MEDIA INFORMATION
The 2015 Oregon State football media guide is a source of information intended for the news media. Additional information is available upon request from the Oregon State Athletics Communications Office. News releases and photographs will be made available to accredited members of the media. The OSU Athletics Communications Office is located, adjacent to Reser Stadium and the Valley Football Center, on the second floor of Gill Coliseum in room 219.

MEDIA CREDENTIALS
Credentials to cover Oregon State home football games may be secured by contacting Steve Fenk, Associate Athletic Director/Communications at 541-737-7470 or steve.fenk@oregonstate.edu.

MEDIA PARKING
Limited media parking is available immediately behind the press box on the west side of the stadium (enter off Western Blvd.). Overflow parking is available approximately three blocks from the press box in the OSU Foundation lot.

PHOTOGRAPHY REGULATIONS
Photo passes will be issued only to accredited photographers on assignment. Photographers should proceed to the northeast corner of the stadium to obtain a vest per Pac-12 Conference rules. NCAA regulations forbid photographers from being between the 25-yard lines.

PRESS BOX

POSTGAME WORK AREAS
Two working areas postgame are available for use – the press box at Reser Stadium or the media room in Gill Coliseum (located near the opponents' locker room). The usual statistical packets with quotes will be delivered to both areas.

HISTORY OF OSU SIDS
There have been only six Sports Information Directors in Oregon State's history. Oregon State's current SID, Steve Fenk, joined the OSU staff in September of 1990 as the men's basketball SID. It was not until 2004 that he took over as the Interim Sports Information Director for the entire department. In 2006, Fenk received a permanent appointment as an Assistant Athletic Director for Communications.

Art Taafe	1924-37
Bud Forrester	1937-41
Irwin Harris	1942-51
John Eggers	1952-79
Hal Cowan	1976-2004
Steve Fenk	2004-present

INTERNET
Wireless internet access is available at all working areas of Reser Stadium and Gill Coliseum. Please see the OSU Communications staff for the access code.

PROFESSIONAL SCOUTS

PRACTICES
Practices are closed to the media and public with the exception of the last 20 minutes. Generally, player and coach interviews are conducted post-practice on Mondays-Thursdays for Saturday games. Video may be shot of the last 20 minutes of practice, please see the on-field Communications personnel for that day's schedule.

PAC-12 TELECONFERENCE
The Pac-12 Conference conducts a weekly press conference on Tuesday with all 12 head coaches. For the time and access information please contact the conference office at (925) 932-4411.

TELEVISION

PAC-12 TV PARTNERS — As a member of the Pac-12 Conference, Beaver games air regionally and nationally on ABC, ESPN, ESPN2, FOX and the family of Pac-12 Networks.

PAC-12 NETWORKS — The Pac-12 Networks launched August 15, 2012 and consists of one national and six regional networks devoted solely to the Pac-12. In addition to the hundreds of live televised Pac-12 sporting events, Pac-12 Networks subscribers have access to their carrier's TV Everywhere platform, providing access to all Pac-12 Networks programming on any device through their broadband service.

RADIO

GAME DAY — Beaver Sports Properties, a division of Learfield Sports, produces gameday radio broadcasts and special programming, syndicated on the Beaver Sports Radio Network. The 8-hour broadcasts consist of over 30 stations across Oregon and is anchored by the Portland flagship station NewsRadio 1190 KEX/Rip City Radio 620.

Mike Parker, the "voice of the Beavers", handles the play-by-play and is joined in the booth by former Beaver lineman and OSU Hall of Famer Jim Wilson. Ron Callan handles the pregame, postgame and sideline duties during the broadcasts.

Beaver Sports Network programming begins two hours before kickoff with the "Countdown to Kickoff Show" and signs off approximately two hours after each game following the popular "Beaver Wrap Up Show."

NewsRadio 1190 KEX, owned locally by iHeartRadio, is the home of the Beaver Sports Radio Network. Along with its extended football coverage, KEX or its sister station, Rip City Radio 620 AM, broadcast Beaver men's basketball and baseball games, and every Beaver Sports Talk (Tues. or Thurs.) from late August through early April. Oregon State enjoys the strongest comprehensive radio package in the Pac-12 Conference by offering the most total hours of play-by-play and auxiliary programming.

There are several options to complement local radio with football and men's basketball games available on XM Satellite Radio (official partner of the Pac-12 Conference), internet audio and video live streams via osubeavers.com.

In addition, Oregon State Athletics offers radio broadcasts online via the TuneIn application. TuneIn enables people to discover, follow and listen to what's most important to them — from the Beavers, to news, to music, to talk. TuneIn provides listeners access to over 100,000 real radio stations and more than four million podcasts streaming from every continent.

BEAVER SPORTS TALK — In addition, Beaver stations also carry "Beaver Sports Talk" a weekly statewide call-in show every Thursday (Tuesdays for weekday games) night from 6-7 p.m. featuring head coach Gary Andersen and Mike Parker. BST is live from Buffalo Wild Wings on Ninth Street in Corvallis and airs on most of the Beaver Sports Radio Network stations on www.osubeavers.com.

THE JOE BEAVER SHOW — Each weekday from Noon to 2 p.m. Mike Parker and Jon Warren host an OSU sports-themed show in the Greater Corvallis area on 1240 KEJO and is available worldwide on kejoam.com.

MIKE PARKER

Mike Parker is entering his 17th season calling OSU football, men's basketball and baseball action and has been behind the microphone for some of the school's crowning achievements on the athletic fields.

The "voice of the Beavers" is a 1982 graduate of the University of Oregon with a bachelor's degree in rhetoric and communications. His broadcasting career includes play-by-play for football, basketball and baseball for high school sports in Oregon, beginning in 1977. He was the voice of the Eugene Emeralds (1983-86) minor league baseball club and the Oregon women's basketball program (1983-87). He also was the play-by-play voice of the AAA Portland Beavers from 1987-92.

Parker hosted a show on all-sports KFXX Radio from 1990-95 before moving to KEX Radio as host of Sportsline and the Fifth Quarter program following Portland Trail Blazers games. Parker has been named the Oregon Sportscaster of the Year six times. Mike and his wife Missy have two daughters, Lydia and Ellie.

JIM WILSON

Jim Wilson is in his 12th year on the OSU football radio crew, and has also worked as a color analyst on OSU baseball broadcasts.

He is one of the top two-sport student-athletes in the history of the school, participating in baseball and football.

Wilson, a member of the OSU Sports Hall of Fame, still holds the school record for home runs in one season with 21 and for single season (.829) and career (.640) slugging percentage. He was the Pac-10 Conference's Northern Division MVP and third team All-American in 1982. Wilson was drafted by the Cleveland Indians in 1982 and played Major League Baseball with the Indians and Seattle Mariners, and in Japan. Wilson lettered in football as an offensive lineman in 1980 and '81.

Jim and his wife Lisa have been married for 25 years and have twin daughters, Esti and Evan.

RON CALLAN

Ron Callan has spent over 35 years in the broadcast media business, all in the Pacific Northwest, and is in his eighth year as a member of the Beaver broadcast team. Callan handles sideline duties as well as hosting the pre- and post-game shows. He has been named the Associated Press Sportscaster of the Year three times.

Callan spent seven seasons as the sideline reporter for the Seattle Seahawks' radio network after a 10-year stint hosting the Washington Huskies' postgame show on KIRO TV in Seattle.

The 1974 Linfield College graduate also has worked for KVDO TV in Salem, KTVB TV in Boise, KHQ TV in Spokane and Root Sports. Callan, a former opera singer, has three children – Cassie, Daniel and Lily.

STEVE PREECE

Steve Preece has been a mainstay with the Beavers both on the field as a quarterback on the famed 1967 "Giant Killers" team and in the booth as a color analyst for Beaver broadcasts. The 1969 OSU graduate played nine seasons in the NFL for the New Orleans Saints, Philadelphia Eagles, Denver Broncos, Los Angeles Rams and Seattle Seahawks. He played on four conference championship teams with the Rams.

Preece adds insight on network pre-game radio. He is married to Karen Renee Hammer. Preece has two sons, Travis and Nick, and a daughter Whitney and her husband Pete. He also has one grandson, Travis.

OSU HISTORY & TRADITIONS

THE FIGHT SONG

OSU our hats are off to you,
Beavers, Beavers, fighters thru and thru,
We'll cheer thru-out the land,
We'll root for every stand,
That's made for old OSU.

Watch our team go tearing down the field;
Those of iron, their strength will never yield.
Hail! Hail! Hail! Hail!
Hail to old OSU

NICKNAME — THE BEAVERS

In the early days of the institution, Oregon State University's athletic teams were known as the Aggies. When orange uniforms replaced the drab sweatshirt gray and tan jerseys, the teams were referred to as the Orangemen.

In 1916 the school yearbook was renamed "The Beaver" and the name Beaver became associated with the school. It is believed the press also had some influence in changing the name, particularly L.H. Gregory of The Oregonian newspaper. The name gained instant popularity among alumni and students.

The Beaver is the state's official animal.

THE MASCOT — BENNY

Benny Beaver was adopted as Oregon State University's mascot in 1952 after the school had a reported three previous mascots. The first mascot in 1893 was a coyote named Jimmie, owned by M.M.H. Kriebel. In 1909, a second mascot appeared on the scene. Dr. John Bell, a Corvallis pastor and former regent of Corvallis when the college was taken over by the state and became Oregon Agricultural College. In the early 1900s, "Doc Bell" was considered to be the varsity football squad's "mascot" because of his steadfast attendance and advising. In 1921 there was an attempt to make a live Beaver, "Bevo", into the school mascot, but with little success.

Benny Beaver, OSU's current mascot, was introduced to the student body by the school's rally squad on September 18, 1952, in an effort to pick up sagging school spirit.

"Benny Beaver, the rally squad's candidate for handsomest man in school, has never been on campus before," according to The Barometer (student paper), at the time.

Adopted as the official mascot in 1952, Benny Beaver still fires up the crowds at OSU athletic events today.

Benny Beaver, while officially accepted as the school's mascot in 1952, actually can be traced back to the 1940-41 school year. A statue of a beaver named "Benny" appears in the school's yearbook, and later a Barometer sports columnist used the pen name "Benny Beaver."

TEAM COLORS — ORANGE & BLACK

Oregon State was known as Corvallis College until the mid 1890s and the school color was navy blue. A faculty committee appointed by school President John Bloss voted to replace blue with orange. Not long after, black was selected by the student body as a background color. A local tailor named J.H. Harris donated black uniforms for the baseball team in this time frame, and it is believed to be where the black color scheme began in athletics, although that is debatable. An article in the local Corvallis Gazette-Times in 1892 describes the use of orange and black in commencement ceremonies, nearly a year prior to orange becoming the official color.

While orange was originally the official color, over the years black has become more universally accepted as one of the official colors. Today, nearly all of OSU accepts black and Pantone 1665 orange as the official colors.

62 | OFFENSIVE LINE

Senior | 6-6 | 331 | Experience: 3V

Major: Economics

Granite Bay, Calif. | Granite Bay HS

OVERVIEW
- Incumbent starter at right guard
- Suffered a foot injury in the 2015 Spring Game
- 10 career starts
- Preseason Pac-12 Fourth Team selection by Phil Steele

2014 (JUNIOR)
- Started 10 games at three different positions
- Started the first five games at left tackle
- Started game six, against Utah, at right tackle but suffered an ankle injury
- After missing two games, he returned to start at right guard against Washington State and finished the season there amassing four starts at the position

2013 (SOPHOMORE)
- Entered fall camp with the expectation that he would win the starting job at right tackle – the only opening on the line
- Diagnosed with mono during the final week of fall camp and missed the season's first four games
- Played mostly on special teams

2012 (FRESHMAN)
- Played mostly on special teams as part of the shield on the punt team
- One of five true freshmen to play

GRANITE BAY HIGH SCHOOL
- Rivals three-star athlete highly recruited by West Coast schools
- Led Granite Bay to the San Joaquin Section title in 2011
- Two-time Sierra Foothill League Lineman of the Year, Sacramento Bee All-Metro Team and All-Sac-Joaquin Section team
- Three-year starter
- Played in the 2011 Holiday All-Star Game
- Accomplished wrestler with several national tournament titles and all-league honors
- Granite Bay also produced former Beaver football standout Sammie Stroughter

PERSONAL
- Born November 17, 1993 in Carmichael, Calif.
- Son of Kara Andrews
- Has two brothers, Dana and Jesse, and a sister, Eva
- Expects to graduate with a degree in economics in spring 2016

Gavin Andrews (62) started 10 games at three different positions in 2014. He finished the spring practice session as the incumbent at right guard, but a Spring Game foot injury could sideline him in the fall.

4 DOWNS WITH GAVIN

First football memory: Getting my first football helmet.
Describe Coach Andersen: Rugged, tough and honest.
Describe Coach Woods: Hardworking. He knows his stuff and he's hilarious.
Hobbies: Sleep.

Lavonte Barnett 'fits right in' on Beavers' defensive line

By Connor Letourneau
The Oregonian September 9, 2014

CORVALLIS — As a true freshman in 2011, Lavonte Barnett's wardrobe didn't jibe with the Oregon State locker room's understated ethos. Teammates needled the Southern Californian about his long-flowing dreadlocks and tight sequin T-shirts, joking that there is no room for flash in Corvallis.

Today, Barnett sports short black hair and plain gray cutoffs. It's an external reminder that the junior defensive end has embraced surroundings. He now fits in seamlessly with the Beavers, both on and off the field.

"He's a completely different person," senior defensive end Dylan Wynn said after practice Tuesday. "It's great to see, and that's why he's having so much success right now."

On Saturday, Barnett replaced junior Jaswha James at starting left defensive end in Hawaii. Coaches wanted to reward the former three-star recruit for a diligent offseason that culminated in a solid season opener.

It marked a special memory for a player who toiled behind stalwarts for two years. But Barnett, of course, isn't content with one career start. He aims to seize opportunity, to prove that he warrants an extended look with the first team.

"I think that would be everybody's goal, to get the starting spot and get on the field, be the guy that they call on to make plays," Barnett said. "But at the same time, whether or not I'm starting, I'm still going to be giving my best effort and putting my heart in it for the team."

Such selfless speak is genuine. Though Barnett hopes to someday make the NFL, he recognizes the value of filling roles.

The 6-foot-3, 259-pound athlete faced a logjam as a redshirt freshman and sophomore. Wynn and future Minnesota Viking Scott Crichton were entrenched in the starting lineup, leaving Barnett to try and impress in cameos.

He appeared in two games in 2012, recording no stats beyond a recovered fumble against California. Last year, Barnett totaled just three tackles in 12 appearances as Wynn's backup.

Consistency was elusive, Barnett often struggled with assignments, landing out of position during key moments. Capitalizing on natural gifts was proving tricky.

At times, Barnett grew frustrated. He wanted an extended chance to remedy errors on Saturdays. With Crichton and Wynn on the roster, he recognized, no such opportunity was imminent.

"There's that competitor inside you," Barnett said. "You always want to be the one that's out there making plays on the field."

Crichton declared for the NFL last January, clearing a spot at left end. James, whose aggressive approach had impressed coaches in the Hawaii Bowl, soon emerged as the favorite. He took first-team reps throughout the spring.

This summer, Barnett stuck in Corvallis and labored through a personal workout regime. He visited the Sports Performance Center twice a day, intent on making a late first-string bid.

By the start of fall camp, Barnett had added about 15 pounds of muscle. He was swarming the ball with more tenacity in workouts. He was working within himself, consistently finding the right spots on the field.

Barnett didn't cobble together a gaudy stat line Aug. 30 against Portland State. He was seldom out of position while spelling James. He operated within the flow of defensive schemes.

Early last week, Barnett was told to prepare to start against the Rainbow Warriors. James had "been quiet" in the opener and the staff wanted to see whether Barnett could thrive in an expanded role.

On Tuesday, the Lancaster, Calif., native called his first start "unsatisfying." He wishes he had seen the field clearer and reacted to ball carriers faster.

At this point, Barnett has hardly solidified a starting gig. So he will treat the bye week as an audition, showcasing the same strides that earned him a start Saturday.

Whether Barnett opens OSU's Sept. 20 matchup against San Diego State, though, is ultimately of little significance. The Beavers plan to rotate heavily at both defensive ends. Barnett, James and converted wide receiver Obum Gwacham will log significant time.

Wynn echoed as much. Barnett will contribute in whatever spot he holds, the defensive line's unquestioned leader said. He "fits right in."

Much has changed since 2011.

Storm Woods gearing up for a fantastic finish at Oregon State

By David Lombardi
ESPN.com April 6, 2015

In three years at Oregon State, Storm Woods racked up over 2,000 rushing yards and added nearly 1,000 more through catches. He had seen enough success at the Division I level to believe his cuts and his jukes packed adequate pizzazz.

That was before running backs coach Telly Lockette arrived in Corvallis as part of Gary Andersen's new staff.

"When I used to watch film before he came, I thought I was making some good moves," Woods laughs. "He was like, 'naw man. We can't have that. You look stiff. You're not loose.'"

Before long, Lockette prescribed some quick stop drills, and Woods has been hammering away at them ever since. The fresh regimen is designed to improve his footwork, his vision and the fluidity of his hips.

"[Lockette's] a running backs guru," Woods says. "He's helping me so much with my reads and my ankle mobility. He's teaching us new concepts of speed, depth and hole location."

Andersen's new regime is making its presence felt at Oregon State, and it's clear that Woods is embracing change on both an individual and a schematic level.

"The faster you buy in, the faster you're successful," he says. "As a leader, I understand that message."

Woods' first three seasons at Oregon State have all featured healthy production, but the stars may now be aligning for him to post a truly eye-popping 2015 campaign. Terron Ward, who split carries with Woods in the past, has exhausted his eligibility. Sean Mannion, the Pac-12's all-time passing leader, is gone too. So if there were ever a year in which Woods might be expected to shoulder the Beavers' offensive load, this is it -- Andersen, after all, is the coach who let Melvin Gordon run wild to the tune of 2,587 yards at Wisconsin last season.

There's one more development that's particularly appealing to Woods: The Beavers return all five of their starting offensive linemen.

"It's a dream come true," the senior says.

Woods is quick to note that he's watched junior tackle Sean Harlow "grow since he was a baby," and he believes that the chemistry which comes when a group naturally meshes together over time will pay dividends in 2015.

"Our offensive linemen have developed experience and maturity, and it's led to a beautiful mindset," Woods says. "The biggest thing I appreciate is that they come out with a pissed-off mentality every single day at practice. Whether they give a great block or if they get beat, they're fighting until the end of the whistle, and that's all you want as a running back."

For the Beavers to rebound from last season's disappointing 5-7 record (they dropped six of their last seven Pac-12 games), Woods and the veteran line will have to foster the development and integration of a new quarterback. Mannion was at the controls for four seasons so this is expected to be a full-scale overhaul for Oregon State, especially since new offensive coordinator Dave Baldwin is installing an up-tempo offense to replace the pro-style days of the past. Seth Collins, Luke Del Rio, and Nick Mitchell are the three finalists battling for the quarterback spot.

"I have to be a big brother to the quarterback, because all of them are young and don't have a whole lot of experience," Woods says. "We're going to take them and make sure they don't get too high or too low -- stay even keeled."

Containing excitement may prove challenging given the high-output track record of Baldwin-led offenses in previous stops at Michigan State, New Mexico, Utah State, and Colorado State. Last season, Baldwin's Rams were the only FBS team to feature a 4,000-yard passer, a 1,700-yard receiver and a 1,200-yard rusher. Woods says that a quick look at those numbers has helped fuel his adaptation to a demanding new system.

"You definitely have to be in better shape," he says. "And you have to learn the offense inside and out. When the play is signaled, you have a five-second span where you get your assignment and you have to know every single concept, every single formation, where the wide receivers are, and where the offensive line is blocking."

The pace may have been frenetic at first, but the challenge of corralling it has infused the senior with a newfound sense of energy and optimism as he enters his final go-round.

"I want to lead my team to 11 victories and win the Pac-12," Woods says. "I have big dreams and big goals like that. Hard work speaks for itself. I want to end my career with a bang and let the young guys learn from that."

Woods is aware that the realization of lofty dreams is born in small initial steps so it's clear that his focus isn't fixated on the destination, but rather the details of the journey to get there -- and those start with the drills that Lockette has prescribed to make him a more limber and explosive runner.

"If I had that kind of success in the Pac-12 being stiff, I can only imagine how I'll feel when I'm loose," he says.

Storm Woods wants offense to 'emulate' Utah State, Colorado State

By Gina Mizell
The Oregonian April 7, 2015

CORVALLIS — Storm Woods' excitement built as he scanned Colorado State's stats from 2014.

The Rams, then led by new Oregon State offensive coordinator Dave Baldwin, rolled up some eye-popping -- and balanced -- numbers. Quarterback Garrett Grayson compiled more than 4,000 passing yards and 32 touchdowns. Receiver Rashard Higgins tallied more than 1,700 receiving yards and 17 scores. And running back Dee Hart totaled nearly 1,300 rushing yards and 16 touchdowns.

"In my mind, I'm like, OK, that's me, Villy (Jordan Villamin), Vic (Victor Bolden), Chris (Brown), Seth (Collins), Nick (Mitchell)," Woods said following Saturday's practice. "I just start calling names.

"I might be joking when I say that, but at the same time, hearing that and seeing the success they had (at Colorado State) and with our guys here, how hard we work ... the sky's the limit."

Woods was asked last week about being the next running back under Gary Andersen, who boasted Heisman finalist Melvin Gordon at Wisconsin last season. But, really, Woods is the latest ball-carrier in Baldwin's offense, one that trumps the misconception that spread systems are often pass-happy with a side of quarterback run game.

Andersen has preached the need for tough, powerful running backs throughout the spring. That's been tested with the new Beavers coaching staff implementing more "live" work with tackling. Woods, though, said the mentality to "run mad" is most important.

With the passing game still largely under construction with three young quarterbacks vying for the starting job, Woods provides a needed veteran presence. OSU's entire starting offensive line also returns, a group that helped Woods and Terron Ward combine for 1,462 yards and 15 touchdowns last season.

But there's still work to be done before Woods believes he will scan the Beavers' 2015 stats with the same excitement as with Colorado State's 2014 numbers.

"We're still not where we want to be at," Woods said. "When we watch film, we want to almost emulate how they looked at Utah State and Colorado State with Coach Baldwin. So we have a long way to go."

4 DOWNS WITH VICTOR

Non-football aspirations: Own my own business.
Biggest football influence: My dad. He was the first person to teach me the game and is my biggest role model.
Best thing about playing receiver: Being able to catch touchdown passes and going deep.
Hidden talents: Great sleeper.

The Natural: Bolden can be 'great'

By Kerry Eggers
Portland Tribune September 16, 2014

CORVALLIS — The first thing Jordan Villamin noticed about Victor Bolden, he says, was "that he was real little."

The next thing Villamin noticed? "He was real good."

That was back in their high school days, when Villamin was an XL-sized receiver for Etiwanda High and Bolden was the do-everything star at crosstown rival Los Osos High in Southern California's San Bernadino County.

Now they are teammates at Oregon State, Villamin a 6-4, 240-pound manchild redshirt freshman, Bolden a 5-9, 170-pound sophomore and heir to Brandin Cooks as the Beavers' top receiving threat.

With 16 receptions for 171 yards and a touchdown in two games, Bolden is on pace for triple figures this season, if Oregon State should make a bowl game. He won't reach Cooks' junior numbers — a Pac-12 record 128 catches for 1,730 yards and 16 TDs — but he could become a reasonable facsimile of the most decorated receiver in conference history.

"Victor can be a great, great player here," says OSU receivers coach Brent Brennan, who recruited Bolden. "As long as he continues to work — and I think he will — he'll be a guy people will talk about for a long time."

Not bad for a little guy whose parents kept him out of tackle football until the eighth grade, not wanting to subject him to a pounding at too young an age.

