Bahamas, where it will meet Michigan in the first round.

The conference slate includes two games against the other conference schools: Louisiana Tech, Sam Houston, UTEP, New Mexico

State, Jacksonville State, Florida International, Western Kentucky and Liberty.

COURTNEY WHITSON - HOMETOWN HERO

Anthony Fiorella – MT Athletics

If there was ever a representation of a player who chose to continue their athletic career at Middle Tennessee State because it represented exactly what home felt like for her, it'd be hard to argue against Lady Raider forward Courtney Whitson, a Kingsport, Tennessee, native.

Over the past four-plus years, the close-knit women's basketball team at Middle Tennessee has enjoyed one of its best stretches under Head Coach Rick Insell's tutelage, and right in the center of that has been Whitson, who has started in all 124 games she's played in her career, tied with Patrice Holmes for second most in program history and just eight starts away from breaking Ebony Rowe's record of 131. Behind all the rebounds, three-pointers, assists and steals, the one underlying factor that Whitson brings to the team, whether she is on the floor or not, is her ability to lead by keeping the group tight, a quality that she picked up from her early days falling in love with the game in her native Kingsport.

"I think the community is what sets Kingsport apart," Whitson said. "That's actually why I chose MTSU. It feels like a community and that inner circle made me feel like it was closer to back home. Overall, I just really love the family aspect that you get from it."

Of course, family is the most important thing a person has growing up, and from an early age Whitson and her mother, Sonya, formed a bond that taught her that keeping those you love the closest will help you achieve whatever it is that you set your mind to.

As a single mother, Sonya worked many long hours to provide for the family and always made sure that Whitson was able to spend as much time enjoying being a kid as possible. Through a couple of family friends, Clay Minton and Shaun Potts, who eventually would coach Whitson, they helped her discover her love for the game of basketball as just a kindergartener.

"I spent a lot of time just hanging out with family (growing up)," Whitson said. "I also give a lot of credit to my coaches Shaun Potts and Clay Minton for helping me fall in love with the game of basketball. My mom worked really hard to provide for our family growing up so that I could focus on basketball and both of my coaches played a big part in helping me fall in love with basketball."

Even as just a five-year-old, Whitson was learning how important it was to be a part of a team and how to not only be a resource for others in your community to lean on but to also lean on them and let them support you. The young girl who wanted to do nothing besides play with her dolls and become a teacher would quickly transition from not knowing what a layup was to spending her afternoons in the small rec-league and high school gyms in Kingsport perfecting her craft.

“(Minton) told my mom that I had a chance to be a basketball player and that they should sign me up,” Whitson said. “I’ll never forget the first time I went to a tryout and they had us get into layup lines and I looked up and asked ‘What’s a layup?’ So obviously, they’ve helped me come a long way from then.”

Whitson spent a lot of time in that gym as well as the gym at Dobyns Bennett High growing up, even skipping hanging out with friends at times to play basketball. It was an escape for the Blue Raider forward.

The people of Kingsport have deep roots in the community, and Whitson took hers in the game of basketball to give back and impact her hometown. Through hard work and perseverance, she gave her all to bring winning basketball to the girls’ program at Dobyns Bennett.

Whitson and her teammates learned and grew together and by the time they got to high school, they already clicked well as a unit on the court because of the close-knit family aspect they’d developed playing in front of those same crowds on Saturday mornings in the small rec-league gym. That led to success in Whitson’s first year wearing the maroon and grey, leading the team to a district title.

“Going into my freshman year, I had zero expectations and didn’t know what to expect coming into high school,” Whitson said. “It was my first time playing in a program setting and we ended up winning our first district championship that year. Coach Bill Francis did such a great job with us and we were so close together all the way through high school.”

Though she played travel ball growing up, the high school setting and the close-knit bond she formed with her teammates represented the bond of the townspeople. Spending time watching film, going through the scout for the opposing team, conditioning and laughing and building chemistry in the locker room brought the group together and created a winning team. The success helped Whitson have an impact by re-writing the record books as the leading scorer and rebounder at Dobyns Bennett and leading the team to several successful years in her time as a Lady Warrior.

“When you think about the community and family aspect, I think our success literally brought the whole community together,” Whitson said. “I can remember the night of that first district championship game in the gym at Volunteer High School and just going into it and thinking and not knowing what to expect. The gym was packed with the fans that I saw each and every night and it was just awesome to play in an environment like that.”

Following her high school career, Whitson knew that she made the right choice in picking Middle Tennessee because it represented everything that embodied her childhood and the programs that she grew up playing in.

Still, realizing that she soon would have to move on and leave home for the first time was a bittersweet moment and one that her mom helped jumpstart what has been a memorable career as a Lady Raider.

“I can remember when I was first leaving to report to camp for the first time my freshman year at MTSU, my mom and I didn’t say much to each other,” Whitson said. “That’s how we knew something big was happening. I’ll never forget what she did that day, though. She laid a newspaper on my bed and it was an article in the Kingsport Times that was titled ‘A guiding light.’ It was a feature they had done about me, and it was a moment that reassured me that I could accomplish the same things at MTSU because of the community, its support and my faith.”

Just like those nights packing into the gym at Volunteer High, a lot of the same faces are always in the crowd in the Murphy Center for Lady Raider home games. Over the past four years, there have always been faces that Whitson saw in Kingsport follow her to Murfreesboro to come and watch her play, along with several other fans who are regulars at Lady Raider games.

After they introduce the starting lineups, it’s not uncommon to see Whitson run over to give a fan a quick hug or find a young child to throw a t-shirt to. Murfreesboro gives her that same feel that she experienced growing up in Kingsport and it’s led to many of the same results the fifth-year senior experienced in her high school career.

“I can’t tell you how many people from back home text me and ask me to see if they can get tickets or let me know that they are watching me,” Whitson said. “It means a lot to me because I know that I’m playing for something bigger than just basketball. It’s for the people who take the time to support me.”

In turn, Whitson has given Blue Raider fans countless memories. Multiple all-conference team selections, multiple conference championships, or being just one of just five Lady Raiders to reach the 1,000-career point mark and the 800-rebound mark are just a few of the things Whitson has accomplished in her career in blue and white.

The thing that sets her apart? The fact that she is always on the floor. Whether it’s a late-game situation when the Lady Raiders need a shot to come from behind, or they need tough defense to close out the opposition’s best post-player, it’s been very seldom that Coach Insell has had Whitson on the bench in her career. Just last season she averaged a Conference USA best 37.3 minutes per game.

The six-foot forward wouldn’t have it any other way because she knows that both she and her teammates succeed the most when she is out there supporting them, and they and the fans support her.