"I had the belief that every football player has a shelf life," says his father, Victor Bolden Sr., who played some football at Mt. San Antonio College in Walnut, Calif. "He played club soccer and flag football at school. But he also took martial arts for three years, and you could see he had the demeanor to be a football player. The first time he played, he was a natural."

Even before that, Victor Sr. and his wife Zelda — a star sprinter at Mt. SAC who also ran at Arizona State and Washington — knew their oldest child was an athlete.

"Even at 3 or 4, he had very good hand-eye coordination," Victor Sr. says. "We had a little basketball court. You could lob the ball up to him and he could jump, actually grab the ball and dunk it."

The younger Bolden always had athleticism and speed, and he never worried about his physical dimensions.

"Growing up, we never talked about size," his father says. "We never made that a point of reference. He didn't realize he was really short until he was in high school. He was always the best athlete on all the teams he played. He was in the Olympic Development program for soccer. He was always faster than everybody."

Bolden was a two-sport standout at Los Osos High, a three-year letterman who held the school career record with 109 receptions. As a senior, he was CIF runner-up in the 300 hurdles in track and an All-West Region selection in football, accounting for 1,236 yards rushing and receiving with 13 touchdowns.

"He was the greatest athlete we had, and we had some good kids," says Tom Martinez, his coach at Los Osos and now the school's athletic director. "In terms of overall speed and athleticism, he was the best kid I had in 11 years coaching here."

"Victor was great," Brennan recalls. "At receiver, he won the battle every time he lined up. At one point, Coach Riley told him, 'Play a little corner.' He went up against the best receiver and shut him down. He was our kind of guy — good player, good people, all that kind of stuff."

Bolden fielded offers from Utah and Hawaii and was talking to UCLA when he chose to commit to Oregon State in early July before his senior year.

"There are a lot of receivers who fit my body style who have done well here," Bolden explains. "That was a big part of my decision. And the family atmosphere that Oregon State brought to the table was great. I knew this was the place I had to be."

During Bolden's senior season, Brennan scouted a Los Osos game. Playing some receiver and cornerback, and even some tailback in a "Wildcat" formation, Bolden scored four touchdowns.

"He played all over the field," Brennan recalls. "When Victor was in there, the team moved the ball up and down the field. It was as impressive as heck."

Says Martinez: "We tried to get him the ball in as many ways as we could."

Brennan could have asked Villamin, who had been friends with Bolden since their sophomore years.

"We've been going against each other since then, and we have a lot of mutual friends," Villamin says. "He was like their whole team, pretty much. Any time we went against him, our defense had to key on him. We had a couple of battles. It was pretty good."

Did Bolden and Villamin make their decision on Oregon State together?

"You probably could say it was a package deal," Villamin says.

Probably, though, each decided on the Beavers on his own.

"Jordan was always the biggest guy on the field, and a pretty good player," Bolden says with a grin. "To think we came to the same school is pretty crazy."

The OSU coaches were impressed with the Bolden family. Victor Sr. is a retired corrections counselor. Zelda is a career counselor at Mt. SAC. Brennan did his due diligence with the coaches and teachers at Los Osos.

"Everybody raved about him," Brennan says. "You'd hear, 'You'll be getting my favorite student,' or, 'You're getting my favorite kid on campus.'"

Martinez felt the same way.

"Victor works hard in practice, just like he does in a game," the former Los Osos coach says. "He doesn't take plays off. He's a quiet, humble kid. You usually don't get all those things together. With adults, it's always, 'Yes sir, no sir.' His parents did a really good job with him."

Sister Victoria is a freshman soccer player at California.

"I'm proud of her," Victor says. "She's an athlete. She's 13 months younger than me. We used to battle all the time."

Then there is brother Silas, soon to be 13 and — against his father's better judgement — already playing tackle football.

"He's going to be the best athlete of the bunch," Victor says.

Adds his father: "Victor is maybe a step faster than Silas at the same age, but Silas has a little bit more athletic ability."

Bolden arrived in Corvallis as a true freshman expecting he would probably redshirt. But he looked good in training camp, and when backup slotback Micah Hatfield suffered an early injury, Bolden was suddenly Cooks' backup.

"Victor was making plays all over the field," Brennan says. "I'm watching (video) thinking, 'Holy smokes, this kid is taking off.'"

Bolden returned kickoffs, taking one back 98 yards for a touchdown against Washington, and caught six passes and ran the fly sweep 12 times for 96 yards and a TD while backing up Cooks.

"It was still surreal to get the opportunity, to be part of the team like that at such a young age," Bolden says.

Bolden's early emergence didn't surprise Martinez.

"The kid is tough," he says. "Victor never missed a game for us, and he took some beatings. Coach Brennan said, 'We like to redshirt freshmen, but we'll see what happens.' Victor is going to work hard. You coach him, he'll listen to what you say. I knew he had all that in him."

Now Bolden is Oregon State's primary deep threat. On the first play of Oregon State's 38-30 win at Hawaii, he went deep for a 41-yard bomb that would have been a touchdown if the pass wasn't underthrown. He caught 11 passes for 119 yards and a score. There is more where that came from.

"You expect guys to improve a lot from the freshman to sophomore year, and Victor has been unbelievable that way," Brennan says. "He is growing as a player. He has good quickness and great ability to change direction. He catches the football clean and is dynamic with the ball in his hands. He has followed the formula for a lot of the good players at that position here in the past."

Bolden is smaller than Cooks (5-10, 185) and Markus Wheaton (5-11, 190) and not as compact as James Rodgers (5-7, 190), but he is cut from the same cloth.

"We just weren't afraid of Victor's size," Brennan says. "We've had guys who aren't the tallest players who have done pretty well. We're not going to let that talk us out of a good player. Already, he is emerging as a leader for the (receiving) group. He has a real good disposition. Everybody likes him."

Bolden's parents played a big role in their son's decision to go to Oregon State.

"It's an excellent fit for Victor," his father says. "It was important to go to a program where it's not going to be about size. We felt Oregon State provided that opportunity best for him — to play based on his ability, not on his physical stature."

Bolden is on his way. He says he has no individual goals in mind on the field.

"My goal is to help us win every game," he says. "I just want to produce, to make plays when they need me to make plays. I'm excited to see what we can do this year. if we put everything together, no doubt we can have a great season."

4 DOWNS WITH DEVIN

First football memory:..... Getting a Brett Favre jersey, helmet and football when I was four. I never wanted to take it off.

Best thing about playing cornerback: . . All eyes are on you. You're on an island guarding the best athletes on the field one on one. There is nothing better than locking down the No. 1 receiver.

Describe Coach Andersen: .... A player's coach. You can tell he wants to win and loves the game. He takes care of his players.

Describe Coach Odum: .....Good coach. He takes pride in the DBs and wants us to show off and have fun ... to be ballers.

Devin Chappell (26) sat out the 2014 season due to NCAA transfer rules but registered the only interception of the contest at the 2014 Spring Game.

Devin Chappell, walk-on cornerback, enjoys breakout spring with Beavers

By Connor Letourneau
The Oregonian April 6, 2015

CORVALLIS — It was toward the end of last season when Dwayne Williams overheard Devin Chappell talking about trying to earn a scholarship.

Williams was confused. For months, he had watched Chappell make highlight-reel plays on Oregon State's scout team. There was no way, the freshman thought, that Chappell wasn't recruited here.

"Wait," Williams said, "you're a walk-on?"

Chappell had fielded the question countless times before. It confirmed that others saw what he knew well: His skills belie his story. Come this fall, the Division II transfer hopes to turn Beavers fans into believers as well.

He appears on track. Throughout spring practices, Chappell has impressed with his diligence. The 6-foot-2, 199-pound junior is rotating at first-team nickelback, where coaches believe he brings necessary size and physicality.

"Some good things are going to come his way," said head coach Gary Andersen, who is careful not to differentiate between scholarship players and walk-ons.

As a young kid growing up in Long Beach, Calif., Chappell daydreamed about playing for USC. Oregon became the goal when he was 9 and the family moved to Springfield, an eight-minute drive east of the Eugene campus.

Chappell was a two-way standout at Thurston High School. After twice earning first-team all league honors at cornerback and wide receiver, he had yet to hear from a Division I coach.

Chappell considered enrolling at a junior college, the popular route for overlooked players with Power-Five ambitions. He said he accepted his lone scholarship offer to Western Oregon because of financial circumstances.

When he arrived in Monmouth in summer 2012, Chappell planned to bolster his résumé enough to earn a full ride at a higher-profile program. He climbed up the Wolves' depth chart and enjoyed a solid sophomore season: three interceptions, two pass breakups, 50 tackles.

Division I interest remained tepid, at best. But Chappell still yearned for something better, on a stage much bigger. He gave away his scholarship, took out student loans and walked on at OSU.

It was a calculated risk. He understood that few walk-ons make it beyond scout team, that some would label even the occasional special-teams cameo a success. But Chappell had loftier goals. He wanted to be the exception. He wanted to follow the likes of Mike Hass and Mike Remmers as Beavers walk-ons who became major contributors.

Last season, while redshirting under NCAA transfer roles, Chappell emerged as a scout-teams playmaker. He picked off Sean Mannion numerous times in practice. The question -- You're a walk-on? -- grew more and more prevalent.

Chappell studied starting cornerback Steven Nelson. He peppered the future NFL draft pick with questions; well aware that Nelson's graduation would leave a first-team opening in 2015.

In his first individual meeting with Andersen this winter, Chappell made a request: He didn't want to be treated like a walk-on because he felt he didn't play like one. Andersen appreciated Chappell's confidence and promised to offer every player equal opportunity.

This spring, after lining up with the first team in practice, Chappell often allows himself a moment of peaceful introspection. For years, he has felt undervalued by talent evaluators. He has hungered for the chance to show the outside world that he belongs at college football's highest level.

With the spring game less than two weeks away, Chappell is content knowing his opportunity has finally materialized. Soon enough, he hopes teammates can stop asking whether he is a walk-on.

Because, like them, he would be receiving a free education for his efforts.

"He has the talent," Williams said. "He should be a guy on scholarship."

Added Chappell: "It just feels so good that all the hard work is paying off. There were times where I wasn't really sure if things were going to come together. But this new coaching staff, they've showed me a lot of love. I'm just so appreciative."

Drew Clarkson's perseverance leads him through cancer, to Beavers

By Connor Letourneau
The Oregonian February 11, 2014

CAMAS, Wash. — It had been two months since his junior season ended in the Washington 4A semifinals, and Drew Clarkson felt the ache of imperfection. He was already an all-state offensive lineman at Camas High School, yet he still wanted to become faster and stronger, more attractive to major Division I coaches.

So he and his mother, Cheri, went to OfficeMax in January 2013. She bought a 2-by-3-foot whiteboard and hung it in his bedroom. Drew, then-16, mapped out his plan in red marker: the lifting benchmarks, the weight goals, the monthly deadlines. He would refer to the blueprint often, returning from workouts with a green marker to check off one objective after another.

Progress slowed in March, his timetable pushed back by a sudden barrage of doctors' appointments, blood tests and CAT scans. Work completely ceased by April. Ten months later, the white board remains untouched. It serves as a stark reminder of his recent ordeal, of the aspirations Drew has yet to realize.

"I look at those goals and what I wanted," Drew, now 17, said, "and I still have those goals as I work out now."

In late April, Drew started chemotherapy to treat testicular cancer. Last Wednesday, Drew signed a letter of intent to play at Oregon State.

Beavers coaches foster a culture of perseverance, he said. They're an ideal fit.

Matt Clarkson placed little stock in his middle son's third-grade vow to play college football. Drew had said the same thing about becoming a fireman and a rancher.

But football's hold on Drew went beyond childhood idealism. It offered an outlet for his aggression. It made him feel valuable.

As Drew progressed through youth leagues, he came to revere the workmanlike ethos of offensive linemen, with their athletic modesty and focused physicality. Football soon became a year-round endeavor, overriding the saxophone lessons and art classes that had previously filled his youth.

In 2010, Drew entered Camas High while the Papermakers were emerging as a state title contender. While he toiled on the freshman team, the varsity reached the school's first 4A quarterfinal. The community of nearly 20,000, built around the Georgia-Pacific paper mill that anchors the town's south end, packed the stands for its only high school.

Drew idolized star senior Odin Coe, a rugged defensive end with blond hair that flowed to his shoulder pads. He watched in awe as the all-state performer flew into opposing backfields, his mane giving him a superhuman mystique.

Soon he grew his own shoulder-length locks, honed his footwork playing basketball and added 40 pounds to his undeveloped 6-foot-3 frame. The following fall, Drew started on varsity, a rarity for sophomores. He replaced an injured upperclassman at left guard three games into the year and would earn second-team all-league honors.

Drew's junior season was his best. He handled the area's top athletes with relative ease at left tackle. He was named first-team all-state. He landed offers from Football Championship Subdivision programs Northern Colorado and Eastern Washington.

"I don't think he felt like he was even close to where he wanted to be," Cheri said. "You would never think he felt satisfied. I think he's pretty hard on himself."

In the wake of a blowout loss to Skyview High in the 4A semifinals, Drew holed up in Camas' weight room. His senior year represented his last chance at a Pac-12 scholarship, he thought. He needed to be ready.

Last March, Drew tried to ignore the slight lump on his right testicle. It was nothing, he told himself.

A week passed. The bump grew and hardened. While changing after rugby practice one day, Drew started to panic when he felt the small, solid mass. He called his mom, his voice trembling as he asked to see a doctor.

It was 5 p.m. on a Friday, Cheri reminded him. It would have to wait the weekend.

Drew, desperate for answers, turned to the Internet. He typed his symptoms into Google. Testicular cancer, the most common cancer in men 15 to 35, came up.

Cheri wasn't concerned. A family friend had experienced something similar, only to learn he had an infection. Surely, she figured, Drew just needed antibiotics.

On Monday, the doctor believed Drew needed nothing. He explained that everything was normal.

Drew implored him to check again. Two days later, an oncologist waded through the results of a CAT scan. It was a tumor, the specialist said. It needed to be removed.

Fear consumed the Clarksons the week before Drew's surgery. Cheri and Matt couldn't sleep more than a couple hours at a time. Anxiety gnawed at their appetites.

They guessed the tumor was malignant, but they had no way of knowing. The disease has a 95 percent survival rate, but where on the spectrum did Drew fall?

"All of a sudden your child is facing a potential life-threatening illness," Matt said. "You don't know what to do."

That Saturday morning, Drew huddled his teammates at Liberty Middle School before their Oregon Rugby match. As he cried, he spoke of cancer and responsibility. He asked them to understand why he was about to play his last game of the season.

The Clark County Warriors named Drew team captain that day. They hugged him, wept with him and erupted into a frenzy when Drew scored on his first two tries.

Four days later, surgeons removed his right testicle. Tests revealed that Drew had Stage 2 cancer. The oncologist planned to monitor Drew's condition for six to eight weeks. There was still a 70 percent chance he'd need chemotherapy.

Drew quickly sifted through his mental calendar. Treatments would likely seep into football, he thought. That couldn't happen.

"I wanted to play my senior season," Drew said. "I wasn't really worried about anything else."

Over the next two weeks, he made the necessary arrangements to begin chemotherapy. He visited the sperm bank five times, accumulating enough reserves to account for the 30 percent chance the drugs meant to keep him alive would sterilize him.

On Facebook, Cheri set up an event: "Thor No More." The weekend before Drew's first round of chemotherapy, a dozen or so teammates gathered at the Clarksons' house. They ate barbecue, joked about Drew's 13-inch-long ponytail and watched as Cheri snipped it off in the family kitchen.

Though Drew couldn't keep his hair, he wanted to help others fighting similar battles. He donated it to Locks of Love, which provides hairpieces for children suffering from medical hair loss.

"It was hard to cut it," Cheri said, "because I knew how much he wanted that image."

Pictures show her fighting back tears as she puts scissors to the hair Drew had spent two years growing.

Death permeates chemotherapy rooms. Cancer patients sit side by side in recliners, pumping poison into their veins in the name of survival. End-of-life brochures often line the walls. For some, it's a last stop.

Tualatin's Compass Oncology, where Drew endured four rounds of chemotherapy, was no less forgiving. While the high school junior, balding by the day, logged six-hour shifts connected to a drip, a mosaic of sobering scenes unfolded around him.

There was the gray-haired woman, in her late 60s or early 70s, who came in to have her port cleaned. As she shuffled toward the exit with her daughter, Drew recalled, she told the nurses not to expect her the following week for her scheduled treatment. She was going into hospice care.

Another elderly woman sat near Drew one day, discussing her lung cancer diagnosis with family.

"I just have so much I want to do with my life," she cried.

Such moments left Drew feeling lucky, even blessed. By that point, he viewed his cancer as more of a hindrance than a death sentence. He was on target for a full recovery.

"It's just kind of an eye-opener to see what people have to go through," Drew said. He was on a drip in late April when his iPhone buzzed. It was Camas' coach, Jon Eagle: California had offered him a scholarship.

Nearby nurses rejoiced as a wave of relief washed over Drew. Back home on his whiteboard, that was the objective above the rest. It didn't matter that others remained unchecked.

Within two days, Oregon State and Washington State offered. Washington and Boise State soon followed.

"It was highs and lows in one day," Cheri said. "You go through that, and then you come home and you're dealing with being sick."

Drew tried to chip away at the lengthy to-do list lurking on his bedroom wall throughout the spring. Matt dropped him off at Camas' weight room every Monday and Tuesday after chemotherapy sessions. One afternoon, a fatigued Drew tried to lift a 260-pound barbell. It smacked his port, which protruded from his chest, while falling to the ground.

Over two separate four-day spans in his treatment, Drew felt debilitating joint pain that made his knees feel "like they were being crushed." He was an athlete who couldn't walk. Some nights, he thrashed in bed for hours and howled for pain medication.

"Here's a kid who had every reason to say, 'No, I can't lift today. I can't do this,'" Eagle said. "Yet here he is, lifting straight out of chemo and hitting his port. … And that wasn't even the worst of it."

When Drew put red marker to whiteboard in January 2013, he did so largely with designs on a perfect senior season. He wanted to hoist Camas' first state football championship trophy. He wanted to start both ways for the first time in his career. He wanted to dominate.

For the most part, when he finished his fourth and final round of chemotherapy in late June, that was all possible. He hadn't lost any weight, and he had a month to get ready for football.

Yet the setbacks continued. Drew, whose muscles were severely imbalanced after spending much of the past four months in a chair, pulled his right hamstring about a week into summer practice. Next, it was hip inflammation. Then, just a few workouts into his latest return, he re-tweaked his hamstring in September.

The team captain filled the role of student coach for the Papermakers' first four games. He pulled his replacement aside after each series, peppering him with pointers.

When Drew finally returned to the lineup, he struggled with self-confidence. Tending to various ailments made him 20 minutes late to practice most days. He lacked the stamina to start on defense. He never had more than three-quarters of his strength.

Every once in a while, though, Drew let himself relish the roar of a sold-out Friday night crowd, to reflect on how far he'd come from chemotherapy.

"We're just thankful he got an opportunity to have a normal life," Eagle said. "That's really what we were pulling for."

Drew, nagging hamstring and all, played on, using his size and intellect to outmaneuver opponents. The Papermakers rolled into the state title game with a 13-0 record. Against Chiawana, Camas led 26-13 late in the fourth quarter. One minute and 14 straight points later, the Riverhawks had snatched a 27-26 victory.

Again, Drew felt the ache of imperfection. The day after the defeat, he retreated to Camas' weight room and focused on his old set of goals, the ones in red marker that remain untouched on the whiteboard. He still needed to bench-press 300 pounds, to squat 400.

"The other day, I benched like 295 for five (repetitions) at the end of my workout," he said. "So I'm getting there."

The words "PAC-12," in green block lettering, sit in the bottom right corner of Drew's whiteboard. Directly beneath them are two phrases: "Never give up" and "Never stop believing."

Kammy Delp, Oregon State offensive lineman, stepping into bigger role during spring practice

By Gina Mizell
The Oregonian March 11, 2015

Running.

How much running, exactly?

"'Til the point where we all threw up most of the time," Delp recalled following Tuesday's spring practice.

All worth it, though, the Oregon State redshirt offensive lineman assures.

Delp dropped his weight from 350 pounds to 320 during that time, making him more physically equipped to keep up with the Beavers' up-tempo spread offense. And he's already taking advantage, sliding into the first-team spot at right guard while Gavin Andrews is sidelined.

"With the new offense and new coaching staff coming in," Delp said, "going in rotational-wise with the starters, it's a pretty humbling experience."

Delp arrived at OSU as one of the more promising (and Twitter famous) recruits of the 2014 class. He was a Semper Fidelis High School All-American, flipping to the Beavers after initially committing to Arizona State.

He spent 2014 on the scout team, leaning on veterans like Isaac Seumalo and Sean Harlow for advice. He watched how the Beavers' starting unit shuffled throughout the season due to injury and performance, and realized he could soon be in a position to be the next man up.

So Delp cut that weight during strength and conditioning coach Evan Simon's winter program to better position himself to join the rotation. When Grant Bays and Garrett Weinreich medically retired before spring practice began, Delp slid up the depth chart even more.

Now, he's the first replacement at guard in a group that returns all five linemen that started the final five games last season.

"At first I was nervous," Delp acknowledged. "But me and Coach (T.J.) Woods talked. He just told me I had to step it up, just don't be afraid, this is a man's game.

"After the first play, when I first went in, it was like, 'Alright, forget it. Just do it."

Woods said he's pleased with how Delp has handled himself so far, but that the youngster still needs to improve his strength and agility. Delp is also working to become a mistake-free, master technician, something Woods is stressing with his entire group as he implements some new approaches to blocking. And Delp is getting used to the fast-break nature of this new offense, where the linemen quickly need to go from play to play without huddling.

After all, that's what those winter runs were for.

Rahmel Dockery exceeds own expectations with Beavers

By Connor Letourneau
The Oregonian September 24, 2014

CORVALLIS — Rahmel Dockery had modest expectations when he joined Oregon State for fall camp last month. Practice diligently, he thought, and backup reps could be on the horizon.

Earlier this week, Dockery shook his head slightly when reflecting on how reality has bested hopes. He was toiling through individual workouts in his hometown a year ago in the name of convincing an FBS program to try him at wide receiver. On Saturday, Dockery could shoulder a heavy workload in one of his sport's most storied venues.

With Victor Bolden (dislocated pinkie) sidelined, the Washington State transfer may start at flanker -- as well as return punts and kicks -- before a national TV audience at No. 18 USC. The expanded role is the marriage of steady strides and opportunity.

"It's great," Dockery said with a smile. "I'm thankful for the opportunities that I'm getting. It's a lot more than I expected."

Little more than two years ago, Dockery's football career reached its nadir. Cougars coaches had moved him from receiver to cornerback, a position he never intended to play in college. Dockery felt undervalued, unsure whether he'd ever carve a niche in WSU's secondary.

He finished his redshirt season before moving back into his family's Tacoma home. Dockery spent last year shuttling between Tacoma Community College classes and personal training sessions. For the first time since early childhood, organized football wasn't part of his routine.

Dockery contacted OSU, the school he had relished visiting as a Curtis High School senior. The Beavers were still intrigued with the player who recorded more than 2,600 all-purpose yards in his final prep campaign.

By this past fall camp, Dockery was laboring through a sizable learning curve in Corvallis. OSU's pro-style offense was a far cry from anything he encountered in Pullman. It didn't help that Dockery suffered a concussion in his third Beavers practice. While he took mental reps for a week, freshman Xavier Hawkins made a case to back up Bolden at flanker.

Coaches, intent on utilizing Dockery's athleticism, plugged the sophomore in at first-team kick returner. They added fly-sweep work to his résumé during wins over Portland State and Hawaii. Pundits labeled Dockery "Bolden 2.0" since his responsibilities mirrored the ones Bolden held the previous year.

"Rahmel has been steadily making plays in practice and improving," wide receivers coach Brent Brennan said. "That's really good."

Early in the second quarter Saturday, Bolden trudged toward the locker room with a dislocated right pinkie finger. Dockery stepped from sideline to hash mark with the game tied at 7 against a pesky San Diego State team.

With halftime nearing, he was called for pass interference on a nifty 15-yard catch. Few fans remembered the miscue moments later. Dockery raced down a 49-yard Sean Mannion bomb, twisting midair while SDSU cornerback J.J. Whittaker jostled for positioning.

"It felt like the ball was in the air forever," Dockery recalled.

His first college catch put OSU at SDSU's 2-yard line. On the next play, running back Terron Ward romped into the end zone to break the tie.

It was quite the introduction. That night, though, Docker wouldn't write another chapter. He had suffered a hip pointer on the highlight-reel grab.

This week, he has felt anxious missing two practices while nursing the injury. He wants to capitalize on opportunity and ease the sting of Bolden's absence.

Should Dockery fully recover, Brennan will have clear expectations Saturday for his first-year player. Dockery "will be great," he deadpanned. After all, Dockery has done nothing to make him think otherwise.

"I thought I'd be that person that comes in when people are tired," Dockery said. "But I'm starting to see my role on the team as a lot more than that, so I'm working hard to make a bigger impact."

Gilmore still trying to make impact for Beavers

By Gary Horowitz
Statesman-Journal April 8, 2015

CORVALLIS — Oregon State wide receiver Malik Gilmore doesn't want to think about this being a potential breakout season. He's heard it before.

So far Gilmore's college career has been more about potential than production.

A 6-foot-3, 217-pound junior from Lakewood, California, Gilmore has size and speed. But those attributes have not translated into production on the field.

After catching seven passes for 76 yards in 2013 as a redshirt freshman, Gilmore opened last season as the starting slot receiver. But he quickly moved to a backup role at the slot and split end positions, and had just one reception for 15 yards.

First-year coach Gary Andersen is implementing a no-huddle, spread offense this spring to replace the pro-style philosophy of former coach Mike Riley, and it could be a good fit for Gilmore.

As for that long-awaited breakout season?

"I don't want to call it anything," Gilmore said. "I've got stuff I need to work on still. I'm gonna try to do my best to find my part and show what I can do."

There's an abundance of play-makers at wide receiver led by junior Victor Bolden, who led the Beavers last season with 72 catches for 798 yards, and scored two touchdowns.

Sophomore Jordan Villamin (35-578-6), replaced an injured Richard Mullaney (elbow) at midseason and emerged as Sean Mannion's top deep threat, with 35 receptions for 578 yards and six TDs.

Mullaney returns for his senior year, and add sophomore Hunter Jarmon and junior Rahmel Dockery to the receiver equation as well.

"With the spread, that's like a receiver's dream," Gilmore said. "More balls, more chances to make plays."

That remains to be seen.

Mannion's departure resulted in a quarterback competition between sophomore Luke Del Rio, redshirt freshman Nick Mitchell and true freshman Seth Collins. The race is too close to call at this point, and none of the signal callers distinguished themselves in the passing game.

"We need to be more accurate, especially on deep balls, but I think it's coming slowly but surely," Del Rio said.

Gilmore provides an inviting target, as does Villamin at 6-4, 235 pounds. You can put Bolden, Jarmon and Dockery in the category of smaller, quick receivers.

With OSU expected to play at a much quicker pace, that could lend itself to four and five-receiver sets. Gilmore hopes to be in the equation.

"Malik is definitely someone to reckon with," Bolden said.

But that has been the talk before in spring practice and fall camp regarding Gilmore. A new coaching staff has provided a fresh start.

Andersen likes what he's seen thus far from Gilmore.

"He's really coming on in a lot of ways," Andersen said. "Special teams, his ability to help us get better. On the offensive side he's growing, he's getting himself developed."

Gilmore is not putting undue pressure on himself, but he could end up being the odd man out in a numbers game.

Fall camp likely will determine if Gilmore earns playing time on offense and special teams.

"I've got two more years to make it happen," Gilmore said.

With Grimble, Peko, Beavers may have interior spots tackled

By Kerry Eggers
Portland Tribune April 2, 2015

CORVALLIS — Whether or not Oregon State employs a 4-3 or 3-4 defense next fall -- and the jury is still out -- the Beavers' defensive interior should be fortified with more talent than it was a year ago.

A healthy Jalen Grimble and an academically eligible Kyle Peko would go a long way toward making it so.

Grimble is healthy, and Peko is eligible -- sort of -- so the view is optimistic as Oregon State continues its spring practice sessions under first-year head coach Gary Andersen.

When last we saw Grimble, he was gripping his surgically repaired knee after tweaking it in the third quarter of OSU's Civil War defeat. It was the end to a disappointing first season on the field with the Beavers for Grimble, the highly acclaimed Miami transfer who missed more than half the 2014 campaign following surgery to his left knee.

Peko? The Beavers' longest-standing mystery man since Simi Kuli practiced with the scout team all last season after a transfer from Cerritos College in Norwalk, Calif., waiting for academic qualification that never arrived.

On Thursday, both were in uniform and practicing, leaving Andersen feeling good about the possibilities.

"Jalen did some good things the first day," Andersen says, "and he had a smile when he was walking off the field. It was good to see that.

"Kyle is doing well. I'm proud of the way he handled his academics last quarter, which is the No. 1 priority right now. He has an opportunity now, and he's a good kid. For us, it's stay on him, grind him every single day, don't let him take a big deep breath."

The 6-2 Grimble is at 285 pounds, 25 less than at the end of last season, quicker and better-suited toward D-line coach Chad Kauha'aha'a's toward agility and flexibility.

"I'd like him to be at 280," said Kauha'aha'a, who was with Andersen at Utah and at Wisconsin. "I I like all our (D-linemen) to be under 300. They don't need to be huge. If they have an opportunity to go to the NFL, then they can bulk up."

Kauha'aha'a has sent several former Utes and Badgers to the NFL.

"I had only one over 300 pounds, and that was (Philadelphia Eagles nose tackle) Beau Allen," Kauha'aha'a says. "(Carolina Panthers tackle) Star Lotulelei was 300 on a good day."

Grimble was one of the nation's highest-touted prep linemen out of Las Vegas. He originally committed to Southern Cal, then signed with Miami. After a sophomore season in the rotation with the Hurricanes, he transferred to Oregon State to be closer to home.

After a redshirt season in 2013, Grimble won a starting job despite dealing with a nagging back injury in training camp and through the early season. By the Beavers' fourth game, at USC, "I felt the best I'd felt since summer," he says. "I was juiced for that game, for obvious reasons."

Grimble was making an impact against the Trojans when he was hit by a high-low double-team, the chop block taking out his left knee. He suffered a torn meniscus and a partially torn MCL and PCL, undergoing surgery the following week.

After six weeks of rehabilitation, Grimble returned for the penultimate game of the season at Washington. On the third play, the knee gave out on him, sidelining him for the rest of the game. He played the final game against Oregon before the knee was reinjured in the third quarter.

A second surgery was a possibility, but "the doctors felt the best way to go was to rehab and get my leg strong. And here I am."

The 6-1, 300-pound Peko originally committed to Michigan State out of Cerritos, then opened up his recruitment. Ironically, he narrowed his choices to Utah -- where Kauha'aha'a was D-line coach -- and Oregon State before choosing the Beavers.

"I really liked Utah, but it didn't feel like the right fit," Peko says. "Oregon State did. I loved the coaches and loved all these (players). And after everything I've been through, they still have my back. I'm glad I made the decision."

Peko arrived in Corvallis in the spring of 2014 hoping to gain his academic eligibility by August. Problem was, several of his on-line credits from Cerritos didn't transfer. He took classes during spring and summer and thought he was clear to play. He practiced right up to the Beavers' season opener against Portland State when D-line coach Joe Seumalo delivered the bad news.

"The day before the game, Coach Joe said, 'You can't play,' " Peko says. "The compliance people said I was six credits short."

Peko played scout team last season with more than a tinge of regret.

"I felt like I let the guys down," he says. "I was one of the top guys coming in out of junior college. I had a lot to bring to the team last year, and I didn't get to display that, which sucked."

Since then, Peko has continued to take classes and work toward the academic progression that will take him to graduation. He says he had a 2.9 GPA for 16 hours during winter term and is taking a full load again in the spring.

"I'm told if I pass them all, I'll be good to go next season," says Peko, who takes the blame for his academic deficiencies. "It was all on me. I should have done more in junior college. It was about priorities, and my priorities have changed now."

Peko was married to his wife, Giuliana, in December and she is expecting their first child, a boy, in June. "I'm super excited," he says. Giuliana will transfer to Oregon State this summer. By then, Peko expects to be eligible to play what will be his final collegiate season.

In January, he had his first meeting with Andersen.

"I wanted to know if I had a spot on the team, knowing there was a lot of liability with my saga," Peko says. "I was excited and scared and nervous to see what he would say.

"We had a stern meeting. He said, 'You're either going to get it done, or you're not. It's either going to be a great story, or it's not. Let's make it a great story.' "

OSU's defensive coaches are experimenting with their frontal alignment for next season. For the first two weeks of spring ball, they worked mostly out of a 4-3. Over the final three weeks, they'll go mostly with a 3-4.

"I don't know if we're just dabbling in it, or we're moving toward it," Kauha'aha'a says. "We'll know more as we move forward."

Either way, Grimble and Peko -- if he's eligible -- will have an impact.

"It's good to have Jalen healthy," Kauha'aha'a says. "He gives us depth and flexibility. He can play tackle in the even front and nose guard in the odd front, and he can play end, too. There were a couple of guys I coached at Wisconsin who could swing it, and he fits that mold, as does Sumner Houston.

"It's unfortunate the things Kyle has had to go through here, but we're working to get him eligible, and he's on the right track. He's a tremendous talent. Athletically and physically, he has all the tools to be a great nose guard or tackle. The future is bright for him, and right now it's bright in the classroom, which is all we're focused on."

Grimble and Peko have become members of a mutual admiration society.

"I see a lot of great things in Kyle," Grimble says. "I tell people he's the player I want to be. He's powerful, he's strong, he's smart, and he knows what's going on in the field. Not to knock myself, but there are some attributes he has that I would love to add to my game."

Peko laughs when told of Grimble's assessment.

"I don't know what he's talking about," Peko says. "I want to get to where he's at. I was out a whole year and watched him play before he got hurt. I was thinking, 'I need to be like that guy.' I'm excited he's back out here. We feed off each other. it's good competition for the whole D-line."

While retaining loyalty to the previous coaching staff under Mike Riley, both players say they like what they see from Andersen's staff.

"Coach Riley and Coach Joe were good to me; they brought me here," Grimble says. "With the new coaches was a change, but an adaptable change.

"I love the new staff to death. They care for us, they push us, they want the best for us. They see the potential this team has. They know what we can be, and they're trying to get it out of us."

Grimble's back for the Beavers

By Kevin Hampton
Corvallis Gazette-Times April 2, 2015

CORVALLIS — Jalen Grimble is back at practice for the Oregon State football team this spring.

Grimble, a defensive lineman, tried to get on the field early in spring practice but decided to rest his leg.

He was on the field for his first full practice of the spring on Thursday.

"I wouldn't say I wasn't ready but I just wasn't comfortable enough to give it my all and I didn't want to come out here and be behind everybody else and hurt myself even further or take up reps that weren't up to the coaches' par while other people could be getting those valuable reps, so I took it off to get my leg strong," Grimble said.

"The plan was after spring break when I got back if I was good enough to go, I'd go. And I went."

Grimble missed six games last season after suffering a knee injury at Southern California. He tried to come back late in the year but had not fully recovered.

Grimble said he enjoyed the contact that coach Gary Andersen and his staff allow during practice.

Grimble got a big dose of hitting on Thursday.

"It's full-go. I give everything I have," he said. "I will admit I'm a little rusty from not practicing, but there's nothing wrong with banging heads with people for a couple hours."

Grimble, who plays tackle in the 4-3 used by the Beavers under Mike Riley, was playing defensive end in the 3-4 for the Beavers. He's familiar with the defense and praised the younger players for taking on a large load of new information.

"It puts them two times behind the 8-ball because I'm a senior but I've had experience. I've had two times to learn a different defense," he said. "I know what it takes to learn a defense, to come around the curve, but it's kind of new to them. But they've been holding up, they've been keeping up, they've been asking questions and they're willing to learn."

Grimble said he's not quite 100 percent, but is feeling good enough to practice.

"I'm getting there," he said. " My leg's strong enough to get through a practice as today. I felt great. There's a lot of room for improvement but I feel OK."

Xavier Hawkins moves past disappointing freshman season

By Connor Letourneau
The Oregonian April 8, 2015

CORVALLIS — Before each Pac-12 game last season, Xavier Hawkins' iPhone flooded with good-luck texts from friends and family back in hometown Knoxville, Tennessee. They wanted the true freshman wide receiver to be ready, just in case.

Opportunities were scarce. After a rash of injuries forced Hawkins into emergency duty Sept. 27 at USC, he totaled just three carries -- all on fly sweeps -- for five yards.

Games spent anchored to the sideline wore on Hawkins. He wondered why coaches had burned his redshirt, only to offer him a few inconsequential reps.

"I was expecting a lot more as far as the fly sweeps and stuff," Hawkins said. "Then when it came to game time, they didn't really call it that much."

Fretting over the past can hardly help present circumstances, of course. So Hawkins is embracing a fresh start under Gary Andersen's staff.

He has added several pounds of muscle to his 5-foot-7 frame. For the past month, he has pored over a much-thinner playbook in hopes of learning every receiver position. The more comfortable Hawkins is at all the spots, after all, the better chance he'll have to contribute come fall.

"He gives us that versatility of playing four receivers," offensive coordinator Dave Baldwin said. "He can be an inside slot receiver for us, and also motion into the backfield and carry the ball and do some things."

Hawkins has worked primarily behind Victor Bolden at second-team slotback. But Baldwin's spread offense calls for a considerable receiver rotation, meaning reps should come whether Hawkins cracks the starting lineup.

He hopes that the luck friends and family had wished for him proves useful this year.

"This is a whole new thing," wide receivers coach Brent Brennan said. "You know, he's got three years of eligibility left. What he does with it is up to him."

Kendall Hill embraces chance to move back to secondary

By Gina Mizell
The Oregonian April 13, 2015

CORVALLIS — Early in Saturday's Oregon State scrimmage, the Beaver wearing No. 12 in black stepped to his left, stretched out his arms and snagged an interception off of Nick Mitchell.

At least one onlooker voiced a simple inquiry: "Who was that?" No defensive player wearing No. 12 was listed on the roster, after all.

It was Kendall Hill, the former receiver who within the last 10 days has switched to cornerback in hopes of increasing his opportunity to get on the field in 2015.

"It's been a great week," Hill said with a smile following the practice. "It's been a crazy week."

The move is a return to the secondary for Hill, who arrived in Corvallis as a safety after starring at La Marque High near Houston at that position, along with receiver, quarterback and punter. After injuries derailed his first two seasons on campus, the Beavers moved Hill to receiver prior to the start of 2014 in hopes he could provide depth to a position group attempting to replace Brandin Cooks.

Yet Hill spent the bulk of 2014 on the scout team and essentially only got into games on special teams. Reps were also difficult to come by this spring, with the Beavers' entire group of wideouts returning.

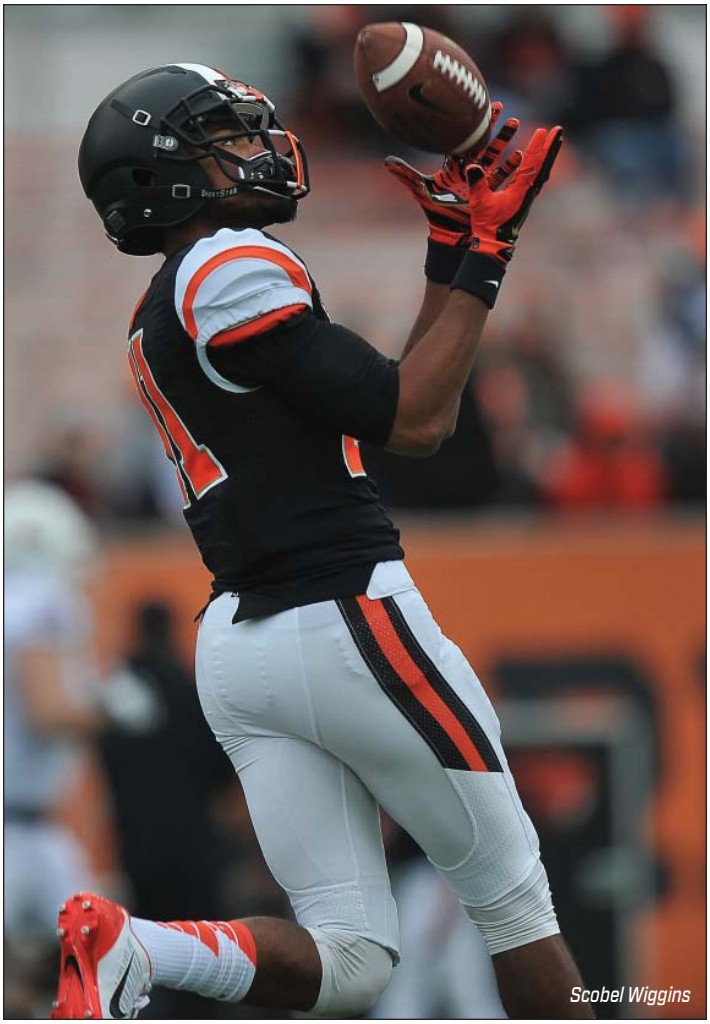

So Hill reached out to new defensive coordinator Kalani Sitake, who had recruited Hill to play defensive back at Utah. The coach agreed Hill's athleticism and lengthy frame (6-foot-1 and 205 pounds) could bolster the secondary. And that familiarity with Hill's high school prowess on defense gave him credibility with head coach Gary Andersen.

Now Hill's primarily getting reps with the second unit, matching up with former pass-catching pals rather than running routes with them. He knows his technique -- specifically his footwork at the line of scrimmage -- needs work as he settles back in on defense.

But he expects to corral the football when it's in his vicinity -- just like that interception during Saturday's scrimmage that prompted observers to ask for the identity of No. 12 on defense.

"That's just how I operate," Hill said. "If I don't catch the ball, I'm hard on myself, because I know I have long range and I can catch the ball ... I want everybody to know that Kendall's coming all the way across to try and make a play on a tackle or bat the ball down or anything.

"I just want to have the greatest hustle. That's my thing. Right now, the technique and everything will come over time. But I just want to have the biggest hustle and the biggest heart out there, (so) that everybody feeds off of me by me making some plays."

Kendall Hill overcame a pair of knee injuries in his first two seasons at Oregon State to make it on to the field in 2014. Hill performed mostly on special teams in eight games. Last spring, Hill moved to cornerback and recorded five tackles in the 2015 Spring Game.

Luke Hollingsworth provides unexpected lift at defensive tackle for Beavers

By Gina Mizell
The Oregonian October 8, 2014

CORVALLIS — Joe Seumalo and Dylan Wynn turned to Luke Hollingsworth and asked if he needed to get on the stationary bike and warm up.

Not only was Hollingsworth about to take the field for the first time during Oregon State's contest at Colorado by starting the second half at defensive tackle. He was about to make his OSU debut.

"I did some high knees in place and just said, 'No, I was born ready,'" Hollingsworth recalled earlier this week.

Hollingsworth was not kidding around. On his fourth play, he sacked Buffaloes quarterback Sefo Liufau, providing an unexpected lift to a depleted defensive tackle rotation hit with two injuries against USC the previous week.

After working exclusively at defensive end since arriving at OSU for fall camp, Hollingsworth knew last Monday he would shift inside to make up for the loss of starting tackle Jalen Grimble (knee) and his backup, Noke Tago (knee).

It's a position Hollingsworth, a sophomore transfer from Snow College in Utah, had not played since high school. He weighed a measly 220 pounds back then, he said. But he re-learned tackle quickly during the week, embracing the freedom to simply "play fast" at the position.

"On the edge, you've got to make sure nothing crosses your face to get outside," Hollingsworth said. "But D-tackle, it's play fast and go get the ball."

During the first half in Boulder, OSU went with the rotation of Wynn, Bud Delva, Siale Hautau and Brandon Bennett-Jackson. But Hollingsworth got the call after the break, and quickly capitalized on an opportunity to rush the passer.

On third-and-4 from the Colorado 45, Hollingsworth looped around end Obum Gwacham to get outside. As Hollingsworth fought off Colorado left tackle Jeromy Irwin, Gwacham and Lavonte Barnett helped collapse the pocket. As Liufau tried to bounce off the jumbled bodies, he ran right into Hollingsworth, who wrapped Liufau up and dragged him to the turf.

"Thanks to our coverage down the field and the other D-linemen, I got 'home,'" Hollingsworth said. "I helped the team out, so it felt great."

Hollingsworth's stint at defensive tackle was short-lived, at least for now. He's back working at end this week in practice while Kyle Peko — who is still in academic eligibility limbo but could be cleared to play for next Thursday's home contest against Utah — takes the second-team reps inside. But Hollingsworth is glad he now knows two positions, since that versatility increases his chances of getting back on the field. He'll keep studying both end and tackle whenever he watches film.

And he won't forget his OSU debut, from those high knees in place on the sideline to bringing the quarterback down near midfield.

"You couldn't have written it up any better," Hollingsworth said.

Connor Kelsey, Beavers long snapper, aims to stay anonymous

By Connor Letourneau
The Oregonian April 14, 2015

CORVALLIS — Every night before bed, Connor Kelsey sets seven alarms on his iPhone -- one every five minutes between 6 and 6:30 a.m. After gradually waking up, the bleary-eyed freshman gets dressed and heads to his usual dining hall to order his usual breakfast: two slices of bacon, one scoop of hash browns and one scoop of eggs.

"Once I create a schedule," Kelsey said, "it kind of just puts me in a comfort zone."

In that sense, he and long snapping are the ideal marriage. He appreciates the repetitive nature of his obscure craft. Little rivals the sense of accomplishment Kelsey feels when consistently rocketing a football through his legs at the preferred angle and velocity.

His devotion to snapping earned him a full-ride scholarship to Oregon State. After a season behind three-year starter Michael Morovick, Kelsey is settling in with the first team. His modest goal -- stay anonymous, no matter what -- won't change when he plays on Saturdays.

Kelsey has precisely one duty: snap the ball on field goals, extra points and punts. While he will never hoist a Heisman Trophy, he knows teammates recognize his significance. Even the most minor miscue can usher Kelsey into the spotlight. Outsiders only notice the snapper, after all, when he sends the ball soaring past the punter or the holder.

At least once, Kelsey experienced the perils of his chosen field. It was his junior year at California's Carpinteria High School, in a game against rival Bishop Garcia Diego High School. Kelsey miscalculated the distance, sending the ball ricocheting off the fingertips of his 5-foot-6 punter. It was the only botched snap he can remember from his three years with the Warriors.

"His height didn't help me out too much," Kelsey said of his punter.

Kelsey first snapped a ball in seventh grade. After watching the strong-armed kid work through a few reps, an assistant coach pulled him aside and said, "If you stick with it, you could do this in college."

At the time, Kelsey had never considered such a possibility. Playing linebacker and wide receiver, as well as catcher and first base in baseball, were his top priorities. But Kelsey began attending camps several times a year with long-snapping guru Chris Rubio. Steadily, he rose up the rankings that Rubio compiles and Division I coaches rely upon.

Kelsey was a baseball standout, too, and at one point was receiving letters from Mid-American Conference member Ohio University. One weekend the fall of his junior year, he felt a tweak in his back while playing baseball. X-rays revealed a fractured vertebra.