Whitson’s career at Middle Tennessee has been a mirror image of the player that she was in her early days growing up in Kingsport. She’s still the same, hard-working and loving family member and teammate who does the little things and works as hard as necessary to help her and her teammates accomplish the goals that they set out to meet. The foundation set in loyalty to one another, whether it’s Whitson and her community, family, coaches, or teammates, you know that day in and day out she’s going to pour everything she has back into the people that have always been there and helped her reach the heights she has today.

"It's been an honor and a privilege to give back," Whitson said. "I know that my coaches have always worked for me and I'm going to work for them to give back to them and my teammates. I never want to take for granted all the people who poured so much into that five-year-old little girl and helped me accomplish what I have today. That's why I'm so passionate. I just want to give back to help that one person that might need that little bit of motivation to accomplish their goals and help them get where they want to go."

'NEVER THOUGHT WE WERE GOING TO LOSE:' MTSU WAS 0-22 VS LADY VOLS BASKETBALL BEFORE BREAK-THROUGH WIN
Cecil Joyce – DNJ

There was a mixture of emotions for the Middle Tennessee State women's basketball team after Wednesday night's 73-62 win over Tennessee in Huntsville, Alabama.

The expectation with the Lady Raider program is to win games against Power Five opponents.

But the elation of defeating the Lady Vols for the first time was undeniable.

"It's big," said MTSU coach Rick Insell, who had lost his first eight games against Tennessee. The program was 0-22 all-time vs the Lady Vols. "Later on, probably, as I sit down and retire and look back, I'll be able to check that off."

"This (success) didn't just start last night," said Insell, whose squad finished 27-8 and reached the NCAA Tournament last season, being ranked in the AP Top 25 at one point. "We felt going into the year that we had a good bunch. We never thought we were going to lose against Tennessee."

MTSU improved to 7-3 with the win while the Lady Vols dropped to 4-5.

The last time the two teams had played was in the NCAA Tournament in 2021, with the Lady Vols defeating the Lady Raiders 87-62. Before that the two teams hadn't played since 2013.

The Lady Raiders, who have been to the NCAA Tournament 10 times during Insell's tenure, have been right in the mix with top Power Five teams in NET rankings over recent years. The Lady Raiders have won at least 20 games in 15 of Insell's 17 seasons. One of those two times they didn't was the COVID-19 shortened 2020-21 season (17-8).

Despite the accustomed success, the anticipation of the first regular-season game vs. Tennessee in a decade was prevalent since the game (beginning a four-game series) was announced during the summer.

"I hate to say this, but that's one of the reasons why we got beat by Belmont (the prior game). Tennessee was a catch game. We knew that. The kids, parents, marketing department, they were all pointing to this game against Tennessee in Huntsville.

"The hardest part for the coaching staff was getting these kids through those other games. Last night wasn't tough at all. They were all focused. The whole attitude and atmosphere was different, starting Monday."

The announced crowd for the game was more than 5,000, which Insell said was a majority MTSU fans.

"That fan base was unbelievable," Insell said. "It was probably 10-to-1, blue over orange. It was big, because we gave them a hint of what the (Conference USA) tournament will be like (also in Huntsville).

MTSU guard Jalynn Gregory, who has taken on the role as defensive stopper after the departure of Alexis Whittington, scored 22 points on 5-of-9 shooting from 3-point range. She also had five rebounds.

"That was her best game of the year," Insell said. "We've been waiting for Jalynn to really take off. She has a lot of pressure on her as our defensive stopper. She exerts a lot of energy playing defense, and she knows she can't get in foul trouble. But she's a young lady that can handle all of that."

"I just did the defense I'm told to do," said Gregory, on defending Tennessee standout Jewel Spear, who was held to three points. "They put me on whoever they want me to and I said, 'OK, I'll take the challenge and I'll make every catch hard.'"

MTSU's five starters all played at least 38 minutes, with Gregory and Courtney Whitson playing all 40.

MTSU will travel to Knoxville next season while the Lady Vols will come to Murfreesboro in 2025 before the series wraps up in Knoxville the following year.

Insell will now try get his squad re-focused on another rivalry game at Tennessee Tech Sunday (1 p.m. CT).

"We've got another catch game Sunday," Insell said. "We're their biggest rival. I told our players, 'Look, those guys are going to play just as hard as you did against Tennessee.'"

WHITSON CONTINUES TO REWRITE MTSU RECORD BOOK IN FIFTH YEAR
Tanner Cook – Time News

Courtney Whitson still has a hard time believing everything she's accomplished in basketball.

She rewrote the record books at Dobyns-Bennett, and she's been putting on a repeat act for Middle Tennessee State as a fifth-year graduate student.

In last Saturday's Conference USA win over Sam Houston, Whitson broke the program record for career 3-pointers, making her 260th to surpass Kortni Jones.

Whitson knew she was close going into the game.

"Our coaches had kind of hinted at it back before Christmas and, to be honest, I hate that,” Whitson said, jokingly. “I do not play the game for that. I’m so mental with my shot with repetition and if I feel good, I’m making shots. I didn’t want it to get in my head, but I swear it did a little bit. Once I finally got it, it was a breath of fresh air.”

On her fourth and final shot from distance in the 87-55 win over the Bearcats, Whitson let it fly and once the ball went through the hoop, all the pressure was off. The Kingsport native could simply play.

Kind of funny when you consider Whitson was, at first, a post player and didn’t develop a 3-point shot until she was a senior in high school. Pretty good call by D-B coach Bill Francis to switch Whitson to the wing and allow her to shoot it more.

“I really didn’t start shooting 3s until these college coaches and Francis told me that I had to switch positions and start shooting it,” Whitson said. “Credit to Francis because we would go to TNT (Sportsplex in Kingsport) and do all these shooting drills to try to get me to develop a 3-point shot. Now that’s my bread and butter in college and it’s still hard to believe.”

The 3-point mark wasn’t the first time Whitson has put her name in the MTSU record books this season, and she isn’t done yet.

Earlier this season, she broke the record for career starts and continues adding to that one every time she steps onto the floor. Entering Thursday night’s game against UTEP, Whitson had played in all 137 games since her freshman season.

She’s also approaching the program record for minutes played, lacking 125. That one should be broken in the coming weeks.

For those who know her, it shouldn’t be surprising that she also has the Dobyns-Bennett record for career starts after playing all 139 games in her four years.

“It’s an honor and it’s kind of hard to believe,” Whitson said. “Durability is part of me striving to be a leader and enhancing my work ethic. Credit to our coaches and trainers here because they keep us in shape.”

To put that in perspective, Whitson has started in every varsity game she’s ever played in for nine consecutive years. That’s Cal Ripken-esque durability.