While sitting out that spring, Kelsey concentrated on earning a football scholarship. He tightened his spiral and perfected his technique so he snapped the same way almost every time.

He shot to No. 17 in Rubio's class of 2014 rankings. By his senior year, Pac-12 schools were expressing interest. But most wanted him to walk on.

In late February, while visiting OSU, Kelsey was offered his first scholarship. He committed immediately, giving the Beavers their long snapper of the future.

While redshirting last year, Kelsey studied Morovick. He grew more and more comfortable as the season wore on with big-bodied defenders rushing toward him.

This spring, he has spent much of his time trying to find a rhythm with a holder. Quarterback Luke Del Rio and wide receiver Richard Mullaney gave it a try before tight end Tanner Sanders ultimately won the job.

But Kelsey can only feel so confident until junior-college punter Nick Porebski arrives on campus for fall camp. Developing cohesion with Porebski, the projected starter, will be key to a successful 2015 season.

"He's really, really young," special teams coach Ilaisa Tuiaki said of Kelsey, who turned 19 on Saturday. "The biggest thing is he's going to take his lumps just like every other freshman come game time. But he's our one guy on scholarship, so I'm excited to have him for the next four years."

Kelsey will continue working through his same morning routine. Snapping with that level of consistency is nearly impossible, but he relishes the pursuit.

A new look at linebacker

By Kevin Hampton
Corvallis Gazette-Times March 7, 2015

CORVALLIS — It's not unusual for a position group to enter spring practice with some questions.

Players move on, others compete to fill those spots.

The Oregon State football team is going through quite a bit of change and the linebackers are at the top of the list.

Alexander was second on the team with 70 total tackles. Doctor was third with 69 and Johnson fifth with 63.

For now, Tuiaki is sticking to the basics.

Junior Rommel Mageo started seven games in 2013 and got plenty of playing time last season. Junior Caleb Saulo started twice in 2013.

Junior Kyle Haley transferred into the program just before the start of the season last year and got into three games. Sophomore Darrell Songy played a lot of special teams in 2013 but was suspended and sat out last season.

After that, there are sophomores Manase Hungalu, T.J. Hufanga and David Henry, redshirt freshmen Jonathan Willis and Bright Ugwoegbu and freshman Ricky Li-uchan.

"I think that the group is really good," Tuiaki said. "I think that the group is athletic and they're young, still have got a lot to learn and growth to go through, but as far as giving them the expectations and having them live up to it, they've been fine so far."

Haley is going through his first spring with the Beavers and said he a strong connection with the team.

His goal is to learn as much as possible along with his fellow linebackers this spring.

"Take it all in, take it day by day and learn from your mistakes, watch film," Haley said. "I feel like they're expecting us to do well. They feel like we have a lot of talent in this group, a lot of young players but we're also talented. So I feel like we're going to have a great group of linebackers this year."

For now, the players are working from a 4-3 formation, which was what they used in previous seasons.

Saulo said there's just some minor differences, such as getting used to new terminology.

"As a linebacking corps, our main thing is to learn the system as fast as we can and I think our coaches are doing a great job of helping implement it so easy and making everything so simple," Saulo said.

"I really want to just develop on the small details of the game and build my awareness, my football IQ level. I feel like I've learned a lot and with this new coaching staff, they're really teaching me a lot of new things."

There's a good mix of players for Tuiaki to work with throughout the spring.

"We've got some guys with pretty good size that move well and we've got some guys that are a little bit smaller than others, but they're faster, more explosive and more athletic," he said. "So we've got a good combination of different types of 'backers and so we're excited to see how we can fit them into the puzzle and make it work."

First football memory: Playing mini-football with all of my brothers in our living room.
Biggest football influence: My older brother and my dad. I look up to both of them a lot and if I ever have a question they're there for me.
Best thing about playing center: I get to touch the ball every play and I get to be the leader of the offensive line.
Describe Coach Andersen: Competitor. That's the best way. In everything we do, we compete. He also cares about us a lot as people and as athletes.
Describe Coach Woods: He's a funny guy. He always has good one-liners for us in the meeting room.
Hobbies: I play a lot of video games. I also enjoy being outdoors and going flyfishing.
Hidden talent: I'm a really good wide receiver.

Josh Mitchell (50), who was named to the Rimington Award Watch List in July, returns to man the center position for the Beavers in 2015.

Brothers Nick and Josh Mitchell, Beavers quarterback and center, enjoying unique opportunity

By Gina Mizell
The Oregonian April 8, 2015

CORVALLIS — Josh Mitchell takes hold of the football resting on the turf and stares down his defensive lineman counterpart, not exactly focused on who's waiting behind him to receive the snap.

Nick Mitchell barks out the play call and stoically waits for the football, not exactly focused on who's delivering the snap.

Yes, the last names are the same because Josh and Nick are brothers. And in the moment, the rare sibling connection between entrenched senior center and redshirt freshman starting quarterback contender at a Pac-12 school rarely resonates with either.

But when Josh and Nick step back to think about sharing this experience -- and, at least for now, the football -- both realize this particular bond at this particular point in their lives is special.

"It's definitely unique," said Nick, who is two years younger than Josh. "To say the least."

Josh and Nick are the second and third of five children, including four boys who all currently play high school or college football (oldest brother, Taylor, plays linebacker at Division II's Humboldt State, while youngest brother, Caleb, is a high school junior who plays receiver, safety and long snapper). They were active as youngsters, playing kickball and wiffle ball with the neighborhood kids in the Seattle suburb of North Bend. Their father, Jeff, coached their Little League baseball teams for 13 years. They served as umpires and referees for local games.

And the brothers fed off each others' competitiveness. A casual session of shooting hoops quickly turned into an intense game of 2-on-2. Even when they were the pitcher and catcher on the same baseball team, Josh and Nick would argue. But they were also fiercely protective of one another, Jeff recalls.

In other words, they acted like brothers.

The pair became high school football teammates for one season at Mount Si, though Nick never took a game snap from Josh. Nick started at safety as a sophomore and was the backup quarterback, but whenever he went behind center, Josh moved to tackle.

High school is also when OSU discovered both brothers.

Nick watched Josh's recruitment first-hand, tagging along on his official visit. Once Josh signed with the Beavers, Nick made the trek to Corvallis for games. On those trips, he'd swing by Josh's house for a trademark barbecue and to hang out with some of his teammates.

When OSU then made Nick an offer, Josh did not try to sway his brother toward Corvallis. Ultimately, Nick also found OSU to be the right fit.

And when Nick officially joined Josh on campus last fall, he immediately felt an extra layer of comfort. He already knew his way around campus. He had already met several veteran leaders. And while the brothers were largely split up during meetings and practices -- Josh became an anchor on the offensive line while Nick impressed on the scout team -- Nick knew he could go to Josh for playbook help, general advice or the occasional game of FIFA or Grand Theft Auto.

Following a game last season, Jeff fondly recalls Josh and Nick meticulously dissecting plays together as the family walked back to the car.

"As they've gotten older, you've watched them, they are all very close," Jeff said. "That part's really special as a parent, because there were times you wondered when they're growing up if they would be."

Now, Josh and Nick are adapting to OSU's new up-tempo, no-huddle spread offense together. With Mitchell still in the running to become the Beavers' next starting quarterback, Josh often needs Nick to know the play call. Nick, meanwhile, often needs Josh to get his hands on the football.

Those exchanges presented a photo opportunity for Jeff as the Mitchell family took in Tuesday's spring practice.

And even if Josh and Nick don't think about that uniqueness during those on-field moments, the brothers realize what it means to share this experience -- and, at least for now, the football -- at OSU.

"I'm lucky," Josh said. "Not too many people get to do that with their younger brother. To see him grow, I'm proud of him." more athletic," he said. "So we've got a good combination of different types of 'backers and so we're excited to see how we can fit them into the puzzle and make it work."

Cyril Noland-Lewis (17) has been one of the Beavers' top coverage players accummulating 19 tackles on special teams in the past two seasons. In 2014, Noland-Lewis stepped into the dime defensive packages and since then has developed into one of the team's leaders.

Cyril Noland-Lewis, Beavers safety, sees patience pay off

By Connor Letourneau
The Oregonian April 8, 2015

CORVALLIS — Cyril Noland-Lewis didn't fret when he ended his senior season of high school with no major scholarship offers. The defensive back simply sent his highlight video to Power-Five coaches across the country and trusted he would find the right fit.

A couple big-time programs were soon competing against local Sun Belt Conference schools for the Ruston, Louisiana standout. For Noland-Lewis, the experience underscored the value of patience.

So he hardly minded his first season here when two sophomores started at his position. The next three years unfolded according to his plan: After gaining necessary experience on special teams and as a backup, Noland-Lewis is set to help lead a new-look Oregon State secondary.

"The system that we were in, everyone just kind of waited patiently," Noland-Lewis said recently. "I just took everything in."

Beavers coaches never questioned his potential. While redshirting in 2012, Noland-Lewis earned defensive scout team MVP. He switched to linebacker early in his redshirt freshman year when starter Michael Doctor suffered a season-ending ankle injury. The position move ultimately let him hone his physicality and vision.

Noland-Lewis thrived on special teams and showcased strong instincts as a coverage linebacker. Early in spring practices last year, he returned "home" to safety.

Responding to critiques is perhaps his greatest strength. Near the start of last year, defensive coordinator Mark Banker challenged Noland-Lewis to stop "flopping" after missed tackles. He perfected his technique and emerged as a dependable backup for seniors Ryan Murphy and Tyrequek Zimmerman. By late September, he was reveling in an eight-tackle outburst at USC when injuries forced him to shoulder a heavier load.

Noland-Lewis spent practices peppering Murphy and Zimmerman with questions. On game days, while watching from the sideline, he studied every move they made. He learned from their mistakes as much as much their highlights.

"I love those guys to death," Noland-Lewis said, "but I know there were things that they felt like they could've done better. I don't want to put myself in that position in the years to come."

The Beavers lost three starters -- Murphy, Zimmerman and cornerback Steven Nelson -- from a 2014 secondary that ranked third in the conference in pass defense. Noland-Lewis, fresh off a 27-tackle campaign, entered this spring expected to start alongside fellow safety Justin Strong.

His performance has only bolstered that status. Noland-Lewis has impressed Gary Andersen's staff with his instincts, athleticism and football IQ. The junior's consistency is a key reason coaches have touted the secondary again and again as the strongpoint of a rebuilding defense.

"He's an absolute leader," Andersen said of Noland-Lewis. "He's leading by the way he carries himself, not just out here and not just in the weight room, but when he leaves the facility. To me, that's a true leader in college athletics."

With so many defensive players settling into expanded roles, Noland-Lewis recognizes the importance of building camaraderie. He and Strong often take the rest of the defensive backs to Buffalo Wild Wings, where they relax and watch games.

This weekend, Noland-Lewis will host a team barbecue to celebrate the end of spring practice. He plans to grill bratwursts, burgers, hot dogs -- anything his teammates hanker.

"He knows that kind of stuff is how we develop trust in one another," linebacker Rommel Mageo said. "He gets that that's the key."

It's the product of patiently waiting his turn.

Ricky Ortiz (42) was a terror on special teams coverage units leading the Beavers with 11 tackles in 2014. The first string fullback last season will take his physical mentality to the tight end position in OSU's new offense in 2015.

Fullback Ricky Ortiz, Beavers' 'crazy kid,' shows teammates value of diligence

By Connor Letourneau
The Oregonian August 22, 2014

CORVALLIS — In seventh grade, Ricky Ortiz hatched a plan with a classmate to own an avocado orchard in Mexico. They spent years picking a location, a name and a chief investor.

Shortly after the 2012 signing day, Ortiz's home phone rang. It was Kansas State coach Bill Snyder offering him a scholarship to play linebacker. Ortiz, then a senior at Southern California's Mater Dei High School, politely declined. He had already agreed to walk on at Oregon State, where a premier agricultural sciences program could prepare him for that career in avocados.

"In the end," Ortiz said, "it worked out perfectly."

Few of Ortiz's teammates know about their backup fullback's entrepreneurial ambitions. The sophomore tends to keep to himself, biding time studying OSU's playbook or listening to music on his orange Beats By Dre headphones.

To most Beavers, running back Terron Ward surmised with a smile, Ortiz is "that crazy kid in the corner of the classroom." The walk-on, after all, sheds his mellow demeanor when he steps on the field. He embraces contact, rushing toward opponents with the reckless abandon of a 12 year old at recess.

More than once in fall camp, cornerbacks and linebackers have complained about Ortiz's intensity. He could hurt someone, they say. Did he forget it's just practice?

As a redshirt freshman last year, Ortiz thrived as a gunner on special teams. He was free to run, hit and tackle -- everything he relishes most.

During the offseason, he offered teammates tutorials on diligence. Ortiz was often lifting weights in the Sports Performance Center two hours after fellow Beavers had headed home, starting fullback Tyler Anderson said. Not satisfied with simply completing strength coach Bryan Miller's laundry list of exercises, Ortiz crafted workouts of his own.

"I worked out with him a few times," Anderson said. "He pushed me to levels I had never pushed before."

For nearly two weeks, the 6-foot, 230-pound Ortiz has earned praise running with the starters while Anderson nurses a nagging leg injury. Head coach Mike Riley twice called Ortiz "one of our best overall players" in the past three days. After Friday's practice, running backs coach Chris Brasfield leaned on titles like "ironman" and "wonderful team guy" when discussing Ortiz.

Whether such lauds will translate to a significant offensive role, though, remains unclear. Last year, the Beavers seldom utilized the fullback. Anderson, a short-yardage threat when healthy, totaled 11 receptions and five carries on the season. Ortiz has yet to cross the sideline for more than blocking or tackling.

"It depends on scheme and the game plan for that week," Brasfield said. "But I know he can go up and get it done."

As a walk-on, Ortiz faces a harsh reality. He grinds in anonymity, laboring through lengthy film sessions and practices without the luxury of free education.

But Ortiz's workmanlike approach has put him at the top of Riley's list for when a scholarship becomes available. If that day arrives, Ortiz said he would appreciate having earned it. Signing with Kansas State likely couldn't have rivaled the joy of effort acknowledged.

"Honestly, I'm very religious," Ortiz said. "I put it all in the Lord's hands. I'll just continue to do my time and wherever the Lord takes me, I'll go."

He has designs on landing outside Guadalajara, where he will run the avocado orchard he and his business partner will call "Imperio" (Spanish for empire). His friend is transferring to OSU from a junior college so they can more easily finalize plans. His buddy's dad, who owns sugarcane fields in Mexico, has already invested a sizable amount in the budding company.

Sometimes, Brasfield reminds Ortiz to remember him when the orchard nets millions. He wants to try Imperio's avocado dip.

CORVALLIS — At Mater Dei High School in Southern California, Ricky Ortiz was a versatile weapon. He shuttled between tight end, fullback, slotback, linebacker, defensive end, safety — anywhere the Monarchs needed his rugged playing style.

He only filled in at tight end once every few games. Opposing defenders, unsure how to handle the explosive athlete on routes, were often left watching as Ortiz ripped off a 50-something-yard gain.

"My coaches told me after my senior year, 'We probably should've utilized you a little more there,'" recalled Ortiz, now an Oregon State fullback. "I was like, 'Oh, yeah? It's a little late for that.'"

Beavers coaches are careful not to make the same mistake. As the season wears on, the sophomore's role in the passing game continues to expand.

In OSU's Sept. 20 win over San Diego State, Ortiz recorded two catches for 14 yards. He hauled in one Sept. 27 at USC, a game the entire offense sputtered, before again making crucial grabs Saturday at Colorado.

On first-and-10 midway through the third quarter, Ortiz corralled a 17-yard catch to put OSU within field-goal range. Kicker Trevor Romaine converted a 47-yarder four plays later to put the Beavers up 23-21.

On third-and-two midway through the fourth, Sean Mannion found Ortiz for a nine-yard gain. The first down helped set up running back Terron Ward for a 10-yard touchdown run that pushed OSU to a 12-point lead. The cushion would prove necessary in the 36-31 victory.

Ortiz's development as a pass catcher is a subtle storyline, one that isn't readily apparent on any box score. He is a distant eighth on the team with 47 receiving yards this season. In an air attack rife with inexperience, though, Ortiz offers Mannion a dependable target that isn't the focus of opposing game plans.

Ortiz, who has yet to run the ball this season, seldom practices receiving in workouts. Some weeks, his lone catches before kickoff come in pregame warm-ups. The limited sample size has made him relish each opportunity. Sideline sessions of toss-and-catch, relaxed affairs for most players, are an integral part of his preparation.

"When you don't get as many reps," Ortiz said, "you've got to take every rep into consideration."

During his redshirt year in 2012, Ortiz's crisp route running and soft hands earned him scout-team offensive MVP honors at tight end. He moved the following spring to fullback, where coaches thought the 6-foot Ortiz fit better physically.

The do-everything spot showcases perhaps his top skill: hitting. Ortiz, a special-teams menace at gunner, embraces being the "linebacker of the offense." Though he enjoys catching passes, he is enamored with bringing contact to defenders.

Four plays after his nine-yard grab moved chains in the fourth quarter, Ortiz paved Ward's game-changing touchdown run. He blocked two Colorado defenders before keying in on the middle linebacker.

"It was whoever got to him first," Ortiz said. "I just exploded out of my stance, and I got to him."

It wasn't a 50-something-yard reception, but the relentless play proved just as valuable.

Garrett Owens (21) etched his name in the OSU record books in the first game of his career, booting five field goals (the most by a player in his first game at OSU) on seven attempts (most ever at OSU) in the season opener against Portland State. Owens played in six games finishing the season 11-for-13 on field goal attempts and was perfect on 17 point after attempts.

Garrett Owens, Oregon State kicker, aiming to build off solid-yet-odd 2014 season

By Gina Mizell
The Oregonian April 6, 2015

CORVALLIS — Garrett Owens felt coaches and teammates in his ear, once again trying to mentally rattle the Oregon State kicker as he prepared for a field-goal attempt. This particular instance, they poked fun at his multi-colored cleats.

Practice life is a bit different for Owens and the Beavers specialists this spring under Gary Andersen's new coaching staff. Rather than completing all work at the beginning of each session and then splitting from the rest of the team, various kicking situations are sprinkled throughout the workout.

That essentially gives Owens a bigger audience as he aims to cement his status as OSU's starting kicker.

"It emulates what we're gonna do in the game," Owens said of the practice format. "I really like that. It kind of just makes you get used to the feeling of, 'Alright, I gotta stay loose the whole time.'

"Also, it kind of puts pressure on you, which I really like, because then you can get this feeling of, 'Alright, I got this. I can do this in a game.'"

Right now, building chemistry with new long snapper Connor Kelsey and new holder Luke Del Rio is Owens' most pressing spring task. Extended repetition is the simple key, Owens said. Del Rio is also Owens' roommate, providing plenty of opportunities to review film and discuss the fine details of the perfect hold.

"We're trying to get all the pieces of the puzzle put together," Owens said.

That's still quite the work-in-progress, Andersen said. The coach categorized the performance of the kickers -- Ian Crist, Zach Standish and Ryan Cope are also practicing this spring -- as uncharacteristically poor at the beginning of Saturday's open practice.

"We're usually much cleaner than that," Andersen said. "We did OK when we got into the reps and the moving part of the 'thud' practice (scrimmage) ...

"Our snaps are inconsistent. Our holds are inconsistent. Which, in turn, is gonna make any kicker in America inconsistent ... those are not excuses, but that's just where we are at this point."

Owens himself is coming off a solid-yet-odd 2014. He nailed 11-of-13 field-goal tries, including a long of 46 yards, in spot duty due to a variety of off-the-field issues at the position.

Owens was tossed into the starting job at the beginning of the season when Trevor Romaine was academically ineligible. Then, Owens lost his job when he served a one-game suspension for violation of athletic department policy against San Diego State on Sept. 21 and Romaine stepped back in for the next six games. Then, Owens got a second chance to hold all the kicking duties against Washington State on Nov. 8 when Romaine was suspended for violation of athletic department policy. Then, Owens split duties with Romaine against Arizona State the following week. Finally, Owens regained the full-time job when Romaine abruptly left the team for good prior to the Washington game on Nov. 22.

Owens declined to reveal the specific reason for his early-season suspension, calling it a "hectic situation, and I got through it." Now, he's continuing to work on his personal confidence, a trait he began to build with last season's off-and-on experience.

It helps whenever he nails a pressure kick in practice, and thus can turn around and dish friendly trash talk right back to the coaches playfully making fun of his multicolored cleats.

For Kyle Peko, growing family offers extra motivation to qualify with Oregon State

By Connor Letourneau
The Oregonian April 2, 2015

CORVALLIS — In less than three months, Kyle Peko will add the responsibilities of parenthood to an already hectic schedule.

He and wife Giuliana are preparing for their June 23 due date the best they can. The newlyweds have a baby name, a growing wardrobe of mini-outfits and a place to live. To truly be ready for little Kai Robert Peko's arrival, though, Kyle knows he must shift priorities.

The Oregon State defensive tackle's eligibility saga is nearly 20 months old. Shirked academics have forced him into now-or-never territory: one year to play one season. If Peko doesn't pass his spring and summer classes, he will leave here without ever playing on Saturdays.

"I was a kid thinking about myself before," Peko said after practice Thursday. "But when you've got two other people depending on you, it changes you."

Peko's physical prowess is unquestioned. At 6-foot-1, 317 pounds, he is a rare blend of brawn and quickness. Teammates have come to calling him, "Beast." He excels as a space eater, frustrating blockers long enough for defensive ends and linebackers to swarm the ball carrier.

But his pass-rushing ability separates him from peers. Peko tears into backfields with the speed of a player much lighter, leaving unsuspecting quarterbacks on their backs. Former Beavers defensive line coach Joe Seumalo spent two seasons telling the La Habra, California, native that he had "big plans" for him.

They were never realized. In August 2013, eight months after committing to OSU over the likes of Michigan State and Nebraska, Peko learned he hadn't qualified academically. He returned to Cerritos College in Norwalk, California, to earn necessary credits. With his junior-college eligibility exhausted, Peko tested Falcons starters from time to time on scout team.

Boise State, Texas Tech, Texas A&M and Wisconsin joined an extensive list of suitors. But Peko was loyal to Seumalo and head coach Mike Riley. He appreciated that they were intent on getting him eligible, that they continued to treat him like family.

"I put it all on me, man," Peko said. "There's a lot more I could've done (academically) at my junior college that I didn't."

He had hoped to participate in fall camp last year before the NCAA again deemed him ineligible. Last March, Peko moved into an off-campus apartment in hopes of joining the Beavers for spring practices.

He still hadn't qualified by OSU's season opener against Portland State. The rest of the year, Peko toiled on scout team. He impressed against starters throughout the week, only to watch home games from the Reser Stadium sideline.

The process wore on him. At times, he stopped answering calls from friends and former coaches. He apologized to Seumalo more than once for not properly repaying the assistant's trust in him.

"I felt like I was letting everybody down," Peko said.

Amid the setbacks, he grew close with fellow defensive tackle Jalen Grimble. The Miami transfer, out much of the season with a knee injury, often peppered Peko with a friendly reminder: "Next year is our year."

When the Beavers introduced Gary Andersen as their new head coach in December, Peko was back in La Habra for winter break. He shot Grimble a text message, asking for his impressions of the new boss.

The conversation evolved into their goals for 2015. In that moment, with iPhone screens as their medium, the two behemoths made a pact. Peko would get eligible and Grimble would get healthy.

Two weeks later, Peko married longtime girlfriend Giuliana Landini. She is finishing classes at a Los Angeles-area community college, but stays with Peko for about a week every other month.

This summer, after Kai's birth, Giuliana will transfer to OSU. Peko's days will become a blur of classes, diapers changes, bottle feedings, film sessions and practices.