“My parents ask me if I count the games, but I really can’t because I’ve played so many,” she said.

Whitson’s storied career hit a full-circle moment earlier this year when MTSU met Memphis in a nonconference game and in a tournament in the Bahamas.

Former Science Hill standout Alasia Smith, a senior, plays a key post role for the Tigers, and Whitson has been familiar with her game for many years.

“It’s kind of funny because my mom actually played her mom in high school, too,” Whitson said. “That really was a full-circle moment being that we’re from Science Hill and D-B and grew up playing against each other in all these tournaments. In the scouting reports, my coaches said, ‘Courtney, you know everything about her. Do you want to tell us anything about her from when you played in high school?’ It was all smiles after the game.”

Whitson was also part of a historic 73-62 win over Tennessee in Huntsville, Alabama, earlier this year. It marked a program first against the storied Lady Vols program.

“That was surreal and I still can’t wrap my head around it,” she said. “Growing up as a little girl in Tennessee, I don’t care who you are, you pull for the Lady Vols. I grew up going to every single one of Pat Summitt’s camps and wanting to be a Lady Vol. (MTSU) is where I was meant to be, so if I’m not going to play for (Tennessee), I’m going to beat them.”

The Lady Raiders (12-4, 2-0 Conference USA) made the NCAA Tournament last season after winning the league tournament. They finished 28-8 after falling to Colorado in their NCAA opener.

“It is there, 100%,” Whitson said when asked if MTSU has a target on its back this season. “Our schedule this year is brutal. With non-conference games and road games, this is the toughest one we’ve had since I’ve been here. I try to emphasize the message to the younger girls coming into our program that we’re going to get everyone’s best shot.”

The program has benefited from stability. In the constantly changing world of college athletics with the transfer portal and the NIL, MTSU has been a bit of an outlier with so many players, like Whitson, having been in the program for a number of years.

“Kudos to our coaches because the game really is so different,” Whitson said. “(MTSU coach Rick Insell) talks all the time about how the transfer portal is changing the game. One of the great things, even when we recruit kids out of the transfer portal, we’re able to tell them that we have a culture here and it’s not changing. We’ve been able to have stability in our locker room because people know what they’re getting and we’re transparent. There’s no hiding from it.”

Though nearing the end of her collegiate career, Whitson still has a hard time absorbing all she’s accomplished.

“Honestly, it really doesn’t set in unless I talk to people that have been so supportive along the way,” she said. “It’s a surreal feeling. I’m a woman of my faith and all these records and opportunities are not just because of my talent. I have this platform and I am truly blessed to have done all that I have.”

COLUMN: “I’VE GOT AN ADMINISTRATION THAT BELIEVES IN WOMEN’S SPORTS”
Sam Doughton – MT Athletics

Savannah Wheeler caught her voice just before the tear fell at the press conference table on Thursday night. Just after becoming the 10th player ever to score 2,000 career points in Conference USA history, the fifth-year guard felt the emotions of a career well played ending soon come up earlier than expected.

"It definitely means a lot to me," Wheeler said of the milestone. "Basketball has been a big part of who I am starting at a young age. I'm just very fortunate to be around great people and great coaches."

Perhaps that made the moment on Saturday a bit easier, when she became Conference USA's all-time leader in made free throws with her 13th make of the game at the charity stripe, the 579th make of her career and her head coach, Rick Insell, called timeout to give Wheeler a well-earned ovation from the Murphy Center crowd and love from her teammates on the bench.

"I've always had a knack for going to the free throw line," Wheeler said with a smile after the dominant win over New Mexico State. "Ever since I was in high school. When you're small, all you've got to do is just drive, drive, drive."

It's been that kind of start to conference play for the Lady Raiders, who are 4-0 in the new year and have had two more players hit career marks beyond Wheeler's accolades in the past week, including Courtney Whitson claiming the program record for made three-pointers and Jalynn Gregory passing 1,000 career points, the 34th Lady Raider to hit that mark in her career. The players' success and the team's success had Insell in a reflective mood after an 85-48 thrashing of the Aggies.

"We knew from the very beginning, when we saw her play her first game at Marshall, she was a player," Insell said of Wheeler. "She wasn't a freshman, you might as well of been guarding a junior or senior because she didn't back off."

With Gregory, Insell went into the story of how many people scolded him for recruiting the sharpshooter guard out of Macon County, saying she played for too small a school, that Gregory was too small, not fast enough, not skilled enough to play at the level Insell needed her too. And like he'd done many times before, after the many big games Gregory has played for the Lady Raiders, the head coach took the well-earned victory lap.

"That effort you saw there today you'll see every single day in practice," Insell said of Gregory. "You don't get many of them, I'm telling you. She's one that we got that every day that comes in and works her back end off on defense. I think sometimes, she gives us so much defensively that it takes a little bit away from her offense. Because she's a great, great offensive player, as everybody knows."

These milestone games can come and go for the Lady Raiders at times. There's usually a player nearing 1,000 points almost every year (as Anastasiia Boldyreva will likely do next season, though perhaps near the end of this one!), while another is skyrocketing up the program leaderboard (with Gregory on pace to pass Whitson in career three-pointers made in her senior year).

Just how often those milestones are passed, plus the grind of the season, can make it hard for Rick Insell to stop and take stock of the greatness of what he and the rest of us witness on the court night in and night out from the Middle Tennessee women's basketball program.

"I didn't think a whole lot about it when I was coaching Alysha

Clark and Ebony Rowe, I was just thankful I had them," Insell acknowledged. "Then when they got gone, I got to thinking I was very fortunate to be able to watch them play every night."

"Same thing with Savannah Wheeler, same thing with Courtney Whitson, same thing with Jalynn, Ta'Mia (Scott), you just come right down the line. Nastia now and Iulia (Grabovskaia) is getting better every time out."

Insell credits the players, their families and their high school programs for that continued success, often calling the group "winners" from the start as a catch all for the practice habits and mentality that's helped so many Lady Raiders under his coaching get to those lofty numbers and scratch their names into future record books.

But what helps get those winners to Murfreesboro in the first place? Insell credits the Lady Raider fan base, which he said was a big selling point for Wheeler's recruitment from Marshall in particular, and also the support he gets from the MTSU administration.

"I think it goes for granted with our fan base at times and in this community," Insell said. "But I've got an administration that believes in women's sports. Not only us, but softball, volleyball, right on down the line. A lot of schools ain't got that, I've got that."

"When we bring a recruit in, and we've got some here today, and they see our community, they meet our administration, why wouldn't you want to come to Middle Tennessee?"