He expects Giuliana to help keep him on task with schoolwork. Of course, there is no shortage of motivation. His goals -- a bachelor's degree and an NFL career -- are now about providing for his new family.

"He's grown up a lot," Grimble said. "Getting married matured him."

In his first meeting with Peko, Andersen hardly mentioned football. He referred to the lineman's academic plan and stressed the importance of grades before sport.

Peko relished Andersen's bluntness. He still feels the sting of failing Riley's staff, and he said he couldn't handle disappointing yet again.

Peko is taking 12 credits this spring and seven this summer. If he earns passing grades, he will make his Division-1 debut Sept. 4 against Weber State. Peko and Grimble could form one of the conference's most daunting duos up front.

"It's my last hurrah," Peko said, "so I've got to do it big."

Caleb Saulo, Oregon State Beavers linebacker, works to atone for past transgressions

By Connor Letourneau
The Oregonian April 13, 2015

CORVALLIS — Caleb Saulo eyes more than a starting linebacker spot. This spring, while acclimating to a new Oregon State coaching staff, the junior wants to repay teammates for supporting him through adversity.

Such an aim isn't measured in tackles or interceptions. Proving that past transgressions don't define him requires efforts mere practice attendees won't see: the community service on weekends, the extra hours poring over textbooks, the willingness to ease freshmen's learning curve.

"Deep down inside, we can make the right decisions just to set us up for success," Saulo said. "I just hope to show everybody who I really am."

In spring 2012, Saulo often drove the four hours from his Seattle-area home to watch Beavers practices. The two-star recruit had graduated from Kentlake High School early, only to learn scheduling conflicts would prevent him from enrolling for OSU's spring term. So he contemplated his future while watching his soon-to-be teammates labor through drills.

Saulo spent a redshirt year emulating upcoming defenses on scout team. In July, about a month before the start of fall camp 2013, he was reportedly arrested on a second-degree theft charge in a stolen bicycle case. The misdemeanor brought 12 months of probation and 10 days of work crew.

He apologized to coaches and fellow defensive players, promising to learn from his mistake. By midway through his redshirt freshman season, he was rotating in regularly for an injury-riddled linebacking corps. He started two games while D.J. Alexander was sidelined with stingers and finished with 32 tackles.

At the time, Saulo recalled, he was excited for what the next year would hold. He had shown flashes of his promise and seemed poised to at least earn more backup reps in 2014.

Last May, three days after OSU's Spring Showcase, Saulo garnered headlines. He had failed to appear in court after not meeting the conditions of his probation. Ac-

Caleb Saulo (35) started two games and registered 32 tackles as a redshirt freshman in 2013. Last season, Saulo played behind a trio of seniors but will once again push for a starting job in 2015.

cording to court documents obtained by the Corvallis Gazette-Times, Saulo was sent home with no credit on his last day of work crew for "intentionally damaging a tree on the courthouse lawn with a shovel."

The newfound attention gnawed at Saulo. As he dwelled on a host of what-ifs, his grades dipped. Would he be cut from the team? Would he have to return home and start anew?

Saulo credits the support of family and friends for helping him navigate that tumultuous period. His parents were stern, making sure he recognized the gravity of his actions. Teammates offered him encouraging words. "We all make mistakes," he remembers linebacker Rommel Mageo telling him one day. "It's just a matter of getting past it."

"When someone goes down, it's not like we're just going to look at them on the ground," Saulo said recently. "We're going to put our hand out and help them back up. That's one thing that I love about this team, just the whole brotherhood."

Last year, his production didn't meet his expectations. Saulo said that, after the May incident, coaches were skeptical about whether he was mentally prepared to contribute. He was relegated mostly to special teams and totaled just six tackles.

Over the past 11 months, the 6-foot-1, 222-pound Saulo has focused on developing himself off the field. He has approached his classes and Christian faith with renewed focus. About twice a month, he volunteers at the Boys & Girls Club of Corvallis.

Becoming a well-rounded person will only bolster his chances of earning a starting job this fall. A trio of first-team linebackers -- Alexander, Jabral Johnson and Michael Doctor -- has graduated, leaving a mix of former backups and newcomers to vie for playing time.

Saulo has spent much of the spring with the second unit. In Saturday's scrimmage, he made several highlight-caliber plays -- including a monstrous sack -- in his most extensive first-team work since Gary Andersen arrived on campus.

"I'm still going to fight," Saulo said. "I'm still going to show that I deserve my spot."

By Connor Letourneau
The Oregonian October 14, 2014

CORVALLIS — In mid-August, Dustin Stanton fell victim to terrible timing. A sprained right ankle near the end of fall camp derailed a feel-good Oregon State storyline.

The converted tight end was the favorite to start at right tackle. By the time Stanton returned from the ankle injury, though, Sean Harlow had solidified the job. Stanton was forced to bide time, preparing as he waited for another opportunity to surface.

It arrived Thursday against Utah. Right tackle Gavin Andrews, who had flipped positions with Harlow earlier in the week, trudged toward the sideline with a hairline fracture. Stanton plugged the right side, a spot he figures to occupy the next 2-4 weeks while Andrews recovers.

"It has been crazy," Stanton said of an up-and-down past two months.

Last spring, coaches were desperate for more options at left tackle. Stanton's combination of size, athleticism and versatility were an ideal fit, they thought. Within 24 hours, the 6-foot-4, 260-pound sophomore vaulted up the Beavers' depth chart. He went from battling for reps in a crowded tight ends corps, to sharing first-team snaps on the line.

Offensive line coach Mike Cavanaugh, seeking more cohesion, soon switched Stanton and Andrews. The assistant lauded Stanton's transition to right tackle, consistently conceding that he wanted the former three-star recruit to cement the spot.

Cavanaugh again reshuffled, moving Harlow from guard to tackle. The season opener loomed when Stanton returned. The limited time frame didn't afford much of a competition with Harlow.

So Stanton settled into the responsibilities of a backup. Over the Beavers' first five-plus games, he labored through mental reps. Weekdays were spent shuffling between team meetings and film study. Stanton's only game action entering Thursday came on the field-goal unit.

Ultimately, he was pleased with his fill-in job against the Utes. Stanton felt prepared, even while staring down a front seven that leads the nation in sacks.

"It's always good to get thrown into the fire like that," Stanton said. "It was a good kind of jumpstart to it."

This week, he has crammed Stanford film review into the pockets of time a hectic schedule affords. Stanton asks Andrews, a close friend, for pointers at times.

The objective, he said, is to help OSU weather arguably the Pac-12's toughest defense. Me-oriented aims will take care of themselves, Stanton understands.

Justin Strong (39) earned the nickel back role as a redshirt freshman in 2014 and started three games in that role. Strong is the Beavers' leading returning tackler with 56, including 5.0 tackles-for-loss. He is a leading candidate to start at one of the safety positions this fall.

Justin Strong follows brother Victor Butler to become early contributor for Beavers

By Gina Mizell
The Oregonian September 17, 2014

CORVALLIS — Justin Strong and his family were technically late.

But really, they were just in time to watch their favorite Oregon State defender make an unconventional-yet-opportunistic play.

Just as a 12-year-old Strong walked into California's Memorial Stadium in 2007, his older brother, future All-Pac-10 defensive end Victor Butler, picked off a second-quarter pass thrown by Golden Bears' quarterback Kevin Riley. Then Butler rumbled 30 yards to put the Beavers inside the red zone.

"That kind of just sparked everything for me," Strong recently recalled. "Being on a college field. Being in front of the whole crowd.

"That's the life I wanted to live."

These days, Strong isn't just living the college football life. He's living the OSU football life, following Butler to become a Beaver. And Strong, a safety, has been OSU's most impactful redshirt freshman so far in 2014, squeezing into nickel packages as part of a veteran-laden defense.

Strong grew up as one of seven children — five of them boys — in what he calls a competitive family. He and Butler would come home from football practice and stage additional games on the concrete in the front yard. All the kids would play various games in the living room, until their mother, Janis, kicked them out. But if Strong missed a tackle during a youth game, Mom would call for extra tackling drills at home.

"Everything was just competing," Strong said.

That all helped Strong product develop his fierce and physical playing style. He transitioned from linebacker to safety during his time at Rialto (California) Summit High, spending weekends focusing on keeping his eyes locked on the right spots in pass coverage.

Soon, smaller Division I schools like Nevada, Wyoming and San Diego State recognized his athleticism. Strong was all set to head to Reno. Then Oregon State became the last school to extend an offer, with coach Mike Riley playfully suggesting Strong could "keep it in the family."

Strong had certainly become plenty familiar with the Beavers program. He had tagged along for the 17-hour car rides to Corvallis for a couple of Butler's unofficial visits. He, of course, had attended several OSU games. Butler did not pressure Strong to become a Beaver, but talked about the competitiveness of playing in what was then the Pac-10.

"I kind of reshuffled everything on the (recruiting) board," Strong said, before committing to the Beavers following their 2012 win at UCLA.

Strong spent his redshirt season on the scout team, often a strange adjustment for first-year players. When he was not mimicking the Beavers' upcoming opponent on a particular play during practice, he'd sneak a glance at OSU starting safeties Ryan Murphy and Ty Zimmerman on the opposite field to try to pick up on their techniques and tendencies. When Strong stood on the sideline during home games in only a jersey, he vowed he would become a contributor in 2014.

An impressive performance during fall camp vaulted Strong into that role.

If the ball was in his area, he swarmed to it. He particularly bonded with Murphy, his neighbor, texting him at 8 a.m. on days off to go to the Valley Football Center to watch film before heading home to study some more. He and Butler also exchanged messages, with Butler telling his little brother that playing time was "out there if you want it."

By the end of August, Strong had elevated himself into a spot in the Beavers' nickel packages. The night before the opener against Portland State, Strong stared at the ceiling while lying in bed as he anticipated his collegiate debut. He called running out of the smoke "mind-blowing."

After all, it wasn't that long ago that Strong was in the Reser Stadium stands watching Butler as his father, Elvester, would ask if Strong would be able to handle the crowds. After recording three tackles and a pass breakup that afternoon against the Vikings, Strong believes he proved that he could.

"That was one of my great memories," Strong said of his collegiate debut.

So far in 2014, Strong has totaled six tackles (five solo) and two pass breakups -- highly productive numbers for a non-starter through two games. While taking the field for those nickel packages, he relishes the chance to play with the guys he could only glance at a season ago like Michael Doctor and Steven Nelson. And he embraces that he often enters the game in second- and third-and-long situations, where the defense's job is to officially squash the opponent's drive and get off the field.

That fearlessness and confidence, however, can sometimes be a detriment. He's not always disciplined enough to play his exact assignment. Yet he keeps getting on the field because of his savvy playmaking ability.

And as Strong continues carving out his own path at OSU over the next four seasons, he's got another upcoming task. He hopes to convince his younger brother Marcus, currently a high school junior, to become the next Beaver.

Got to keep it in the family, right?

"I'm not regretting it at all," Strong said. "I'm glad I had (Butler) to look up to. Watching him out there on Saturdays making big plays, I told myself I'm going to make everybody proud."

Bright Ugwoegbu a major part of Oregon State Beavers' new-look linebacking corps

By Gina Mizell
The Oregonian April 2, 2015

CORVALLIS — Darrell Songy saw this potential in Bright Ugwoegbu last fall.

As Oregon State scout team compadres, they'd challenge each other each practice. Who would snag an interception? Who would make the big play?

"That's when we kind of built our chemistry," Songy said. "We were always just competing."

Friendly competition, sure. But also preparation for when Songy and Ugwoegbu would need to step into much bigger roles in 2015.

Perhaps one of OSU's spring surprises has been the impressive play of the Beavers' new-look corps of linebackers, a position group that needed to fully replenish itself after losing a trio of senior starters in D.J. Alexander, Michael Doctor and Jabral Johnson. And Ugwoegbu is a big reason why, as the rangy redshirt freshman already looks primed for a starting job.

"I feel at home," Ugwoegbu said following Thursday's practice. "That was the plan. I came here, redshirted the first year, planned to learn from the three great seniors ...

"I took their craft, made it mine, and I'm using it to my advantage right now."

OSU has installed more 3-4 defensive packages since coming back from a two-week break, a move that shows trust in the talent and depth of a largely inexperienced group that also includes Songy, Rommel Mageo, Kyle Haley and Manase Hungalu, among others. So far, defensive coordinator Kalani Sitake has been pleased with Ugwoegbu's speed, athleticism and versatility to play inside or outside, along with his combination of attention to detail and willingness to defer to his natural gifts.

"He's a perfect example of a guy that's just gonna do what you ask him to do," Sitake said. "Then at times, (he'll ask), 'Well, Coach, how do I do this?' I say, 'I don't know, just make the play' ...

"The key is coming to (the) balance of being in good position to make the play. When you're able to give him a little bit more freedom on how they do it, I think it brings them back to what their natural instincts are, and Bright's done a real good job adjusting to what we ask him to do."

It's the latest step on a wide-ranging journey for Ugwoegbu.

He was born in London, lived in Nigeria for seven years and eventually wound up in Katy, Texas near Houston. Though soccer and basketball were his first sports, a cousin introduced Ugwoegbu to football and he was immediately drawn to the toughness required. By his senior season of high school, Ugwoegbu was a 6-foot-1, 200-pound prospect.

With a background in a high school football hotbed, Ugwoegbu wasn't intimidated by the size or speed of college athletes upon arriving in Corvallis. That confidence -- and ability -- showed early on, making him one of the top true freshman performers in fall camp and a possible contender to contribute on special teams.

But with the Beavers stocked with veterans at linebacker, coaches opted to give Ugwoegbu a season to develop on the scout team rather than burn a year of eligibility with limited playing time. There, he worked on his reaction time while matching up against the Beavers' first-team offense. He leaned on those veteran starters when he had questions. He added 10 pounds to his frame.

Now, Ugwoegbu is showing OSU's new coaching staff the same promise he displayed all last season. In the mold of a linebacker/safety hybrid, Ugwoegbu has the range and quickness to keep up with pass-catchers in coverage along with the power to bring down ball-carriers in the box. "Physicality" and "ferociousness" have become some of his favorite buzzwords.

"Every play can be made just by just intensity," he said. "You might do it wrong, but if you do it wrong and fast, you're gonna disrupt something."

Already this spring, Ugwoegbu feels he's made a strong case for a starting role. During the remaining seven workouts, his goal is to keep making momentum-swinging plays.

He and Songy will keep challenging each other, after all.

Dwayne Williams, Oregon State Beavers cornerback, adds weight in pursuit of starting job

By Connor Letourneau
The Oregonian April 7, 2015

CORVALLIS — For Dwayne Williams, eating is often as tedious a task as homework or taking out the garbage.

Adding weight is the undersized Oregon State cornerback's top offseason priority. So he downs three chocolate milks a day, a protein shake after every workout and overstuffed Chipotle burritos multiple times a week. Whether he is hungry is irrelevant.

"Sometimes I have to force it down," Williams said with a chuckle.

Since arriving on campus last summer, Williams has gained about eight pounds. The 5-foot-9, 175-pound redshirt freshman hopes to add another 5-10 pounds by fall camp. The extra muscle could surely help him win the physical one-on-one battles that populate the Pac-12. In a more immediate sense, though, it would bolster his chances at a starting job.

With less than two weeks until OSU's spring game, Williams and redshirt sophomore Dashon Hunt seem the top candidates to replace soon-to-be NFL draft pick Steven Nelson. The two have traded first-team reps opposite Larry Scott throughout the spring, with both offering their share of highlights.

"The goal is to play with the ones," Williams said. "But if that doesn't work out, I'll come off the bench. It doesn't matter."

A month before signing day 2014, Nevada and New Mexico State were Williams' top suitors. The Beavers found the speedy Killeen, Texas, native late in the process, and grew enamored with his speed and coverage instincts.

By the first week of fall camp, Williams was fielding a chorus of lauds from teammates for recording three interceptions. Mike Riley placed him on "redshirt alert," and Williams travelled with the Beavers as an insurance option.

But he preserved his redshirt. With Nelson's eligibility exhausted, Williams entered the spring eager to capitalize on opportunity. He began waking up early to lift with returning starter Larry Scott.

The former high school track star already boasts the quickness and playmaking ability to thrive in the Pac-12. Another layer of muscle could prove the difference between watching and playing come fall.

"I just knew I would have to wait on my opportunity," Williams said. "Whenever they put me in with the ones, I just have to take advantage of it and make plays whenever my time comes."

Dwayne Williams (29) was on the 'ready to play' list throughout the 2014 season. Williams spent spring drills playing mostly with the first string at cornerback and will continue to vie for the starting spot in the fall.

Oregon State commit Sam Kuschnick an unlikely two-sport star: football and rodeo

By Pete Christopher
The Oregonian May 6, 2015

During Silverton's semifinal win over Springfield just one week prior, Kuschnick tore his MCL, rendering his appearance in the title game unlikely. Despite the pain, Kuschnick played with the torn knee ligament and recorded 4.5 tackles in Silverton's championship loss to Hermiston.

Months later, Kuschnick recalled the injury with the same dispassionate straightforwardness as someone explaining their morning routine.

"It hurt but I don't know, I didn't want to sit out that game," Kuschnick shrugged. "If I wasn't helping, I was going to take myself out. I just fought through it I guess."

Kuschnick racked up the on-field accolades in his senior season. The 6-foot, 200-pound linebacker took home the 5A Defensive Player of the Year award, was named a first-team All-State running back and earned a preferred walk-on position with the Oregon State Beavers.

As his MCL began to heal in the spring, Kuschnick was already preparing to compete in his newfound passion: Bareback riding.

I checked with the doctor about three months after it happened, and he was really surprised at how it healed," Kuschnick said. "Usually it takes six months, but he said 'I don't know how you did it, but it's back to normal if you can take the pain.'"

A day at the rodeo

Around sunset on a warm April evening in Hermiston, about five months after his knee injury, Kuschnick walks from his family's trailer at the Umatilla County Fairgrounds into a sparsely filled stadium for the Intermountain High School Rodeo. Most of his fellow competitors roam the grounds socializing and practicing for their events, but not Kuschnick. By the time he reaches the bucking chute adjacent to the dirt arena, he climbs onto an eager bronco and straps in. Kuschnick does not like to spend too much time in the chutes prior to his ride. Within seconds, the gate swings open and the bronco storms into the arena.

The horse bucks Kuschnick around for eight seconds before tossing him unceremoniously to the dirt. Kuschnick stands up and dusts off his pants, shooting a stare across the arena at the bronco before heading back to the quiet of his trailer. With that, his day is done.

After hours of travel, preparation and waiting, and mere seconds on the horse's back, Kuschnick earns no score for the day. His ride is disqualified after he failed to "mark out" at the start of his ride.

"When they come out of the chute, you have to throw your feet up in front of their shoulders and saddle them there for one jump," Kuschnick explained afterwards. "I had my left foot up but my right foot bounced a little bit on the way out so that's not a mark out, it erases all the points after that."

A rider can have an otherwise perfect performance, but be disqualified out of the chutes, or be paired with a mellow horse by luck of the draw. It is the volatile nature of competitive bareback riding. Scores are given on a scale to 100, with 50 points depending on the performance of the horse and the other 50 on the performance of the rider.

"Sometimes they have a nice rhythm and run straight, sometimes they are trouble in the chute. She was a little anxious in the chute, she was moving around a lot and didn't want to stand still." Kuschnick said. "That's just part of the rodeo, you have to learn to deal with that. But that was a more powerful horse than I've been on."

Learning to ride

Kuschnick began riding bucking horses in the spring of 2014, and it did not take him long to start turning heads on a national level. After finishing second behind Brent Bannon of Crook County in the 2014 Oregon High School Rodeo state finals, Kuschnick earned a spot at the National High School Rodeo finals in Wyoming. He placed 39th out of 57 riders at the national competition with an average score of 58, just months after learning how to ride.

In his short career so far, Kuschnick has twice posted a personal-best score of 74. Had that 74 come at the national high school competition in Wyoming, it would have been the second-highest score of the event.

Kuschnick learned his riding technique from Brian Bain, a 10-year veteran bareback rider on the professional rodeo circuit.

"The first horse he rode, he went about four jumps then got bucked off hard. He hopped up and just had the biggest grin on his face," Bain said. "It was fun to see the light come on like that."

Bain has trained around 25 young riders before, only to see many of them fade away from the sport because of the physical toll it takes. At the professional level, Bain participates in around 100 rodeos per year all over the country.

Even at the high school level, the rough nature of the sport means bareback riders are scarce at rodeo events. At the Intermountain High School Rodeo in April, Kuschnick was one of just three riders competing. The majority of other events at that rodeo featured 10 competitors.

"It's sad, but it's kind of a dying sport," Kuschnick said. "People do it but don't train properly and end up getting hurt."

Ironically, it was injuries that helped draw Kuschnick to bareback riding in the first place. He previously competed in a different rodeo event, steer wrestling, which involves jumping from a galloping horse onto a steer and wrestling it to the ground. He stopped the sport, commonly known as "bulldogging," because of the wear and tear on his knees.

During his sophomore year at Silverton, he tried a more mainstream spring sport and joined Silverton's track and field team, but he broke his foot and couldn't finish the season.

"After that, I looked at (bareback riding) and thought it looked fun. I tried it and it came to me really quickly," Kuschnick said.

Balancing football and rodeo

"I was a little worried he would break a collar bone or something," Mannion said.

Mannion finally came around to giving Kuschnick his support after learning how good he had become at bareback riding.

"He was worried about it, but I came back and showed him how successful I was, and he was really supportive then," Kuschnick said.

Kuschnick's football training regimen translated well to the rodeo. He already had the raw strength, particularly the core and hip strength, required to ride bareback. From there, he quickly learned the proper techniques.

"They go hand in hand with one another. Like football, you have to use your head and can't just just outmuscle everything," Bain said. "There is a lot of technique to bareback riding."

Bain has no doubt that Kuschnick has the talent to compete professionally in bareback riding. But as he prepares to join Oregon State's football team in June, he will hang up his spurs and hat indefinitely. Kuschnick leaves the door open for a return to bareback riding after his football career, but makes it clear that his football career takes precedent.

Immediately following Silverton's state championship loss in November, that football career was still an unknown. It wasn't until well after that game that Oregon State began to show interest.

"I didn't really talk to them until a couple months ago, I sent them my highlights," Kuschnick said. "They said 'We'd definitely love to have you play here, you're on the camp roster.'"

Until the door closes on a football career, Kuschnick will continue to chase that dream. As he has already showed, even injuries will not necessarily slow him down. But if football does not pan out, Kuschnick has another passion to pursue.

Gary Andersen, who led Wisconsin to the 2014 Big Ten Conference's West Division title and a berth in the conference's championship game, was named the 28th head coach of the Oregon State football team on December 10, 2014.

Andersen is 30-9 in his last three years as a head coach, highlighted by an 11-win season at Utah State in 2012 and a 10-win season at Wisconsin in 2014, where he was named a semifinalist for the Maxwell Football Club Coach of the Year for the second consecutive season. He brings to Corvallis a 49-38 overall record in seven years as a head coach and has posted four consecutive winning seasons.

He owns an 8-2 bowl-game record as an assistant or head coach, and was 2-0 in BCS bowls as an assistant.

Andersen is the total package. In addition to winning conference championships and bowl games, his student-athletes are also very successful off the field, earning numerous conference and national all-academic honors. Wisconsin finished among the top 10 in the country for Academic Progress Rate (APR) in 2013 and for 2014 led the country with nearly a perfect score.

Andersen led Wisconsin to a 10-3 record in '14, a West Division championship, and a berth in the Jan. 1 Outback Bowl. Running back Melvin Gordon, the country's leading rusher and scorer, earned Big Ten Offensive Player of the Year honors, won the Doak Walker Award as the nation's top running back and was a finalist for the Heisman Trophy. Wisconsin set numerous school records for offensive production during both of his seasons in Madison, including for rushing yards (4,482). His defense ended the year No. 4 in the country for fewest yards allowed with a 294.1 yards per game average and ranked No. 21 in total offense at 468.9 yards per contest.

Gordon was one of four Badgers to earn first-team all-league honors. Four more were second-team selections and six earned honorable mention; all five starting linemen and all four starting linebackers were honored. Also, 28 student-athletes earned Big Ten Conference all-academic honors.

Andersen had a spectacular debut at Wisconsin in 2013 after leaving Utah State, where he coached from 2009-12. He was a semifinalist for the Maxwell Coach of the Year Award after the Badgers went 9-4 overall and 6-2 in the Big Ten. Wisconsin ranked No. 22 by the Associated Press and No. 21 in the USA Today coaches poll. The Badgers ranked No. 7 nationally in total defense, No. 18 in total offense and No. 6 in scoring defense. It set school records for total offense (480.8 ypg), rushing yards (3,689) and yards-per-carry (6.62).

Senior linebacker Chris Borland earned first-team All-American honors; offensive lineman Ryan Groy was a third-team selection. Borland, Groy and wide receiver Jared Abbrederis earned first-team Big Ten all-conference honors; 11 other Badgers earned second team or honorable mention honors.

Borland was also the Nagurski-Woodson Big Ten Defensive Player of the Year; the Butkus-Fitzgerald Big Ten Linebacker of the Year; a finalist for the Chicago Tribune's Silver Football award, and was one of five Badgers selected in the 2014 NFL draft.

Andersen came to Wisconsin from Utah State, where he completely revitalized a program that had won just six games in the three previous seasons. The Aggies were 4-8 in Andersen's first two years, improved to 7-6 in his third year and then won a school-record 11 games and the Western Athletic Conference title in 2012. It was their first outright league championship since 1936.

Utah State subsequently routed Toledo 41-15 in the Famous Idaho Potato Bowl for its first bowl victory since 1993. It was ranked No. 16 in the final AP poll, its first Top 25 appearance since 1972. Andersen was named WAC Coach of the Year and was a finalist for the Eddie Robinson Coach of the Year award.

The Aggies ranked eighth nationally in scoring defense and 25th in rushing offense (204.1 ypg). Running back Robert Turbin, now with the Seattle Seahawks, was the WAC Offensive Player of the Year and 17 Aggies earned all-WAC postseason honors.

USU succeeded academically as well, as 18 Aggies earned WAC all-academic honors in 2012 and in 2011. McCade Brady was named a 2012 CoSIDA Academic All-American and USU ranked ninth in the nation for academic performance by the Academic Bowl Championship Series.

A native of Salt Lake City and a 1986 graduate of the University of Utah with a degree in political science, Andersen was a junior-college All-American center at Ricks College in 1984, and a letterman at Utah in 1985 and 1986.

He began his coaching career in 1988 as the assistant head coach/offensive coordinator at Southeastern Louisiana. He then assisted at Ricks College (1989-92) and Idaho State (1992-94) before becoming the head coach at Park City (Utah) High School in 1994-95.

He returned to college in 1995-96 as Northern Arizona's assistant head coach before returning to his alma mater in 1997.

Andersen was as assistant at Utah from 1997-2000 and the Utes' assistant head coach from 2001-02. He then accepted his first head coaching job and led Southern Utah to a 4-7 record before returning again to Utah in 2004 as an assistant coach; the Utes went 12-0 and blasted Pittsburgh 35-7 in the Fiesta Bowl that season.

Andersen was promoted to assistant head coach/defensive coordinator in 2005. He was Utah's defensive coordinator under Meyer in 2008, when the Utes beat Alabama 31-17 in the Sugar Bowl. He was a finalist for the Broyles Award, given to the country's top assistant coach, after Utah ended the year No. 2 in the country with a 13-0 record.

Andersen and his wife, the former Stacey Lambert, have three sons, Keegan and twins Chasen and Hagen. Keegan played tight end at Utah State for his father and is currently a graduate assistant at OSU after serving in the same capacity at Wisconsin in 2014. Both Chasen and Hagen are football student-athletes at Utah State, Chasen is a linebacker and Hagen is a wide receiver.

Gary Andersen is exactly what Oregon State needed in its new coach

By Lindsay Schnell
SI.com December 12, 2014

CORVALLIS, Ore. — Gary Andersen paused, and an embarrassed, unsure smile crept across his lips.

"What'd I say?" he asked the 300-plus Oregon State supporters crowded into the Valley Football Center, many of whom had gasped audibly seconds earlier. Then, it dawned on him.

Yeah, in this area the word "Ducks" is not a welcome one, even if Andersen was using it in a common way, as in "Get all my ducks in a row."

He laughed, then corrected his error. "Go Beavs!" A quick learner.

Andersen on Friday was introduced as Oregon State's football coach, eight days after veteran Mike Riley shocked the college football world by announcing he was leaving for traditional power Nebraska. Chatter around the country was that nothing would be more surprising than Riley leaving … and then the Beavers topped it themselves, announcing that Andersen was coming to Corvallis after two years in Wisconsin. On the surface, it seems crazy to leave a top three Big Ten job for a bottom three Pac-12 job. But maybe Corvallis has more to sell than everyone -- including me -- gives it credit for.

On Friday, Andersen talked a lot about Oregon State being "right:" Right place, right time, right fit. It's a good atmosphere for him and his family, he said, a description inevitably always associated with Oregon State. Yes, many programs preach being "family-friendly" but they live it in Corvallis, where coaches' kids attend the same daycare, football coaches are regulars at women's basketball and women's gymnastics events, and football coaches' children are as likely to be hanging out in the offices as players. It was a standard set by Riley, followed by every other program. OSU needed someone to fit in that world, but they also needed a jolt.

Before he dug into the coaching search, Oregon State athletic director Bob De Carolis met informally with Pat Casey (baseball), Wayne Tinkle (men's basketball) and Scott Rueck (women's basketball) and asked for their thoughts on the "DNA" it takes to win at Oregon State. They talked about being down to earth and friendly. "Hangability," was important, Rueck said, because in a small town, you have to be able to hang out with everyone. Ego was off limits, because it doesn't work in a city this size, where there's nowhere to hide. But they were also adamant that they wanted someone who wanted to be here.

"People can be as positive as they want or as negative as they want," says Casey, who led the Beavers to back-to-back NCAA baseball titles in 2006 and '07. "Yeah, we're not a great metropolis. But by the time we get done thinking about that, the season's over and we've gotten knocked on the head. We have to create our own environment about who we think we are. If we think we're less than … then that's who we're going to be.

"Yeah, we don't have an abundance [of money]. You have to be a guy who likes challenges. But we've had success here."

It's true that Oregon State isn't rolling in cash. But two days before Andersen's presser, De Carolis and president Ed Ray announced a $42 million renovation to the Valley Football Center, a step forward in the recruiting war. They have already secured $25 million in donations but just to be clear, those were sewn up this past summer, when Riley was still coach. The donations did not come after Riley left, as some have speculated. They brought Andersen to campus for $2.45 million, a decent chunk more than they were paying Riley. The administration is digging its heels in, and serving notice they intend to be a player in a loaded conference.

Andersen accepted the job sight unseen, convinced Oregon State has "everything you need to be successful." He had been here once before, in 2007 when he was the defensive coordinator at Utah. He lost.

In the game of "winning the press conference," Andersen thoroughly dominated. He used the word "aggressive" so many times I lost count, talking about being "aggressive in how we take the field, how we play defense, how we work in the classroom, how we attack our social life." I'm not sure what that last one means, but it seemed to resonate with fans, who watched a sometimes-lifeless team limp around Reser Stadium this season.

"Being good is not good enough," Ray said, as fans nodded emphatically. When he met Andersen, Ray had a five-minute pitch about why Oregon State was a good job. It included the family-first attitude, new, improved and rising facilities, the beautiful Willamette Valley and a college town where almost everyone loves, cares and wants to know what's going on with the Beavers. Ray didn't even get through half of his pitch before Andersen said he was in.

De Carolis and Ray didn't believe hiring a sitting head coach was necessary. Ray pointed out "that Chip Kelly guy" turned out to be pretty good, and no one had heard of him when he showed up in Eugene. The fact that Andersen comes with a winning pedigree is a bonus. Before Wisconsin, he resurrected Utah State from obscurity, taking a program that had won six games in the three seasons prior to his arrival and delivering a conference championship in 2012, his fourth year. The Aggies finished the season ranked No. 16 in the final Associated Press poll. On Friday, Andersen likened Logan, Utah -- the home of Utah State -- to Corvallis. Without being cocky, he basically said he knows how to win in a small town.

The Beavers graduated arguably the best quarterback in program history, and lost nine defensive starters. But the roster is built for anything to be installed offensively, from pro style to zone read. Andersen believes his quarterback must win with "his arm, his leg and his mind" adding that a quarterback who can make plays with his legs, or at least extend plays when the pocket breaks down, is critical for college offenses in today's era. This is welcome news to a fan base that had grown weary of the old school traditional pro-style.

There will continue to be speculation and questions about why Andersen left Madison after just two years. We likely won't ever get the full story. Andersen called Barry Alvarez "a Hall of Fame coach and a Hall of Fame athletic director." Interpret what you will about him not including "Hall of Fame boss" into that answer. It doesn't matter that outsiders say this is one of the toughest jobs in the Pac-12. Andersen doesn't see it that way.

That's exactly what Oregon State needed.

By Gina Mizell
The Oregonian December 12, 2014

CORVALLIS, Ore. — When the news hit last week that Nebraska had hired its new football coach, the coaches' offices at Wisconsin started buzzing.

"I didn't really care who Nebraska hired at that point," Andersen said. "I was much more worried about who Oregon State was going to hire."

It turned out to be Andersen himself, as he was formally introduced at a spectacle of a press conference Friday afternoon at the Valley Football Center following the Beavers' surprising announcement of Andersen's hiring two days prior.

Andersen praised his previous stop, calling Wisconsin an "unbelievable institution" and Badgers legend Barry Alvarez a "Hall-of-Fame AD." Yet Andersen continuously mentioned OSU and Corvallis as the right "fit" for him and his family, pointing to why the Beavers were able to lure away a proven coach from a perennial Big Ten contender.

"There's fits in life and there's opportunities that come your way," Andersen said. "And when you see a fit and you look at it and you get that feeling … there's no doubt this is where I'm supposed to be."

Friday marked Andersen's second visit to Corvallis, following a 2007 loss to the Beavers as Utah's defensive coordinator. But he was charmed by the town, comparing it to Logan, Utah, where he spent four seasons as Utah State's head coach. So he always eyeballed the OSU job as one he'd consider if the opportunity ever came up. Ask his wife, Stacey, Andersen assured, and she'll tell you the same thing.

There was just one problem, Andersen thought.

Riley's unexpected bolt for Lincoln changed all that. And it turns out OSU athletic director Bob De Carolis was already quite aware of Andersen, too.

De Carolis was first introduced to an Andersen squad in 2011, flipping on some Utah State film when the opportunity to schedule the Aggies arose.

"No way we're scheduling these guys," De Carolis thought.

"It's always in the back of your mind — the 'short list' type of thing," De Carolis said. "You always kind of keep it there."

When De Carolis began his search for the next Beavers coach late last week, he heard through contacts in the industry that Andersen might be looking for another coaching opportunity.

"Once we confirmed it," De Carolis said, "We said, 'We're not gonna do any better than this. This guy's good.' Then it was, pedal-to-the-metal, 'Let's go get him.' "

De Carolis went through Andersen's agent to set up a meeting for Tuesday. De Carolis and deputy athletic director Mark Massari flew out of Eugene to Rockford, Illinois, about 75 miles from Madison.

That Andersen made the 90-minute drive first showed Massari the coach was serious. Then Andersen whipped out a policy manual De Carolis gestured was about one or two inches thick. Ten or 12 pages alone, De Carolis estimated, lined out the expectations for Andersen's players.

As Andersen walked De Carolis and Massari through the manual, it illustrated the coach was organized and driven. Andersen's mixture of sense of humor and intensity also showed throughout the conversation.

"After about the first 15 minutes," De Carolis said, "I was like, 'OK, if I was 17, I'm gonna play for this dude.' That's how I felt. So it was a great feel right off the top."

Andersen, meanwhile, did not feel the need to visit Corvallis, instead trusting De Carolis' vision for the program and athletic department. When the offer was extended shortly after, Andersen accepted on the spot.

By Wednesday afternoon, OSU had announced its hire. Around 9:30 a.m. Friday, Andersen was sporting a black and gray Beavers jacket as he stepped off a private plane in Corvallis.

After a tour of OSU's facilities, Andersen stood before a standing-room only crowd — complete with cheerleaders and band members — sporting an orange and black striped tie. After the press conference, various players politely hung around to meet their new coach. Later that day, Andersen was scheduled to meet with the assistant coaches Riley did not take to Nebraska and host a recruit on an official visit. Though Andersen hopes to assemble his staff soon, his first team meeting — where he'll again pull out that policy manual for a detailed read — will not take place until after winter break.

Andersen does not care if his move from Wisconsin to OSU makes little sense to outsiders.

This place and this program, as he stated throughout his first public appearance as the Beavers' new coach, just fit.

"This is just where I believe I was told to go," Andersen said before shrugging his shoulders. "A lot of people think that's strange and weird, but that's how I work."

By Ted Miller
ESPN.com March 31, 2015

New Oregon State coach Gary Andersen isn't taking it slow in Corvallis, Oregon. He, his wife and his dog plan to move into a new house they've built in early June. There's nothing methodical or temporary about that.

As for the Beavers, he wants to establish a clear pecking order at quarterback as quickly as possible, which runs counter to a lot of coaches, who want to nurse the intrigue around a competition until the last possible moment.

That means it's time for sophomore Luke Del Rio, freshman Seth Collins and redshirt freshman Nick Mitchell to tighten their chinstraps and make plays as spring practices resumed this week after spring break. While Andersen was unhappy with what he saw during Tuesday's workout -- "Our ability to throw and catch is no where near where it needs to be," he said -- he expects one guy to step to the fore.

"I don't think you can go through a summer saying 'Here are our three quarterbacks, we'll see what happens in the fall'," he said.

Andersen's defense? He started with a 4-3, the Beavers' scheme under Mike Riley and coordinator Mark Banker, for the first week of spring practices. But after reviewing things during the break, he and coordinator Kalani Sitake, who used a 4-3 at Utah, are implementing what appears to be a 3-4 base, which is what Andersen, a defensive specialist, ran at Wisconsin.

"To get our best speed on the field, we're going to spend a lot of time in an odd front," he said. "We will have the ability to play an even front as we continue to grow." It should be no surprise then that when asked for spring standouts, Andersen named three young, athletic linebackers: Redshirt freshman Bright Ugwoegbu, JC transfer Kyle Haley and Darrell Songy, who was suspended last season. Andersen also took note of safety Cyril Noland-Lewis and corner Larry Scott. Scott is one of just two returning starters as the Beavers are almost completely renovating their defense from the ground up.

Yet the transition on offense might feel more extreme for Beavers fans, who have grown accustomed to a traditional pro-style attack while teams across the country, particularly in the Pac-12, switched to up-tempo spread offenses. Prototypical NFL drop-back passers such as Matt Moore, Sean Canfield and Sean Mannion passed for a combined 25,000 yards after breaking a huddle for the Beavers over the previous decade. Now Andersen wants a quarterback who can speed up the tempo, spread the field with the passing game, and run the option.

Still, Andersen isn't all-in with tempo or lining up with four receivers and a single running back. He's not afraid to huddle, and his first priority is running the football, whether that's with one running back, two running backs, a tight end and/or an H-back. In other words, he likes the idea of a defense preparing for a lot of possibilities.

"What causes a lot of problems?" he asked rhetorically. "It's not if you do just one thing on offense. If you go fast all the time, it can cause issues but it's not as hard in my opinion [for a defense] as going fast sometimes and slower sometimes and potentially even doing a huddle in different scenarios."

What is clear is that the offense is going to be QB-centric. That's why Andersen hopes he can anoint a guy soon, perhaps even after a big scrimmage next week.

As for the offense as a whole, he likes his experienced offensive line, is hopeful that promising receivers Jordan Villamin and Victor Bolden will take the next step, and is intrigued by redshirt freshman tight end/H-back/running back Ryan Nall -- "His athleticism shows up basically daily."

Of course, building a program isn't all scheme, personnel and Xs and Os. Andersen is replacing the entrenched personality of Mike Riley, who's folksy ways were quite unique at the FBS level. Andersen is demanding. He's showing some tough love. He wants to tighten the screws a bit. That will challenge some players, particularly veterans who've grown accustomed to the old ways.

At the same time, he wants to cultivate the camaraderie and sense of connection most coaches want for their teams. That figures to take more time than figuring out who starts behind center.

"You want to build a family, but it doesn't happen overnight," he said. "It takes some time and comes with some adversity, with some good days and bad days."

Kalani Sitake (pronounced ka-lah-nee sih-TA-kay) was officially introduced to the Oregon State community Dec. 23, 2014 as the assistant head coach/defensive coordinator.

Sitake spent the previous 10 seasons at Utah, the last three as the Utes' assistant head coach/defensive coordinator. For much of the 2014 season Utah was ranked in the nation's top 25 and defeated Colorado State in the Royal Purple Las Vegas Bowl. Utah's defense was among the best in the Pac-12 Conference ranking second for yards allowed and passing defense, and leading the NCAA for overall sacks with 55 and finishing sixth for tackles for loss per game with 7.9.

He became the first Tongan defensive coordinator at the Football Bowl Subdivision when he was appointed in 2009, replacing current Beaver head coach Gary Andersen who took the head coaching position at Utah State. Utah played in four bowl games, winning three during Sitake's stint as defensive coordinator. The Utes also finished in the top 25 of the NCAA's defensive statistical categories 20 times.

Sitake coached numerous Pac-12 and Mountain West Conference honorees, including 2011 Morris Trophy (top Pac-12 lineman) Star Lotulelei and 2014 recipient Nate Orchard. He also mentored 12 NFL Draft picks during his time in Salt Lake City, including as a defensive coordinator 12 all-league players and three freshmen All-Americans. He helped Utah win seven of eight bowl games the Utes appeared in.

He began his career at Utah in 2005 as the linebackers coach, a position he would hold through the 2008 season. Utah was 13-0 in '08, the nation's only undefeated team, and beat Alabama in the Sugar Bowl. The Utes ended that memorable campaign No. 2 in the country.

Following his promotion to defensive coordinator in 2009 he helped Utah enter the Pac-12 for the 2011 season. In the first year of Pac-12 play the Ute defense led the high-octane offensive conference in four statistical categories, including scoring defense.

In addition to working alongside Coach Andersen at Utah, the two first joined forces in 2003 at Southern Utah when Andersen was the head coach and Sitake the running backs/tight ends coach. Sitake began his coaching career in 2001 as the defensive backs/special teams coach at Eastern Arizona and moved to a graduate assistant position for defense at BYU in 2002.

Sitake played fullback at BYU over a career that spanned seven years, including two serving on an LDS Church mission. He played as a freshman in 1994 and then started from 1997-2000. He was named BYU's Football Scholar Athlete of the Year in '98, Impact Player of the Year in '99, and team captain and the most valuable running back in '00. He signed a free agent contract with the Cincinnati Bengals following the 2001 season, but was forced to quit the game due to a back injury.

He is a 2000 graduate of BYU with a bachelor of arts degree in English. He and his wife Timberly have two daughters Skye and Sadie, and a son, Kelaokalani (KK).

Getting to Know Kalani Sitake

By Gina Mizell
The Oregonian March 2, 2015

My first football memory is ... When I got into tackle football (around age 13), one of my experiences is that is they had lightweight, middleweight and heavyweight, and I didn't qualify for the weight limit (for lightweight) because I was really small. They told me I'd have to go a grade down, and my dad said, "No, he's playing heavyweight." My dad signed a waiver, put me in heavyweight and I played with the big boys and loved every minute of it. The best thing that ever happened to me. That's just how my dad raised me ... I remember everybody's face like, "Wow, what are they doing?" and I remember not feeling nervous at all. I was ready to go. My dad gave me that much confidence in myself. (I said), "Give me my helmet, I'm ready to go to practice."

I knew I wanted to be a coach when ... I was told I couldn't play anymore. I really wanted to play. I got banged up a little bit in college and had some surgeries that made it difficult for me to finish. And then when I finished, I had an opportunity to go as a free agent to Cincinnati and couldn't get myself healthy enough to play. So when it was cut off for me, it was kind of like, "OK, go back to work," and I didn't like it. I had an opportunity to coach at a JC (Eastern Arizona), and I thought "OK, let's see what this is about," and I took it and it was fun. It was the best thing. No money in it, and I loved every part of it. So I just decided to make that my career.

My biggest football influence is ... LaVell Edwards was huge for me. My coaching staff at BYU was awesome. Lance Reynolds, a guy named Dick Felt ... and then Gary Andersen and Kyle Whittingham. Those are probably my major influences in football. I've always said this, I'm a product of listening to the right people. I was just a sponge. I sat there and listened to Norm Chow -- that's another one -- and LaVell Edwards and watched them and carefully saw how they interacted with people and I soaked it all in. I did nothing but listen and try to act like they did, and I still try to do that.

My biggest non-football influence is ... My dad is my No. 1 influence off the field. He's been my guy. He basically raised me.

I would describe my coaching style as ... You know what's weird is that I don't know what I do sometimes. Sometimes I watch the games and I'm like, "Oh, man, I can't believe I did that," cheering and all that stuff. Nothing's rehearsed. I just act. I'm really passionate about it. And I think this whole coaching staff's like that. You'll see that Derrick Odum, myself, Chad Kauha'aha'a and Ilaisa Tuiaki will be really juiced up and excited to play and to coach. The best part of my day, other than seeing my family, is being on that field with those guys. So my coaching style is just getting those guys going. I'm somewhat of a cheerleader, but I try to be positive and let the young men know how much I care about the game. And also let them know how much I care about how my coaches that I coach with, how much I love them. I think that when they see that with their own eyes, I think that will carry over to the way they play the game and how they act with their teammates. So I just enjoy the whole experience. This is fun.

I decided to come to OSU because ... The biggest factor was Coach Andersen. That was No. 1. And in addition to that, it was also linking up with my other guys that I've worked with -- Chad Kauha'aha'a, Derrick Odum and Ilaisa Tuiaki. We've all worked together with Gary, so we're really familiar with each other. Even other guys on the staff -- Kevin McGiven were graduate assistants at BYU together, so we all have connections all over. I think that just the possibility of that Coach Andersen was doing that, working on that with everyone, I just thought that was a great opportunity to be here with him and learn from him and the things he's done as a head coach. In addition to that, it's a great spot. I don't know, there's just something endearing about Corvallis to me and my family. Most of my family is in the state of Utah, but it just felt like a good time for me to be here. I've had a great connection with this place here, too. Whether it was Coach (Dennis) Erickson, that was a mentor of mine, as well. I grew very close to him at Utah. And just the respect that we've had being on the other side, being an opponent for Oregon State and having to defend Lyle (Moevao) and the Rodgers brothers. That's going back to, what, '07? There was just something that was really nice about this place that I thought kind of attracted me to, not just the school, but the community itself. It just kind of gelled with me ... with all the good things that are happening at Utah, I still felt like (OSU) was a good place for me to be at. I left some really good people, too. Some really good friends and some great players that I was able to recruit there and coach and be close to. I think life is all about changes and being able to spread your wings a little bit and test the waters. I could live in Utah for the rest of my life and always wonder what it would be like if I had turned down this opportunity. I've turned down others, but this was just one that, to me, it just made sense.

Something you'd be surprised to know about me is ... I just like to know people. I think I get that from my dad. I'll be distracted and sometimes we'll sit down and talk to a stranger for a long time, about an hour or so. If you're flying on an airplane, you probably don't want to sit next to me, because it's hard for me not to just reach out to get to know people. I was super shy back in the day and football helped me kind of overcome that.