It was a nice reminder to myself of why I love working for MTSU, because Insell is right. It's an athletic department that gives resources for its women's sports teams to succeed. It's not lip service or just for Title IX compliance like it unfortunately can be at so many institutions. It's a culture here, one that's been sustained by not just the current generation of MTSU coaches and administrators, but the countless ones that came before.

And it's one that continues to grow through the thousands of Lady Raider fans that come to the Glass House or Alumni Memorial Gymnasium or the Blue Raider Softball Field or Dean A. Hayes Track and Soccer Stadium every year, from the thousands showed up this week, despite the ice that kept so many of us in the mid-state in our homes.

And it's especially a culture that's built on the work of the generations of "winners" that have worn the Lady Raider blue, played on that Murphy Center court, that carry that tradition year in and year out, even when knocking each other out of the record book. Hopefully, we'll have many more milestones to mark off in the weeks, months and years to come.

HOW TA'MIA SCOTT HAS TAKEN ADVANTAGE OF STARTING ROLE FOR MTSU WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

Cecil Joyce - DNJ

The Middle Tennessee State women's basketball lineup hasn't been an easy one to crack over the past few years.

Sophomore guard Ta'Mia Scott can attest to that.

Playing behind a deep and veteran lineup, Scott averaged just eight minutes a game in the 25 she played as a freshman. A star at every level she's played, Scott wasn't used to spending a majority of games watching from the bench.

"It was hard, honestly," said Scott, following MTSU's 85-48 win over visiting New Mexico State on Saturday. "I've never (gone) through that in basketball. It was something I didn't know how to deal with. But my teammates and everyone around me kept me level headed and I kept working, because I knew my time would come."

Scott, a prized recruit coming out of Clarksville Northwest, has shown MTSU fans why coach Rick Insell was so high on her during a breakout sophomore season in 2023-24. She's averaging 11.8 points and 3.3 rebounds a game while providing 40 steals and shooting 41% from 3-point range for the Blue Raiders (14-4, 4-0 Conference USA).

Scott, a prized recruit coming out of Clarksville Northwest, has shown MTSU fans why coach Rick Insell was so high on her during a breakout sophomore season in 2023-24. She's averaging 11.8 points and 3.3 rebounds a game while providing 40 steals and shooting 41% from 3-point range for the Blue Raiders (14-4, 4-0 Conference USA).

She hasn't disappointed in that role, putting her name among team leaders in most offensive categories, despite the team returning four starters.

"She's mixed in really well," said junior guard Jalynn Gregory, who reached the 1,000-point mark for her career in Saturday's win. "Last year I knew Ta'Mia had it in her. It was just a matter of getting her out there and getting it out of her. This year she's really stepped up. She stepped into a role that's not easy to step into. She came right in like she's been here the whole time."

Scott came up huge for MTSU during its CUSA opener, scoring 20 points with 14 rebounds and two steals while playing every minute in a 64-61 overtime win over Louisiana Tech.

"You can't guard Ta'Mia Scott, unless she wants you to guard her," Insell said. "She's improved her ball handling, she's improved her 3-point shooting and she's rebounding the heck out of the ball."

"My big thing, being a starter, was bring a spark to my team," said Scott, who averaged 23.5 points, 8.9 rebounds and 3.2 blocks her senior season at Northwest. "I had to take up a lot of slack from Alexis. She was a hard-nosed player and did a lot of dirty work. I'm trying to come in and be that player. I have high expectations for myself. I'm not satisfied, but I'm going to get there."

ALL JALYNN GREGORY DOES IS WIN. HOW SHE'S CONTRIBUTED TO THE LADY RAIDERS FROM DAY ONE.

Calvin White – MTSU Sidelines

If anyone asks MTSU women's basketball head coach Rick Insell about Jalynn Gregory, no matter what the question is, he always interrupts mid-sentence with the same phrase: "She's a winner."

But that doesn't mean stuffing the stat sheet every night. Being a winner means doing whatever it takes to help the team win, even if it means making sacrifices. When people think of Gregory's time in Murfreesboro, at the front of their minds are the games where she rained countless 3-pointers that left the entire gym in awe.

When Insell was recruiting Gregory out of high school, he was criticized. Nearly three years later, Gregory is a 1,000-point scorer and is on pace to break the MTSU women's basketball program record for made 3-pointers during one of the most dominant stretches in the history of Lady Raider basketball.

Gregory was a 2,000-point scorer, two-time Region MVP, state champion and State Tournament MVP at Macon County High School in Lafayette, TN.

"When I was recruiting Jalynn Gregory, there were people criticizing me for it," Insell said after Gregory scored her 1,000th career point in a win over New Mexico State. "I think I know what I'm doing. I don't know how to deliver the mail or fix a motor on a car, but we've won a lot of games and I thought Jalynn Gregory could play."

Freshmen at most schools are typically thought of as players who come in and wait their turn for a year or two behind older, more experienced players. But not all freshmen are created equally. Gregory starting all 85 games of her college career means that she had her coaches' trust from the start and has maintained that trust for nearly three years.

"There was a day in practice when she first got here where she was just going through the motions and just trying to fit in with everybody else," MTSU associate head coach Matt Insell said. "We kind of had a come-to-Jesus type discussion in the middle of practice and said, 'Look, if you're just going to try to fit in, you probably need to go somewhere else because we need someone who can play and play right now.'"

Matt Insell knew that one of three things would happen the next day. Gregory was going to quit, her dad was going to call him or she was going to show up the next day and drop jaws.

Gregory took that meeting to heart.

"It was just one of those things where I took it upon myself to do, once again, what the team needed me to do," Gregory said. "We needed somebody and I just stepped up into that role and I knew, at that point, where I was really going to make an impact was being able to guard people. So I just focused on my defense first and let the offense come to me."

Gregory's defining moment of her freshman season came when she stepped to the line and knocked down two free throws to tie the game with seven seconds remaining against Toledo in the WNIT quarterfinals. MTSU went on to win 73-71 and advance to the WNIT semifinals before falling to Seton Hall 74-73.

Moments like that have defined Gregory's MTSU career. The free-throw line can be a lonely place for players sometimes. But in that moment, there was never a doubt about what was going to happen.

"There was no doubt who we were going to," Matt Insell said. "That's just her mentality. At the end, with the game right where it was, we knew if we got her the ball, she was either going to score or get fouled. I remember thinking 'Should I watch, should I not watch?' and this little freshman that weighs maybe 100 pounds, in front of 10,000 people... there was never a doubt."

Every game, Gregory looks her opponent in the eye and says, "I am going to beat you." That attitude has followed her since she was in high school. Gregory was named Class AA Region MVP in 2021, but Reagan Hurst of Upperman High School, who played in the same region as Gregory, was named Miss Basketball instead of Gregory.