My first impression of my defense is ... It's hard to know when you don't have pads on, so we need to hit a little bit. We need to get dirty and get a little nasty in there with the pads and see who can hang in there. But from what I see on film, these guys aren't afraid of contact. So it's practicing smart. A lot of them are inexperienced, so in order to get that type of experience, you have to go through the battle. You have to try simuate a game-type of environment on the field, and that's what we're gonna try to do. I think competition brings out the best in guys, and I'm excited about it. Replacing starters, that's part of football. You have to do that every year. So next year, everyone's gonna say, "Well, you guys return a bunch of guys." So there's not gonna be any excuses. We're gonna be fine and our guys are gonna play tough defense. We're gonna try to impose our will and try to do our things that we want as a defense ... so far they're buying in. How many wins does that translate to? I don't know, but I like our chances. I like where we're sitting. I like the position that we're at, so just don't be surprised when things happen.

Dave Baldwin is one of the most knowledgeable coaches in college football and brings 36 seasons of experience to Oregon State. He is the Beavers' offensive coordinator under first-year OSU head coach Gary Andersen. However, it's not the first time the two coaches have teamed up on the same staff as Baldwin was Andersen's offensive coordinator at Utah State for the 2009-11 seasons.

Prior to arriving in Corvallis, Baldwin spent the 2012-14 seasons at Colorado State as the team's offensive coordinator with responsibilities with the tight ends and quarterbacks. He was named CSU's interim head coach Dec. 4, 2014 and led the Rams to the Royal Purple Las Vegas Bowl.

During the 2014 season, CSU was the only team in the Football Bowl Subdivision (FBS) to have a 4,000-yard passer, 1,700-yard receiver and 1,200-yard rusher. CSU won nine straight games during the '14 season and was ranked in the Associated Press Top 25. Rams wide receiver Rashard Higgins earned Associated Press First Team All-America honors after breaking every CSU single season record with an NCAA leading 1,750 yards. Rams quarterback Garrett Grayson was among the top players at his position throughout the season and was selected the Mountain West Conference Offensive Player of the Year.

The 2013 season saw CSU post equally impressive offensive numbers, including single season points (507) and yards per game (470.8). The Rams won eight games, their most in 12 years, including defeating Washington State in the Gildan New Mexico Bowl. The Rams scored 50-plus points five times and was the only team in the FBS with a 3,500-yard passer and 1,500-yard rusher. The Rams ranked in the top 25 for total offense and scoring.

The 2012 Rams had the second-biggest improvement in the FBS for scoring offense from 100th to 22nd. Baldwin was nominated for the Broyles Award for the last two years at CSU, honoring the nation's top assistant coach.

While at Utah State, he helped the Aggies to numerous school records for offense. In addition to his offensive coordinator roles, he also at various times coached the quarterbacks, tight ends and wide receivers. He was named the Western Athletic Conference's Offensive Coordinator of the Year in 2011 after helping the Aggies post their first winning season since 1996 and helping the program to its first bowl game in 14 years.

Baldwin shifted to Utah State from New Mexico, where he spent two seasons (2007-08) as offensive coordinator. In 2007, Baldwin's offense was one of only three FBS programs to produce a 3,000-yard passer, a 1,000-yard rusher and two 1,000-yard receivers. The Lobos defeated Nevada in the New Mexico Bowl for the school's first bowl victory since 1961.

In 2006, Baldwin orchestrated the largest comeback in NCAA history, on Oct. 21 at Northwestern. Down 38-3 with 9:54 left in the third quarter, the Spartans put up 38 unanswered points in a 41-38 triumph. That season, future NFL QB Drew Stanton, a Unitas Award finalist, set a school record with a .642 completion percentage and finished second in school history in career completions, passing yards and total offense.

Baldwin's offenses produced the first two 3,000-yard passers in MSU history: Stanton in 2004 and Jeff Smoker in 2003. Smoker, in Baldwin's first Spartans season, threw for a school-record 3,395 yards. In 2004, Stanton became the first QB in MSU annals to throw for 300 yards and rush for 100 in the same game.

Before moving to Michigan State, Baldwin guided the offense and coached quarterbacks at Baylor for one season (2002). He served the 2001 campaign as offensive coordinator at Cincinnati, helping the 7-5 Bearcats to the Motor City Bowl.

Baldwin's résumé includes 10 years of head coaching experience at San Jose State (1997-2000) and Cal State Northridge (1996), plus five years as a head coach at the junior-college level. His 58-60 career record includes a 31-21 JC mark, an 18-27 record at SJSU and a 9-12 ledger at Northridge. While at SJS, the Spartans beat local rival Stanford three times and ended TCU's 12-game winning streak (nation's longest at the time) in 2000. The Spartans also won their first game over a ranked team in seven seasons, when they beat No. 24 Air Force.

Baldwin moved up the head coaching ranks after a two-year stint (1994-95) as head coach at his alma mater, Cal State Northridge. In 1996, he led Northridge to a 7-4 record, its first winning campaign in four years.

A successful junior-college head coach in the highly competitive California system from 1990-95, he spent one year (1995) at Santa Rosa, which finished 8-3 to earn a berth in the Lions Bowl. He spent the prior four seasons (1990-94) at the reins of Santa Barbara City College, earning 1991 California Community College Region III Coach of the Year after a 9-2 season and an appearance in the Shrine Potato Bowl.

Baldwin's first head coaching mentor was Jack Elway, under whom he spent 10 years (1979-88) as an assistant coach. After Baldwin launched his career as a wide receivers and tight ends coach at his alma mater, Cal State Northridge, Elway took over as Matadors head coach prior to the 1979 campaign and made Baldwin his first defensive backs coach.

Baldwin then followed Elway to San Jose State, where Baldwin served as wide receivers coach from 1980-83, and to Stanford, where Baldwin held the same position from 1984-87 until Elway promoted him to passing-game coordinator in 1988.

The 1986 Stanford team finished 8-4 to earn an invitation to the Gator Bowl, the program's only postseason berth in the 80s.

During his four-year tenure as an assistant at San Jose State where his offensive coordinator was Dennis Erickson, the Spartans had three winning seasons, including the 1981 Pacific Coast Athletic Association championship and a berth in the California Bowl.

Before entering coaching, Baldwin preceded Elway and his future Hall of Fame son, John, in Southern California. In fact, Baldwin played football at Granada Hills High School in the early 1970s before the younger Elway's arrival at that school, and subsequent college career at Stanford. Baldwin left Granada Hills to play at Cal State Northridge, where he earned three letters.

A 1978 graduate of Northridge, Baldwin owns a bachelor's degree in physical education and health recreation. He also earned a master's in physical education administration from St. Mary's College in 1986.

Born March 22, 1955, in Denver, Colo., Baldwin and his wife Kathleen have three children. Their son, Sean, married his wife Lindsi in 2008. They also have a son, Ryan, and a daughter, Keiley.

Getting to Know Dave Baldwin

By Gina Mizell
The Oregonian January 14, 2015

My first football memory is ... Zeke Bratkowski, the Green Bay Packers quarterback, was working out at Cal State Northridge and my brother and I were going through. Something was said, and all of a sudden, my brother's playing catch with him. I'm this little guy, and now I'm starting to play catch with him and I'm going, "Wow, this is an NFL quarterback and I'm playing catch." Just how neat a guy he was just to play catch.

I knew I wanted to be a coach when ... It goes back to my youth as a Pop Warner player. My coaches were great influences on me in how they taught me to be disciplined. And at the same time, they talked about how intelligent you had to be to play the game. They challenged me as a young man. I always told my dad I wanted to be a football coach and he said, "Pursue your passion, but get an education." So I knew as a young, young man I wanted to be a coach. When I was in high school, I was coaching Pop Warner teams.

My biggest football influence is ... Jack Elway, no doubt about it. He's my mentor. I played for the man. I coached with him 11 years. He's just an incredible man. There's a reason why John was successful. There's no doubt about it. But Jack Elway, how he treated people, how he felt that the guy who swept the gym floor or cleaned the offices to the president of the university should all be treated the same, with respect. I saw how he acted to everybody. He cared for everybody, treated everybody the same.

My biggest non-football influence is ... My dad. He was a pilot that flew in part of the (atomic) bomb material. When it was being put together, he was part of that mission to fly stuff there. He became an airline pilot, then became an executive in the Lockheed corporation for Skunk Work, which was their high military secret. We would have generals and people over to the house and I was out in the swimming pool and not worried about who they were, and here he was doing high-tech business. Later on in life, I asked him what it was all about, and he said, "Well I really can't tell you, because it was high-tech secrets." He went to his grave not telling me exactly what he knew ... (I appreciated) how he could be such an important man in the business world, but he would take time to come coach me or be at every event. There was one time I was struggling as a youth football player, and the next thing I know, he's got his arm around me and we talked for an hour and I didn't struggle again.

My coaching style in three words: High-energy. Enthusiastic. Demanding.

I wanted to come to OSU because ... Gary Andersen is the intriguing part about it. I was fortunate enough to work for him at Utah State, and he was such an incredible guy to work for. When I look back at it, I ask myself why I left. I made a mistake when I went to Colorado State. It was definitely, I thought, an opportunity to go in a different direction, and sometimes you make mistakes. I worked for a guy that had worked for me, and I knew after I'd been there a year and a half I had made a mistake. I said, "If I ever got the opportunity and Gary would hire me again, I would pursue that."

Something you'd be surprised to know about me is ... I love to watch birds. Right now in Colorado, my wife called me (Friday) morning we had two flickers and two downies. I will have 7-8 bird feeders around the house and I will attract birds and I'll watch them. We'll go watch every nature thing we can. We will explore this part of the country. When we went to Michigan, I became a "HOMES" man, which is I swam in every one of (the Great Lakes) with my daughter. At Colorado, we went up to Crazy Horse and Mount Rushmore (in South Dakota). We rafted down the river there in Southern Colorado area, the Royal Gorge. I've been to the Carlsbad Caverns in New Mexico. (I have) little rocks right up here (on my office shelf) that I collect. I have a little piece of wood that my wife and I picked up when we first got here. On New Year's Day, we drove out to Newport Beach. We will explore this coastline, and then we'll go further up into Washington and cross the border (into Canada). I've been to Buffalo when we were at Michigan State. I've been to Pennsylvania, and we went through the Amish country and then through the battlegrounds in Ohio. Our thing is this journey has taken us across the country where we get to go see things.

Brent Brennan is in his fifth year as assistant football coach for wide receivers after joining the OSU staff following six years at San Jose State in a similar capacity. He is in his first year on head coach Gary Andersen's staff.

Brennan is among the few coaches in the game who has coached the Biletnikoff winner (most outstanding receiver), Oregon State's second, in Brandin Cooks in 2013. The consensus All-American set numerous records, including new Pac-12 marks for single season receptions (128) and yards (1,730), and was selected by the New Orleans Saints in the first round of the NFL Draft.

Brennan was a finalist for the FootballScoop Wide Receiver Coach of the Year after helping the Beavers rank among the national leaders for total offense in 2012, including second in the Pac-12 Conference for pass offense at over 307 yards per game. OSU made a dramatic turnaround in '12 finishing with a 9-4 record and a trip to the Valero Alamo Bowl to play Texas.

Brennan's 2012 receiving corps was considered one of the best in the nation led by Markus Wheaton and Cooks. Wheaton earned All-America honors, Pac-12 First Team, played in the Senior Bowl, became the school's all-time leader for receptions with 227, left OSU third for career receiving yards with 2,994 and was drafted by the Pittsburgh Steelers. Cooks was a semifinalist for the Biletnikoff Award, Pac-12 Honorable Mention and compiled the then-seventh most receiving yards in a single season in OSU history with 1,151.

In Brennan's first year in Corvallis he coached James Rodgers, OSU's all-time leader for all-purpose yards with 6,373 and now second for career receptions with 222. Wheaton earned Pac-12 Honorable Mention accolades.

During his tenure at San Jose State, he held the positions of co-offensive coordinator, wide receivers coach, tight ends coach, special teams coordinator and recruiting coordinator. He coached three NFL players while with the Spartans – James Jones (Green Bay), John Broussard (Jacksonville) and Kevin Jurovich (San Francisco). Both Jones and Broussard were NFL Draft picks.

Prior to his arrival at San Jose State, Brennan spent four seasons (2001-04) as the wide receivers/slot back coach at Cal Poly San Luis Obispo, and for his final season was also the team's recruiting coordinator. While at Cal Poly he coached and recruited the 2004 Division I-AA (now FCS) Player of the Year Jordan Beck and 2004 All-American wide receiver Darrell Jones. Brennan also coached at Cal Poly NFL players Kassim Osgood, Adam Herzing and Ramses Barden. Cal Poly won the 2004 Great West Conference title.

Brennan began his coaching career in 1996 at Woodside High School in California. His first collegiate experience was as a graduate assistant coach for wide receivers at the University of Hawai'i in 1998. In 1999 he was the graduate assistant coach for tight ends at the University of Washington and in 2000 was the graduate assistant coach on offense for the University of Arizona.

He is a 1996 graduate of UCLA with a bachelor's degree in history. The former UCLA wide receiver played four years for the Bruins (lettering twice) and was on the 1993 Pac-10 Champion and 1994 Rose Bowl team.

Brennan and his wife, Courtney, have two daughters, Blake and Casey, and one son, Scott. His father, Steve Brennan, played football at San Jose State. His brother, Brad Brennan, was a four-year letterman receiver at Arizona. His cousin, Colt Brennan, was a record setting quarterback at Hawai'i.

By Gina Mizell

It was an expedited job interview, of sorts. Yet what was supposed to be a 15-minute conversation lasted about twice that long, where Brennan felt a good vibe in his gut while swapping stories with Andersen about philosophies and coaching backgrounds.

The next day, Andersen called Brennan into his office again and said he'd notify Brennan if he would be retained as the Beavers receivers coach during the upcoming week. Andersen still wanted to touch base with a couple other potential candidates for the job.

"I said, 'How do you know they're better than me?'" Brennan said. "And (Andersen) smiled and was like, 'I like that.' I was like, 'Well they're not (better), so are you trying to put together the best group you can or not?'

"He just kept laughing. I just went for it. I was like, 'What do I have to lose?'"

"I wanted to stay," Brennan said. "I didn't want to be unemployed, but also, we like it here. I didn't want to move my family again. For us, it was kind of a best-case scenario."

December, though, was an odd month.

Riley surprisingly bolted for Nebraska days after the Civil War, immediately putting staffers and players in a state of uncertainty. Brennan would regularly text with his receivers, gauging their mindset and offering support. And he stayed out on the recruiting trail, even to pitch a program without a head coach and that might not employ him in the future.

"I didn't know what choice I had," Brennan said. "What, I'd go home and just sit on my (butt) and not do anything? I just felt silly doing that."

In the early days after Brennan learned he'd stay in Corvallis, empty offices surrounded him while he worked and Andersen hired the remainder of his staff. Then as new colleagues filtered in after the holidays, Brennan became the "answer guy."

He could give the scoop on current players and where OSU had established recruiting inroads. When he and offensive coordinator Dave Baldwin sat down to watch film, Brennan broke down every aspect of every play. Plus, Brennan already had the credibility after developing former greats Markus Wheaton and Brandin Cooks, plus the Beavers' young corps of pass-catchers last season.

"Sometimes that transitional guy, it's tough on him," said Baldwin, who noted he's known of Brennan for years because they both previously coached at San Jose State. "But he's got such a positive attitude … he's a sponge. He's very, very bright."

Andersen called Brennan's role "vital" during these early months because of the "valuable information" he has provided the staff. But Brennan has been learning, too.

He's gelling with new personalities, which first began during OSU's final recruiting push. He's picked up a new spread offense, where his position group will need to develop depth and make big plays after the catch.

The first day of spring practice -- the latest example of same place, different people -- did not feel strange, Brennan said. In fact, it felt comfortable.

He's enjoyed watching somebody else take on the jobs he thought he knew. He was more concerned with making sure his receivers learn how to get lined up correctly -- even demonstrating how they must start heading to their spot before the play is completely called by briskly drifting away from a conversation -- rather than looking back on his unique offseason.

But he is certainly happy his gutsy pitch to Andersen landed.

"There is a little bit of comfort in that, that I can just focus on the ball," Brennan said. " … I'm trying to convince them that they made a good choice keeping me around."

Chad Kauha'aha'a (pronounced cow-ha-a-ha-a) is in his first year as Oregon State's defensive line coach. He spent the previous two years in the same capacity for head coach Gary Andersen at Wisconsin.

Kauha'aha'a assisted the Badgers in 2014 to the Big Ten Championship Game and a berth into the Outback Bowl. His defense helped Wisconsin finish second in the Big Ten for scoring defense allowing 20.8 points and for total defense allowing 294.1 yards (4th in NCAA). The Badgers also were the top team in the conference for third down percentage defense (3rd in NCAA) allowing a meager 28.6 percent.

In 2013, Kauha'aha'a's unit contributed to a defensive effort that saw Wisconsin rank No. 6 in scoring defense (16.3 ppg) and No. 7 in total defense (305.1 ypg) in its first season utilizing a 3-4 alignment. The Badgers held five of 13 opponents out of the end zone on the season and also limited seven opponents to 10 points or fewer. On average, the Badgers held FBS opponents 12.1 points below their scoring average.

Wisconsin held opponents to just 4.73 yards per play, the eighth-best mark of any defense in the country. UW also forced its foes to go three-and-out on 44.2 percent of their drives, the second-best mark of any team in the nation.

Wisconsin's defensive line helped anchor one of the top rushing defenses in the country in 2013, with UW finishing fifth nationally in rushing yards allowed per game (102.5) and holding each of its 13 opponents below their season rushing average.

The Badgers allowed just four running plays of 20 yards or longer, the fewest in the nation, and had only one opposing player top the 100-yard threshold during their 13-game season.

Individually, Kauha'aha'a mentored a pair of players that earned spots on NFL rosters. Senior nose guard Beau Allen was selected by the Philadelphia Eagles in the 2014 NFL Draft, while senior defensive tackle Ethan Hemer signed with the Pittsburgh Steelers.

During the 2011 and 2012 seasons at Utah, Kauha'aha'a groomed one of the top defensive tackles in the country, Star Lotulelei, who went on to be a first-round pick in the 2013 NFL Draft. Joe Kruger, a former defensive end at Utah, was taken in the seventh round of the same draft.

In Kauha'aha'a's two seasons at Utah, the Utes ranked among the top 25 in the country in rushing defense, finishing 20th in 2011 (113.5 ypg.) and 23rd in 2012 (128.2 ypg.).

In 2011, Kauha'aha'a's first season as Utah's defensive line coach, he produced two first-team All-Pac-12 players, a Morris Award winner and a bowl MVP.

Before joining his alma mater's staff, the former Ute defensive end was a member of Gary Andersen's first staff at Utah State, spending the 2009 and 2010 seasons as USU's defensive line coach. He worked in the same capacity at Weber State from 2005-09, helping the Wildcats to a share of the 2008 Big Sky Conference title. Weber State advanced to the quarterfinals of the 2008 Football Championship Subdivision playoffs.

At Weber State, Kauha'aha'a coached FCS first-team All-America defensive end Brady Fosmark, also a first-team All-Big Sky pick along with defensive tackle Shane Barkdull.

Kauha'aha'a got his coaching start in his hometown of Maui, Hawaii, at Baldwin High School. There, he posted a 25-5-2 record in three seasons, winning two Maui Interscholastic League championships. His teams ranked in the top five in the state all three seasons. Baldwin High's Kaluka Maiava went on to play for USC and is now with the Cleveland Browns.

A three-year letterwinner during his playing career at Utah from 1993-96, Kauha'aha'a was a second-team All-WAC defensive lineman in 1996. He earned honorable mention honors in 1995. He was a two-time recipient of Utah's Walt DeLand Award, presented to the Ute football player who overcomes adversity to make a contribution. He earned a bachelor's degree in sociology from Utah in 1997.

Kauha'aha'a is married to the former Lena Reyes and they have two children, Walter and Chaseten. Kauha'aha'a's brother, Kendall "The Spyder" Grove, is a mixed martial artist and won "The Ultimate Fighter 3."

My first football memory is ... I got introduced to Pop Warner football through my stepdad, who I owe a lot to, because he was my coach and he was the guy who kind of guided me through. So that's how I started football. I had no idea (how to play). It was just, "Let's take this kid -- it looks like he's got some ability -- and throw him in there." So since 1982 I've played football or been involved in football.

I knew I wanted to be a coach when ... I thought I was going to go into law enforcement, but I wanted to coach. My high school coach told me, "I want you to come coach high school with me, but in order for you to be a coach, you're not gonna be able to do both because of the schedule conflict." He's like, "Why don't you go back to school?" I wasn't the biggest fan of school but I was like, "Oh, gosh, OK." I got in the program in the state of Hawaii called the "RISE" program (Respecialization in Special Education), where I would work to get my teaching certificate and my special education certification. So I did that, I coached and I taught for two years, and next thing I know I was a full-blown teacher.

My biggest football influence is ... A culmination. I can't just point out one person. It started out with my high school coach, Joe Balangitao, he's a well-known coach in Hawaii on Maui. My basketball coach, John Garcia, was a good mentor to me. And then obviously, Ron McBride, (who hired me at Weber State). Those three are real guys that I looked up to and I wanted to be like as a coach. All three of those men were very important to me, grooming me as a young man and as a young athlete, and then Coach McBride taking me over the top and finishing off my maturity.

My biggest non-football influence is ... My grandparents, who raised me. They sacrificed a lot for me. Financially, we weren't the richest people, but they did what they could to make sure that I had a good life and made sure things were right. They had to pay my first year of college and I had to get eligible. Back in 1991-92, my grandfather had to work. He worked, and we didn't have that kind of money, so they had to take out a loan to pay for my year of school ... they made a lot of sacrifices for me, from when I was a little boy to going to college. Even when I got done with college, they helped me with getting my first home and all that stuff.

I wanted to come to OSU because ... If you're a football coach, to me, it was an opportunity. I was fortunate enough to get a job. It doesn't really matter where I'm at. I wasn't looking. I was in a situation where I knew I wouldn't get retained at Wisconsin, because they already had a guy. I was lucky enough to be carried over (by Andersen).

I would describe my coaching style as ... I'm aggressive guy, like (Defensive coordinator Kalani) Sitake is. I'm passionate about what I do. I do get fired up. I do get emotional. But at the same time, I'm not out of control. But I like having energy. I like having juice. There is excitement. I'm not a stale guy, so we're gonna have fun in what we do. My guys are a reflection of me, and I'm not no softy, so we're gonna be a tough-minded group.

Something you'd be surprised to know about me is ... I just got into smoking, barbecue. I did that last summer and I got hooked on it. The only problem is my wife did it a couple times also, and she's better than I am. You're not supposed to burn things when you smoke, and I've learned to burn things. I like cooking. I drive my wife nuts cooking when I'm at home. I cook all these crazy concoctions, and my wife doesn't eat any beef or pork. All she eats is fish and chicken. And when you have three boys in the house, there's gonna be a lot of meat involved. I like cooking that kind of stuff. I like cooking anything.

My early impression of my position group is ... I think they're an athletic group of guys. I like the way they've adjusted to the new staff, to the new defense, to the new techniques. That's been a huge positive. There's been no resistance. Sometimes when you come into a program that's been doing the same thing for a very long time, sometimes kids get stuck in their old ways and might question what's going on. But I think with us coming in and the background that we've had as assistant coaches and the success we've had at other programs and the numbers we've put up, these kids today are smart enough to do some homework on people like me. I think they know I know what I'm doing. That helps. I think they trust the stuff I'm gonna teach them, because the numbers don't lie. So it's been good. They're working hard. They're eager to learn new stuff and we're excited to see them get pads on and have them start competing physically.

Telly Lockette (pronounced Lock-it) was named the Beavers' running backs coach Dec. 31, 2014, after spending the previous two years in the same capacity at South Florida.