Hurst plays at Tennessee Tech. When MTSU traveled to Cookeville in December to play the Golden Eagles, Matt Insell made sure to point out to Gregory in film sessions that Hurst won Miss Basketball instead of her.

"It's just another game," Gregory said. "There was a little bit of me that was motivated because I didn't get Miss Basketball, but it also turned out good for me because I'd much rather win a State Tournament than get Miss Basketball."

Entering the 2023 Conference USA Tournament, MTSU was 25-4 and heavy favorites to win the conference championship and make the NCAA Tournament.

Gregory averaged 17.7 points across three games and had her best performance in the championship game where she scored 24 points on 5-of-5 shooting from 3-point range. When Gregory was deciding where to go to college, Rick Insell told her that if she wanted to go to NCAA Tournaments, she would come to MTSU.

"It's not easy," Gregory said. "They hold us to a higher standard. It makes it more difficult which is why we get to where we get to."

Gregory is known for having her best games on the biggest stages, including a 22-point performance in a 73-62 win over Tennessee. The win was MTSU's first in program history over the Lady Vols.

Courtney Whitson has seen Gregory improve first-hand over their last three seasons as teammates, but her first impression of Gregory was when they were in high school.

Whitson recalls watching Gregory's Macon County team play district rival Upperman in the 2018 State Championship Game.

"Obviously she (Gregory) was talented," Whitson said on what stood out to her about Gregory. "Once you make it to the State Tournament everybody is going to be talented or have talented players because that's what it takes to get there. She was not scared. She was not backing down. Every basket that was needed, timely, we see that now, she was getting it for them."

A lot goes into being a winner. Success does not come easy in sports. The attention to detail needed to play for Rick Insell can be maddening. If Gregory hoped that the "come-to-Jesus" meetings would stop after her freshman year, she was wrong. Ironically, winning is one heck of a motivator.

"That's not the way coach (Insell) rolls, so we all still get our fair share of butt-chewings every single day," Whitson said. "But we know his intentions behind that because there are expectations. As a freshman, you're not mature enough to be able to say 'He wants to bring the best out of me. That's why he's in my face spitting at me.' I think she's grown a lot mentally to be able to handle our coaches' hard coaching and take her game to a new level."

Gregory does not care about records or statistics, but she will end her MTSU career by being a major contributor on a team that made the WNIT Semifinals and multiple NCAA Tournaments. She will have justified what it means to be a winner in every sense of the word.

Coming from a small town with a population of less than 6,000 people, not many from Gregory's background have enjoyed the success that she has. She will tell you that accolades are not important to her, but Jalynn Gregory has lived up to every expectation that has ever been put on her at MTSU.

"She's a winner."

MTSU WOMEN'S BASKETBALL STAR SAVANNAH WHEELER LEAVING AN EPIC LEGACY IN CONFERENCE USA

Cecil Joyce – DNJ

Middle Tennessee State women's basketball star Savannah Wheeler has been a self-proclaimed gym rat her entire life.

She was also a big fan of ice cream. Those two worlds collided when she was in second grade.

"She had an older sister (Taylor) that played basketball and she would get to go to camps with them (at Kentucky's Transylvania University)," said Savannah's father, David Wheeler. "She would stay at the ice cream machine all day. When the ice cream machine broke, she told the head coach, 'We don't need to go back to (Transylvania) no more.'"

"It broke my heart," said Savannah Wheeler, laughing at the thought that ice cream could have ever superseded basketball in her life.

Basketball has dominated Savannah's life ever since. That is evidenced by the legacy she's leaving behind in Conference USA.

The 5-foot-6 point guard moved into sixth place on the conference's all-time scoring list Saturday (2,088 points following a 15-point performance in an 80-48 win over Western Kentucky). At her current scoring pace, she will finish in the top three behind Houston's Chandi Jones (2,692 points; 2000-04) and Memphis' Tamika Whitmore (2,488; 1995-99).

She has already eclipsed the league's mark for free throws made in a career (591) and is among career leaders in percentage (over 86%).

"To be honest, when I started playing college basketball, I didn't really think about what record I would set or what goal I was making,” Savannah said. “I just wanted to get better and continue to grow as a player and person. I’ve been fortunate to be surrounded by a lot of great coaches and great teammates throughout my journey.”

A fifth-year player, Wheeler has been one of the smallest wherever she’s played. But thanks to her competitiveness and tenacity, she has always been one of the best on the floor as well.

She played on the high school varsity squad and was the first player off the bench when she was a seventh grader (and Taylor was a senior) at Catlettsburg, Kentucky’s Boyd County High School. She was Kentucky’s Miss Basketball as a senior in 2019 and finished her prep career with more than 3,600 points.

She committed to Marshall, a school just 20 minutes from her hometown, when she was a freshman in high school. She scored 1,294 points in three seasons with the Herd and led CUSA in scoring in 2021-22 at 20.3.

But she wanted something more than just being the best player on the floor. She hit the transfer portal following her junior season.

“(MTSU) was No. 1 on her list,” said Savannah’s mother, Tracy Wheeler. “When she went into the portal, it was 11:30. She didn’t even make it back to her car and (MTSU assistant coach Kim Brewton) had emailed or texted her.”

“It was nothing against Marshall. ... I just wanted something better from a team standpoint,” said Savannah Wheeler, who leads MTSU at 16.3 points and 4.7 assists per game.

The move has worked out as well as Wheeler and MTSU could have imagined. She should finish her career with more than 1,000 points with the Lady Raiders in two seasons. She helped lead MTSU to the NCAA Women’s Tournament last season and expectations are for the Lady Raiders (17-4) to return again this season.

“She’s becoming a professional right now,” said MTSU coach Rick Insell, hinting on a future that could include pro basketball. “She’s running our basketball team. What a superb athlete and superb young lady she is. I’m not surprised, because she’s a competitor.”

“It’s been surreal,” said David Wheeler, who played baseball with the Cincinnati Reds organization. “It really has been a great match. She came in and fit right in. Sometimes that doesn’t work out.”

Savannah still likes ice cream. But she likes winning even more. Reaching the field of 68 and making noise in the NCAA Tournament would be the ideal topper for her CUSA legacy.

“I just want to focus on the moment right now,” she said. “When I focus on right now, everything else will take care of itself. My goal is to continue to get better, grow as a player and as a team and make it to the NCAA Tournament and see where it goes from there.”

COLUMN: “IT’S NOT AS EASY AS IT LOOKS” Sam Doughton – MT Athletics

Courtney Whitson hears her classmates talk about the Lady Raiders. Like those who know the reputation of Middle Tennessee women’s basketball, there’s plenty of positive things to say about the 19-4, 9-0 in CUSA, Lady Raiders.

But there’s one sentiment her classmates share that frustrates the fifth-year forward.

“Some of our school mates are like, ‘Dang, y’all just blow people out. We’re not coming to the game,’” Whitson said.

Those who attended MTSU’s 81-55 drubbing of Liberty on Thursday, or the Lady Raiders’ 73-54 dismantling of FIU on Saturday in the Murphy Center, or watched online at ESPN+ or listened to the Old Pro Dick Palmer and Kyle Turnham on the Blue Raider Radio Network this week will understand that not every blowout is made equal. Facing off against the other two of the top three teams in Conference USA, Liberty and FIU both showed what made each of them dangerous through the first half of league play.

For the Lady Flames, it was a front court that had size only MTSU could match, coupled with smart perimeter players that could knock down shots and funnel drivers towards the rim protection near the basket. For the Panthers, it was an athletic backcourt that could drive and shoot on offense, coupled with offensively gifted forwards that have helped FIU average over 70 points a game.

“This is what Division I basketball is about,” head coach Rick Insell said after the Liberty game on Thursday. “Playing games like the ones we played tonight.”

It was not a surprise then that Liberty only trailed by seven at half-time, while FIU managed to keep the deficit to just five points. Both teams led for extended periods of time in the first half of each contest. It was a pair of good basketball teams challenging the Lady Raiders.

“We’re not going to beat people by 30 or 20 in the first minute,” Whitson said, relaying the message Associate Head Coach Matt Insell has emphasized in recent weeks. “It’s their biggest game. It’s our next game, but it’s their biggest game... If we’re going to get punched in the mouth, we’ve got to be able to sustain it so that when we look up in the fourth quarter, we’re up 20.”

The second half of each game showed what’s made MTSU great, instead of good, and what’s made them the runaway favorite in Conference USA this season, where the Lady Raiders lead the conference in both points per game and in points allowed per game over halfway through conference play.

The Lady Raiders’ conditioning wore out the other team’s starters, who were not accustomed to playing all 40 minutes like nearly all of MTSU’s starting five does almost every night, almost assuredly playing a role in MTSU’s prolonged third quarter runs that gave them space in both game’s offensively, a 15-2 run against the Lady Flames and a 11-0 run against the Panthers.

The defensive excellence MTSU possesses, having not one but two shutdown wing defenders (Jalynn Gregory and Ta’Mia Scott) along with the best rim protector in the league (Anastasiia Boldyreva) almost causes one to miss the benefits the team gains from having two fifth-year players (Savannah Wheeler and Whitson) that can read the game as fast as anyone in the country, rarely being in the wrong spot for help or out of position on the swing cross court. MTSU held both opponents to making just a third or fewer shots in the second half both nights.

It's perhaps understandable to look at just the final score and think MTSU ran away with another game in the Murphy Center, as they've done so many times under Rick Insell and with Courtney Whitson on the court. Even those who watched will likely remember the feeling of dominance that came at the end rather than the physical, back-and-forth basketball that defined the first half of each game.

But Whitson's broader point to the student body? The Lady Raiders need their help too. Because there's so much work going on to make moments like this weekend possible.

"There's a lot of work that goes into blowing people out," Whitson said. "It's not as easy as it looks."

It takes Anastasiia Boldyreva, studying more film than any other player on the roster heading into her matchup against Liberty's fellow 6-foot-6 center Bella Smuda, that helped her drop 20 points on the only player in the league even close to Boldyreva's block numbers this season. It's Ta'Mia Scott and Jalynn Gregory combining to hold FIU forward Mya Kone to just 3-for-9 from the field, despite each wing giving up plenty of height to the 6-foot-2 Kone.

It's Savannah Wheeler putting in hours in the gym, getting up shots so there's not a spot on the court she can't score from at any given moment, helping lead her to 31 points on Saturday afternoon. It's little plays, like Courtney Whitson tipping out the ball for her 1,001st career rebound with just enough time on the clock to flip it to the corner for Wheeler, who drilled it just before the buzzer through the foul.

It's players like Sifa Ineza, Iullia Grabovskaia and Jada Grannum, who each might have the trickiest role of any player on the team, needing to stay constantly ready to provide quality minutes, whether they're needed for two minutes, four minutes or 14 minutes on a given night off the bench. The preparation and mental toughness needed to do that specific role well? It can't be understated.

And of course, as Whitson pointed out on Thursday, it's all the little things we don't know about behind the scenes, all the day-to-day challenges that come outside of the world of sports, that can come with being a college student, a daughter, a sister. Through it all, the Lady Raiders have found a way to keep winning. And to keep blowing teams out. Though Whitson said that's never been the goal.

"People think that we're trying to run the score up, but that's not the case," Whitson said. "We're playing for something much bigger than what you see."

COLUMN: "WE'VE BEEN VERY BLESSED BY THE GOOD LORD, WITH GOOD PLAYERS AND GOOD FAMILIES."
Sam Doughton - MT Athletics

When asked about his two graduating seniors, Rick Insell didn't first go to one of Courtney Whitson's more than 1,000 rebounds or any amount of Savannah Wheeler's more than 2,000 points. He didn't bring up Wheeler's deadly floater or Whitson's record setting three-pointers or even the pageantry of Senior Day itself.

Instead, the veteran head coach was brought back to when he recruited his two seniors, Whitson when she was just a prep player from Dobyns-Bennett High School, trying to decide whether she wanted to play for Middle Tennessee or Missouri, Wheeler when she first entered the transfer portal after three standout years at Marshall, with his assistants Kim Brewton and Matt Insell immediately contacting Savannah and her dad, respectively, within minutes of Wheeler's name popping up.

"All these other schools, the Louisvilles and the Kentuckys, I promise you they wish they had gotten in on it quicker," the elder Insell said of Wheeler.

It's a testament to what's made Insell successful that he remembers so many details from each recruitment. How Whitson ran into his eldest son at the airport, Whitson's travel coach, while his son was on his way to Virginia Beach, something the forward shared she took as an omen to be a Lady Raider. Which coach contacted which member of Wheeler's family to get them on campus within days of entering the portal, attending a WNIT game MTSU hosted before the book was even closed on the 2021-22 season.

Whitson and Wheeler are one of the best Lady Raider groups to be honored on the same senior night, with both having rewritten the MTSU and Conference USA record books during their careers.

But it's a reflection on both the players and the Lady Raider program that all anyone wanted to talk about, from their coaches to their family videos on the Murphy Center videoboards to the media assembled on Saturday after senior night was not the records broken, not the 93-62 rout of Sam Houston, not even really the back-to-back regular season Conference USA titles the team celebrated, but rather who Courtney Whitson and Savannah Wheeler are as people.

"We've been very blessed by the good Lord, with good players and good families," Insell said.

It was ironic, Savannah Wheeler noted, that the two Lady Raider senior days she was a part of both ended the same way: Rick Insell inviting every Lady Raider fan in attendance onto the court to celebrate the Conference USA regular season championship, trophy in hand from the CUSA office.

That fact is something Wheeler credits to her teammates.

"I give all the credit to all the girls I play with," Wheeler said. "Every day we go at it in practice, we compete, we get better. I owe it to them and I wouldn't want to be anywhere else."

That humility is what's made Wheeler such a good fit in Murfreesboro, content to be a facilitator and active defensive guard on nights where her shot might not be falling just as much as she enjoys being a lethal offensive weapon on nights, like most nights, where she's making a lot more than she misses, particularly at the free throw line.

Wheeler still scored 15 points on her senior day, but that was only good for fourth place in scoring for the Lady Raiders, who had players that were 8-for-12 (Ta'Mia Scott), 7-for-11 (Jalynn Gregory) and 7-for-9 (Anastasiia Boldyreva) from the field on Saturday. But on a day where Wheeler was just 4-for-12 from the floor, she dished out eight assists and grabbed three steals.

What Ta'Mia Scott will remember most about Wheeler is her toughness. As an undersized point guard, many guards will try to take advantage with physical play. Her own propensity to draw fouls in the paint might mean that some of the perimeter can get overlooked on occasion. And it's never an easy task being the player in charge of Rick Insell's plays, which require perfect timing and execution. Through all that pressure, Scott says, Wheeler is able to keep her cool.

"(Savannah's) really taught me a lot, just how to be level-headed," Scott said. "I look at her and I see how she gets through things on the court. It kind of keeps me going. Like, if Sav got through that, I can get through that too."

It's no secret to any Lady Raider fan how hard the coaching staff coaches their players. As Courtney Whitson puts it: "Playing in this program, you're going to get your butt chewed, no matter who you are."

That doesn't make learning the lesson that it isn't personal any easier, however. But it was something Whitson figured out early in her career, something that kept her on the court and made her a tremendous mentor to the players that played with her during her time in the Blue and White. She can recall the moment it all clicked for her, shortly after she hit a new low, breaking down in the team showers after a particularly tough, 78-60 loss at LA Tech her freshman season.

"You have those moments, you're going to look back one day and say, 'They see potential in you, it's not because they're trying to beat you down,'" Whitson said. "They're trying to get the best out of you, day in and day out."

It's a lesson she's taught to many Lady Raiders who've walked up the Murphy Center tunnel, to bear down through the yelling, listen to the message and take it to heart. And that's only come easier with each year she's been here.

"The older I get, the more I was here, the more I was able to realize 'Hey, sometimes it's hard,'" Whitson said. "But I'm able to realize they want what's best for me."

That natural leadership is what Scott has picked up both on and off the court from Whitson, something that will continue to pay dividends long after Whitson is gone from MTSU.

"In high school, I kind of had to pick up that role, I never had somebody to learn from," Scott said of being a leader. "But in college, (Courtney) did such a good job being a great example of a relentless leader, regardless of what she was going through on or off the court."

It was heartening to see how many members of both Wheeler's and Whitson's families were able to make it to the Glass House on Saturday and how many more were able to send along a message to be played to them after the game. Many of them have made many of the pair's games already, of course, but it was a distinct honor for Lady Raider fans to be able to thank them, as well as their daughters, for sharing themselves with us for their college careers.

And the best news? There's still plenty of Lady Raider basketball in Savannah Wheeler and Courtney Whitson's future, with two regular season games, the CUSA Tournament and the postseason after that.

And with the CUSA Tournament in Huntsville, Alabama? They'll be plenty of chances for Lady Raider fans to cheer on both program leaders, program legends, in the weeks to come.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL BUBBLE WATCH: WHAT MAKES MIDDLE TENNESSEE A WORTHY MID-MAJOR Mark Schindler – The Athletic

You absolutely need to have the Raiders on your radar before March Madness. They need to take care of business in the Conference USA tournament, but with one game remaining in regular-season play and a 15-0 conference record, they're en route to dancing.

Not only is Middle Tennessee State talented, but it brings unique matchup difficulties into the tournament. MTSU is not quite as deep as it was last year, relying primarily on the production of its starting five, but it comes differently. The Raiders largely play four-out one-in concepts, with four perimeter players who can all dribble, pass and shoot.

Ta'Mia Scott has been one of the most improved mid-major players as she became a full time starter. At 6-foot-2 and as a 40 percent 3-point shooter, she brings a dynamic the Raiders didn't have last season. It's shown on the defensive end with her added versatility.

Savannah Wheeler just keeps getting better and is a nightmare to contain off the dribble as the head of the snake for Rick Insell's offense. Jalynn Gregory and Courtney Whitson combine to shoot 14.5 3s per game, contributing highly to the ethos and spacing of the offense.

You've heard of plenty of space and pace teams that have made a splash in March Madness, so what sets this group apart?

Two things: The Raiders are 354th in the country in pace out of 360 Division I teams. Anastasiia Boldyreva is the other factor.

Boldyreva was a key starter last season, and she's blossomed into a star this season, averaging 14.6 points, 8.3 rebounds and 3 blocks per game while shooting nearly 60 percent. At 6-6, Boldyreva is an imposing rim protector, providing an extra margin of error for her perimeter defenders. She's a solid screener, presents herself incredibly well with deep seals and has deft footwork in the post, while also stepping out and shooting.

When opponents can't force her out of the paint on defense or speed up the Raiders on offense, they're in for a tough 40 minutes.

COLUMN: “THERE’S NOT ANY OF THEM I’M NOT PROUD OF RIGHT NOW”

Sam Doughton – MT Athletics

Your 2023-24 Lady Raiders, 2007-08 UTEP, 2010-11 Houston and 2018-19 Rice: What do those four teams have in common?

Your 2023-24 Lady Raiders and the 2023-24 squads for UConn, Fairfield, South Carolina, Gonzaga, FGCU, Jackson State and South Dakota State: What do these eight teams have in common?

The answer for both: conference play perfection. All eleven of those teams ran through their conference’s gauntlet in a given season and came out the other side without a loss. In the 2023-24 Lady Raiders’ case, that was a 16-0 mark that was clinched with another dominant win on Saturday, dispatching Louisiana Tech 79-58 before it was even noon in Murfreesboro.

“There’s not any of them I’m not proud of right now,” head coach Rick Insell said of his players. “To go through a season undefeated, it’s a grind, a grind, a grind.”

The grind part of the equation most people understand. I wrote about it myself just under a month ago in this very column. Every college athlete puts in hours upon hours each week of work to play at their very best, whether that’s early-morning lifts, watching film between classes, working through the scout in practice, getting treatment to recover, to say nothing of the travel schedules these teams in modern-day, Division I athletic conferences. None of that, for any team, is easy.

But the intensity required to stay on that grind, at the level of focus needed to be successful, for 16 games in a conference season, doesn’t happen very often. And while yes, the teams that have that sort of focus also need a certain level of talent to achieve such success, the work put in is often the far more important part of how that record comes to be.

It’s why Insell’s pride in his team could barely be contained on Saturday, with the acknowledgment that there’s still work to be done next week in Huntsville, Ala. at the CUSA Tournament, where MTSU will have to beat three teams for the third time this season to claim the CUSA autobid into the NCAA Tournament.

“Sometimes I had to beat people four times,” Insell said of his high school coaching career and the idea of it being difficult to knock off a team three times in a row. “I’ve never bought into that. A lot of coaches do buy into it. I think that’s something you put into your players’ heads. As far as the way we do things, it’s the next game.”

It’d be easy to finish the conversation there, highlighting just how hard the Lady Raiders worked this season and hoping to continue that success in the Rocket City. Particularly given the way MTSU dominated Conference USA this season, winning their conference games by an average of nearly 24 points a night, only playing one conference game that had a final score margin in single digits and snapping up a CUSA record 10 Conference USA Player of the Week awards (five for Savannah Wheeler, two each for Jalynn Gregory and Anastasiia Bolydrevva and one for Ta’Mia Scott).

But contrary to what might be popular opinion, dominant teams have plenty of adversity to get through in every season. The Lady Raiders were no different.

Sure, MTSU returned four of their five starters from their CUSA title team a year ago. But the one they didn’t, Alexis Whittington, was a five-year starter who was one of the best defensive players on the perimeter in the league. Jalynn Gregory and Ta’Mia Scott both needed to develop to continue the defensive style that’s made MTSU so successful under Insell.

Yes, MTSU had preseason player of the year (and likely 2023-24 Player of the Year) Savannah Wheeler at point guard. But the Lady Raiders went through all of 2023-24 with no true point guard backup after losing Courtney Blakely to the transfer portal and having Top 100 recruit, Jada Harrison, miss her freshman season due to injury. Gregory and Sifa Ineza have been able to put in some minutes at PG when Wheeler has been in foul trouble, but the lion’s share of minutes at the most important position in Insell’s offense have all fallen on Wheeler’s shoulders.

And, oh yeah, most dominant teams also don’t have to replace the conference Sixth-Player of the Year from last year’s team that was also a WNBA draft pick, like the Lady Raiders have had to do following Kseniya Malaskha’s graduation. The exponential growth of Anastasiia Boldyreva, particularly defensively, and the addition and growth of Iullia Grabovskaia off the bench have proven to keep production high for the 5-spot in the Lady Raider lineup.

None of those challenges that came up for MTSU this season would’ve been solved without two things: the hard work of the players asked to continue the Lady Raider legacy to grow as basketball players and the coaching of Rick Insell and his staff to develop players, new and returning, to have an even better year than the one they had before.

Let’s go back to those three teams at the top: 2007-08 UTEP, 2010-11 Houston and 2018-19 Rice. You might’ve figured out they were the previous CUSA undefeated WBB teams. What you might not have known is all three of their head coaches (Keitha Adams, Todd Buchanan and Tina Langley) all won CUSA Coach of the Year for leading their teams to such an accomplishment. Two of them, ironically, are still in the league years later, with Adams coming back to UTEP after a stint at Wichita State and Buchanan now on Greg Collins’ staff at WKU.

I don’t have a vote for Coach of the Year. That award is only voted on by the nine CUSA coaches. And while Insell does not care, I think it’d be unfortunate if those coaches didn’t come together to recognize the work he and his staff have put in this year.

The Lady Raiders’ players work this season? That’s undeniable. The stats prove it and I suspect the awards come Monday, when CUSA announces the All-Conference honorees, will show it. But those same stats show the work of Rick Insell and his staff (Matt Insell, Kim Brewton, Nina Davis, Tom Hodges and Shaun McKinney) just as much as it does their players.

And with the next closest team in the CUSA standings five games back of the undefeated Lady Raiders, it’d be shame if those nine coaches collectively don’t recognize that fact on Monday.

MTSU WOMEN'S BASKETBALL'S SAVANNAH WHEELER NAMED CONFERENCE USA PLAYER OF THE YEAR

MTSU women's basketball standout Savannah Wheeler was named Conference USA Player of the Year on Monday, and Anastasiia Boldyreva was named the league's Defensive Player of the Year.

Wheeler, a Kentucky native, is the third MTSU player to be named CUSA player of the year. The senior guard, also named all-conference, leads the league in scoring (17.5 ppg), assists (150), assist/turnover ratio (2.1), and minutes (37.8).

Already the CUSA all-time free-throw record holder, Wheeler is also third on the CUSA all-time scoring list with 2,170 points, behind Houston's Chandi Jones (2,692 points, 2000-04) and Memphis' Tamika Whitmore (2,488, 1995-99). The recent graduate is a five-time CUSA player of the week.

Boldyreva, a junior center from Moscow, has had a breakout season. She leads the league and ranks fourth in the nation with 88 blocks, a single-season school record. She is averaging 14.7 points and 8.5 rebounds.

She also earned all-conference and all-defensive team honors. She has played a crucial part in the team's defense, ranked 10th in the nation; MTSU is holding opponents to just 51.8 points per game and scoring 75.1.

Courtney Whitson, Jalynn Gregory and Ta'Mia Scott earned second-team all-conference honors.

Whitson, a graduate from Kingsport, who leads the program in all-time 3-pointers and minutes played, is averaging 9.4 points and 6.5 rebounds.

Gregory, a junior from Lafayette, is averaging 12.4 points a game and has made 82 3-pointers.

Scott, a sophomore from Clarksville, has started all 30 games and is averaging 12.5 points and 5.5 rebounds a game.

Despite leading MTSU to a 16-0 conference mark (26-4 overall), MTSU coach Rick Insell was not named the league's coach of the year. That honor went to Florida International's Jesyka Burks-Wiley, who guided the Panthers to a second-place finish (11-5, 20-10 overall).

MTSU is the No. 1 seed entering this week's conference tournament in Huntsville, Alabama. The Raiders play in the quarterfinals at 11:30 a.m. Wednesday against the winner of Tuesday's Sam Houston-UTEP matchup.