While at USF Lockette coached running back Marlon Mack to American Athletic Conference Freshman of the Year honors after rushing for 1,014 yards; the first USF Bull to reach the 1,000-yard plateau since 2005. He also coached second team all-conference running back Marcus Shaw in 2013.

Lockette has extensive experience as a high school coach in the state of Florida. From 2008 to 2012 he was the head coach at Miami's Central High School, compiling a record of 60-10 and leading the Rockets to three consecutive 6A state title games, winning the 2010 and '12 championships. His 2012 team finished the year as the top-ranked squad in the nation and the '10 team ended No. 2. For three seasons Central did not lose to any team from powerful Dade or Broward County, a first in Florida high school football history. During his tenure over 70 players received college football scholarship offers, including current Florida State leading rusher Dalvin Cook and two-time Conference USA Offensive Player of the Year and Manning Award finalist Rakeem Cato of Marshall.

He accumulated numerous awards during his prep coaching career, including the Nike Sportsmanship Award, and the Nike, Miami Herald and Miami Dolphins' Coach of the Year honors. He was an assistant coach at the Semper Fidelis All-America bowl twice and an assistant coach for the USA National Football Team.

Prior to taking the head coaching job at Central, Lockette served on his alma mater Northwestern High School in Miami for four seasons. He held the role of offensive coordinator and running backs coach for three seasons after spending one year as running backs coach. Lockette led an explosive offense that averaged 42 points per game, the most in state history at the time, helping Northwestern to the 2006 state championship.

As of 2014, Lockette had numerous players that he coached in the NFL, including Devonte Freeman (Atlanta), Kevin Pamphile (Tampa Bay), Lavonte Davis (Tampa Bay), Sean Spence (Pittsburgh) and Kenbrell Thompkins (Oakland).

Lockette was a star running back at Northwestern and went on to become a two-time Division I-AA All-American linebacker at Idaho State, where he was associated with then Bengals defensive line coach Gary Andersen. He was inducted into the Idaho State Athletics Hall of Fame in 2013. Lockette is a 1998 graduate of Idaho State with a bachelor's degree in education.

My first football memory is ... Watching the Dallas Cowboys. I'm a Dallas Cowboys diehard. I remember as a little kid watching them, and I always loved that star on the helmet. That's what attracted me to them. Just watching them play, they were America's Team. And at the time growing up, Tony Dorsett was the running back and I wanted to be a running back. So I became a running back.

I knew I wanted to be a coach when ... I was getting my Master's degree at Idaho State, and then Tom Walsh, who was the head coach at the time, left Idaho State to go be the head coach of the Mobile Admirals of the Regional Football League down in Mobile, Alabama. So I followed him down there. The league was a one-year league and it folded, and I was kind of stuck in between "What am I gonna do now?" So I just decided to go home and got that itch not to play football, but to be around it. So I started coaching.

My biggest influence is ... In sports in general, it would have to be my mom. She wanted me to play, and it was a way to stay active and not get into the streets and stuff like that.

My coaching style in three words: Juice. Juice. Juice.

I wanted to come to OSU because ... It goes back a couple years. In 2010, Coach Andersen was at Utah State. He had just got there and I was coaching at Miami Central (High School) down in Miami and we had just won the state championship. He had a (defensive backs) coach leave and he offered me a job. I had just had my daughter at the time, and I declined ... when the opportunity came (at OSU), I couldn't turn him down. He called me. I got in contact with my head coach at the time (South Florida's Willie Taggart), and my head coach said, "You can't turn that down. That's a great experience for you." (Taggart) went to Stanford with Jim Harbaugh, so he said, "The Pac-12 would be a great experience for you. You'd learn a lot of football." So I said yes.

Something would be surprised to know about me: Everybody likes to go fishing when you go away, but that's about it. I can say, one time in my life I did it, and I said I'm gonna do it again if I ever come back to the West Coast: Go elk hunting.

McGiven arrived at OSU from Utah State where he was the offensive coordinator/quarterbacks coach for the 2013 and '14 seasons. He was named the FootballScoop's Quarterbacks Coach of the Year in '14 after USU lost three different starting quarterbacks. The Aggies, even with the plethora of injuries, defeated UTEP in the New Mexico Bowl and ended the year with a 10-4 record. McGiven guided the Aggies to back-to-back bowl wins

Prior to Utah State, he was Montana State's offensive coordinator/quarterbacks coach for the 2012 season. The Bobcats advanced to the second round of the Football Championship Series playoffs, finishing with an 11-2 record, after sharing the Big Sky Conference title.

For the 2010 and 2011 seasons McGiven was at Memphis; in 2011 as assistant head coach/quarterbacks coach and in '10 as recruiting coordinator/quarterbacks coach.

McGiven was on current Beaver head coach Gary Andersen's staff at Utah State for the 2009 season as assistant head coach/recruiting coordinator/quarterbacks coach. For the 2006-08 seasons he was the offensive coordinator/quarterbacks coach at Weber State helping the Wildcats capture the Big Sky Conference title his final year. Weber State was one of the most explosive teams offensively in the country during his three-year stint and produced numerous All-Big Sky Conference honorees and national award candidates.

The Orem, Utah native began his coaching career as offensive student assistant at Louisiana Tech, where he played football before a career-ending injury. He returned home to be an assistant coach at Orem's Mountain View High School for the 2001 season before joining BYU as an offensive graduate assistant coach from 2002-04. His first full-time coaching position was at Southern Utah in 2005 as an offensive coordinator/quarterbacks/wide receivers coach.

He is a 2001 graduate of Utah Valley with a bachelor's degree in business management and earned his master's from BYU in 2005 in physical education. McGiven earned a football scholarship in 1996 to attend Eastern Arizona.

He and his wife Lindsay have four children: sons Peyton (15), K.J. (13) and Beau (11); and daughter Ireland (9).

Getting to Know Kevin McGiven

By Gina Mizell
The Oregonian February 20, 2015

My first football memory is ... I grew up as a young kid really watching two teams. I grew up in Orem, Utah. Both my parents were BYU graduates, so I spent a lot of time in the stands watching BYU football games. And then the rest of my family really lived in the Bay Area and had grown up 49ers fans. So we were big BYU fans at the time, and we were huge 49ers fans. So at the time I was growing up, Jerry Rice and Joe Montana and Ronnie Lott and Roger Craig and all those players that went through San Francisco at the time were all the guys that I idolized. Some of those Super Bowls that they won in the 80s, I have memories of sitting in the living room watching those games. And watching BYU's national championship (season) in 1984, when they played Michigan in the Holiday Bowl, that was a pretty good memory. I was about seven years old when those games were taking place.

I knew wanted to be a coach when ... The head coach at Louisiana Tech (when I briefly played there), that was Gary Crowton, (and) he came to BYU and got a head coaching job there. We started to talk a little bit more about where I was at with my degree, if (coaching) was something that I wanted to pursue ... They had an offensive graduate assistant there at the time, but I went over there and just started doing some volunteer work, hanging around there a little bit. And then when that position came open, that's when I really decided I wanted to do it. Got the graduate assistant position at BYU, and I guess the rest is history.

My biggest football influence is ... Gary Crowton. Going to Louisiana Tech, the time that I spent with him there and then the time I spent at BYU, he's what I would consider just an unbelievable offensive mind. Very innovative and has had a lot of success in the profession as a head coach and as an offensive coordinator at different places. Everything that I learned offensively, getting my start, everything that I learned about quarterback play and all those things really came form him, or it came from the responsibility that he gave me to do research and things like that.

My biggest non-football influence is ... Probably my grandpa. He was pretty young when he passed away. He was 60 years old and I was 11 or 12 when he passed away. But just a great, great man and was very, very successful in business and was someone that kind of earned his way the hard way. He started out (at an) entry level and had to make a lot of sacrifices, not making very much money, and was able to work his way to the top of the company that he was at. Just someone that I look at and (see that he) took a road to where he had to really work at things and then really became very, very successful. And then just the way he treated people, things like that, is something I always wanted to emulate. He had a pretty profound impact on me at a pretty young age that I've been able to kind of carry forward.

I would describe my coaching style as ... Maybe that would be a better question for someone else. I don't know if I can really define my coaching style. But I really, really enjoy the Xs and Os of the game. It's something I like to research, (that) I like to learn from other people, offensive strategies and things like that. I'm probably not as much of a loud, yeller, screamer, vocal (guy). It's really kind of take you to the side, talk to you, try to figure things out and find out what a player is thinking, as opposed to just reacting and not seeing all the reasons ... I enjoy mentoring young men. We're all in that situation, and they're still in a stage where you can have a pretty strong impact on their lives. So part of our philosophy here is helping young men become men and getting them ready for the outside world when football's not there and being able to leave here with degrees. Overseeing that, the relationships that you develop along the way, I guess those are kind of the reasons probably why I got into it.

I came to OSU because ... When this opportunity came up and (Gary Andersen) gave me a call I was like, 'Yeah, I want to work for Coach Andersen.' He's a big part of it. I have a lot of belief in him and how he manages a program as a head football coach -- it's something that I believe in very, very heavily. This conference, to be able to coach in the Pac-12 is a little bit of a step up from some of the places I've been, just in terms of the conference affiliation. I thought that was a great opportunity. A great staff of guys that he's assembled, a lot of guys that I've been around in the past. I GA'd with (Defensive coordinator Kalani) Sitake and worked with Dave Baldwin and T.J. Woods at Utah State, as well as (Defensive line coach Chad) Kauha'aha'a. So I knew a lot of these guys and had a very high comfort level with them coming in. I haven't been a huge follower of Oregon State, per se, just based on where I grew up and stuff like that. But when you're around college football, you understand that it's a program that's got a lot of tradition. They've done some really, really good things here. The last staff did some really good things here with Coach (Mike) Riley, so it's a place with a great track record. I'm just looking forward to continuing to build and get it to the point to where we want, to where we're winning championships, and I believe we have the people in place to be able to do that. As you become more familiar with the program, you start to understand what a great administration there is here, what a great fan base, and then obviously a beautiful area of the country. So I just saw it as a bunch of huge positives as far as coming here.

My first impression of my position group is ... What I'm seeing is a group that is very, very capable. The last staff did a tremendous job and they recruited talent here ... So I believe all of those guys can play football. Now, some of the ingredients that go with that: Are they intelligent enough to handle what we want them to do offensively, to grasp our system? And are they eager to learn? That's what I'm seeing is a bunch of young men that have a very, very high care factor to go along with their talent level. I believe as long as they have those things and they're not too fundamentally or mechanically flawed, to where you can't correct some things and get them steered in the right direction to doing what you think will help them have success, (we'll be fine). I see guys that are, up to this point that I've been around them, that are very, very willing, have very good work ethic and are eager to learn more and are intelligent. I think they've got a lot of things they need to have success. At this point, even though a lot of people would be worried about (the inexperience at the position), I'm not worried about it. Just very, very eager to see what they can do in spring ball and get them to that point. And then, by that time, we'll have a little bit better assessment of how the depth is and what we feel like are the strengths and weaknesses of our guys. But I'm excited about them.

Odum has coached 28 all-conference honorees during his tenures as an assistant coach at SMU, Utah, Houston, Utah State and Montana. He has coached in eight bowl games and has been on the winning side of those postseason contests six times. The Irvine, Calif., native has been associated with teams with winning records nine times.

Eight players that he coached have been selected NFL Draft picks. While at Houston, Stanford Routt was taken in the second round of the 2005 draft by the Oakland Raiders and in 2007, while at Utah, Eric Weddle was selected in the second round by the San Diego Chargers. In addition to Weddle, who is a five-time All-Pro selection, four of Odum's players from SMU are currently playing in the NFL including Kenneth Acker (San Francisco), Chris Banjo (Green Bay), Richard Crawford (San Diego) and Sterling Moore (Dallas).

Odum spent the last seven seasons as the secondary coach at SMU. The Mustangs played in four bowl games during his tenure, winning three. SMU tied for first twice in the West Division of Conference USA. While at SMU he coached two-time all-league defensive back Kenneth Acker and fellow all-conference selections Chris Banjo and Richard Crawford.

Prior to working for head coach June Jones at SMU, Odum, served as the secondary coach at Utah from 2005-07 for then Ute defensive coordinator Gary Andersen. The Utes were 3-0 in bowl games during Odum's trio of seasons. In 2007, Utah was the top-ranked team for pass efficiency defense and fifth for scoring defense.

Before arriving at Utah, he was the secondary coach at Houston from 2003-04, Utah State from 2000-2002 and at Montana from 1998-99. The Grizzlies won back-to-back Big Sky Conference titles.

Odum was a four-year letterman defensive back at Utah from 1989-92, starting two seasons. He also was a two-year letterman starter as a centerfielder for the baseball team. He is a 1993 graduate of a Utah with a bachelor's degree in political science.

He and his wife Ania, have two sons, Dominic and Jeremiah and one daughter, Ryann.

My first football memory is ... I was just a big sports junkie growing up. I watched everything, from baseball, basketball, football, golf, tennis. I was just into sports. I grew up in California, and a close friend of mine, he was playing football and the dad was the head coach of the pee wee team. We were close and we'd just always play tag in the park. I was probably like 10 or so, and he said, "Man you should try playing with me on my team," and I said, "Oh, OK, I'll try it." So I went out for it and I just loved it. I said "Oh, I just love hitting people. This is the best thing ever." So I just fell in love with it and it kind of went from there. When (people) get into it, they immediately know if they like it or not, I don't like this contact stuff or I do. It was clear as day (for me), "Oh, this is awesome. I've never experienced anything like this, where I can just go ahead. Just go as fast as I can and hit people and run around and have a good time." I just remember that first day putting on the pads (saying), "Wow, this is for real. I'm a big-time guy."

I knew I wanted to be a coach when ... My old college coach (Ron McBride), he was just in my ear like you would be a really good coach someday. (He said), "If you want to become a graduate assistant, you have a spot here (at Utah)." After a while I said, "You know what, I'm gonna take you up on it." So I dropped a really nice job (in pharmaceutical sales), getting paid, to getting paid nothing. Went into the coaching field, and it's been great. Really enjoy it. It was a tough decision in that (I left) a good, high-paying job out of college and I was single and it was a good life. But then it went to, "This is what I really miss," just being around the guys and the whole thing. I thought I could help out and contribute, and it's worked out well.

My biggest football influence is ... Wow. They were all (influential), just in different aspects. I've worked for some really good coaches. Obviously Ron McBride, because he started out as being the coach that I worked under as a graduate assistant. And then I get my first job at the University of Montana worked under a guy named Mick Dennehy, who was fabulous. From there, we went down to Utah State. Then I went to the University of Houston and worked under a tremendous coach in Art Briles. You see what he's done (at Baylor). From there, went to work at the University of Utah under Kyle Whittingham and (we know) how successful he's been. And then from there, to SMU under June Jones. It's hard for me (to pick). I try to take little things from each and every one of those coaches, because they're all different but they all do something great. And then there's some assistants that were really influential as well. Frank Gansz, he was with us at SMU and they kind of call him the Bill Walsh of special teams. He's kind of the guru of special teams. Unfortunately, he passed away when he was on our staff. He was in his (60s), but he was tremendous. Man, really knew his stuff and was a great leader.

My biggest non-football influence is ... My parents. My dad filmed every single game I was in, rain or sleet or whatever. He was very influential. My mom, just always being there and encouraging me and telling me to play with the eye of the tiger.

I would describe my coaching style as ... I'm very detail-oriented on a lot of things, and some things I don't care and just want you to be you and go out and just play. I'm very fair. I'm firm on some things that I won't let slide at all, and some things I'll let (slide) if it's not out of control or it's not being a distraction. I like to have a good time. I try to educate my players on the big picture of things and the whole aspect of offense and what they're trying to do to you. (I try to teach) just be a master at your position, just be a true professional at your spot and really work at your trade. That's what I try to convey to those guys, and they seem to respond to that.

I decided to come to OSU because ... I was always an admirer from afar. I always thought the program was really good and they did a great job. They had tough guys that played here. They were gritty teams. Those are the kids of traits that I like as a coach. When you're in the profession, you get around and you play different teams, they all have a little persona about them. The area, and then their personality as a team. I always thought, from afar, "I like that style of play." I coached at the University of Montana, and it was a lower level but it was the same kind of grittiness to it. So that's what I really liked about the job. And then obviously working for Coach Andersen. We worked together at the University of Utah and he's a tremendous coach. To have a chance to work with him again, I wasn't gonna turn that down.

Something you'd be surprised to know about me is ... I like to play golf and I like to fly fish. Two hobbies that are more difficult now that I have children, but when I do get a chance (I enjoy them). Now, I didn't get a chance to fly fish in Texas. But at Montana and the Utah stops and now here, I'm looking forward to getting that chance to do that. I don't know if I've got any great stories (about what I've caught). Just being out there and having no one around you but you and the river, it's really peaceful and it's calming and that's what I like about it.

My first impression of my position group is ... It seems like it's a real good group. They're young. They don't have a lot of experience. But they're eager. They're hungry. They want to learn and they're paying attention to details. I'm excited to get out there when the spring starts and really hone in on the little things, the little intricacies of being a defensive back. But so far to this point, they've done everything I've asked them to do. They're at the workouts on time. The early-morning runs, they're on time, ready to go. So I like their work ethic. Now we just gotta hone in on the little nuances of the package that we're gonna be running and all those things. But I like their mindset right now.

Ilaisa Tuiaki (pronounced ee-lye-sa too-ee-ah-kee) joined the Oregon State staff in January of 2015 as the Beavers' linebackers coach. He rejoins head coach Gary Andersen after spending the 2009-11 seasons at Utah State as the team's running backs coach.

Tuiaki comes to OSU from Utah where he spent the last three seasons as the defensive line coach. His defensive linemen earned four Pac-12 postseason honors over the last two years. He helped Utah to one of its best recent seasons in 2014 and the title of the Royal Purple Las Vegas Bowl. Two of his linemen earned Pac-12 First Team over the last two years, Trevor Reilly in 2013 and Nate Orchard in '14. Orchard was also named the Morris Trophy recipient as the Pac-12 top lineman and the nation's top defensive end by winning the Ted Hendricks Award. Meanwhile, tackle Lowell Lotulelei earned Freshman All-America honors.

In addition Utah led the nation for overall sacks with 55 and was sixth for average tackles for loss per game at 7.9 in 2014. In 2013, Utah ranked second for sacks.

Tuiaki was the only non-coordinator to be nominated for the Broyles Award (top assistant coach) in 2013. In 2014, The FootballScoop pegged him one of its five finalists for its defensive line coach of the year award.

While at Utah State he worked with the Aggies' running backs and had roles as special teams and recruiting coordinator. In 2011 the Aggies were sixth in the nation for rushing, averaging 282.7 yards per game. Robert Turbin was named the 2011 WAC Offensive Player of the Year, rushing for 1,517 yards while averaging 6.1 yards per carry, and scoring a school-record 19 touchdowns. That same season, Michael Smith was named co-MVP of the Famous Idaho Potato Bowl. Three Aggies were drafted during Tuiaki's career.

Tuiaki began his college coaching career in 2008 as a graduate assistant on defense for Utah. The Utes were the nation's only undefeated team and beat Alabama in the Sugar Bowl to finish No. 2 in the country. He got his coaching start as an assistant at Kearns High School (Utah), where he coached the wide receivers and outside linebackers in

The Provo, Utah native was a two-year letterman at running back and a team captain at Southern Utah, for the 2003 season under head coach Gary Andersen, where he also played rugby. He also lettered two years at running back at Snow Junior College before transferring to SUU. He is a 2006 graduate of Southern Utah with bachelor's of arts degrees in English and physical education. He was a two-time recipient of the Utah Coalition for the Advancement of Minorities in Higher Education (UCAHME) scholarship.

Tuiaki and his wife Viola have five children, sons Laveatu'u and Lolo, and daughters Uini, Leisinia and Heilala.

My first football memory is ... Just playing Pop Warner, Little League. I didn't understand rules and all that stuff, but it was some of the drills that we did where it's basically get up and go freakin' full speed. If you talk to some of the other coaches, I'm really calm and really composed, but I've got a screw loose. I love that part, to just turn it up and just go run at somebody and kind of see him back down.

I knew I wanted to be a coach when ... Everybody wants to play in the NFL, and then eventually you kind of get smart enough where you're like, "I'm not good enough to play in the NFL" or "I'm too small" and "I'm not fast enough" or whatever. When that dawned on me and I realized that, I've always loved the game of football and I've always loved athletics, but I've always loved teaching too. I graduated from college and became a teacher and that was my dream. My dream was to be a high school head coach and teach and all that.

My biggest football influence is ... A guy that played here, David Moala. We lived in Inglewood, California when I first started playing Little League. I played with the El Segundo Raiders. He played with the Hawthorne Chargers. David was in high school at Hawthorne High School when I was there, so I always kind of looked up to him. When I got to high school, I changed my football number to his. He had a friend that got shot and died and so he wore his jersey number, No. 35. Well, I changed my number to 35 when I got to high school. So I've always looked up to him. I wanted to be like David Moala. I wanted to play like him. I wanted to be tough like him. He's always been someone that I've kind of looked up to.

My biggest non-football influence is ... My dad. He's what I consider a real man. He doesn't know anything about football. He didn't come to a majority of my games in college, but he was just a grinder. Just a hard-, hard-working man. A good person. A man that took care of his family. The game of football wasn't something that he was really into. He played rugby and he was competitive on the rugby field. But what I call a real man, a man of integrity. There was a well-known person in our Polynesian community that had passed away, and so everybody in the Polynesian community was going to do service for the widow, and he was actually relatives of the widow. The same Saturday that everybody was going to work, he chose somebody else. We were electricians -- my dad and all my brothers -- we went and wired this guy's house. We went and bought all this material and went and wired it and basically did it for free. He made it a point to teach us it's not about helping everybody else so the public can see. Go help the people that really need it.

I wanted to come to OSU because ... The key points were, No. 1, Gary Andersen was here. He asked me to come. I played for him. I coached for him. He gave me my first coaching opportunity as a graduate assistant, and then he hired me and gave me my first job. I wanted to be fair to him and hear him out, because I knew what he was about. And the more I got to learn about the program, the more I wanted to be here. Obviously (defensive coordinator Kalani Sitake) being here, as well, was a big deal for me. Also, Dennis Erickson, I've been with him the last two years (at Utah). He had started to become a mentor for me, too. I really leaned on him for information. He's a really good person. He told me a little bit about the program and the area, and the more I started to hear and read online and doing my homework, it was just a place I wanted to be.

Something you'd be surprised to know about me is ... I got all my kids into MMA (mixed martial arts). They were all taking MMA classes, and that was kind of one way I could spend time with them. We're all into that. Now that we're here, we don't have a gym that we're going to, but I've found a place. I've got a boy, he's my oldest, so I'm gonna start taking him there and that's going to be our little time together just to go and beat up on bags and grapple and choke people out.

My first impression of my position group is ... I really like them. I think they're a good group of kids. We're really young. That's going to be the thing. We don't have any mileage under us as far as games. We've got one guy with game experience (Rommel Mageo) and a couple guys that have played a little bit of special teams, but not really any experience. That's going to be the challenge as far as getting those guys to kind of pick it up and mature a little bit faster. I think it's a good opportunity, though, for those guys to come in. New coach, new staff. I haven't pegged anybody as this type of kid or that type of kid. It's a fresh start for everybody, which I think is good. I think that they've all responded in a very positive way to us as a coaching staff. Physically, we'll see what we get out of them. But I think off the field and academically and all that stuff, I love how they've responded to us. They've been responsible off the field so far, and so I think football will take care of itself. I've really been impressed with how they've been so far, and I think the rest of it will be fine. They seem to be picking things up fast as far as us teaching new schemes and all that. We'll see what they can do on the field.

T.J. Woods is in his first season as the offensive line coach at Oregon State.

Woods spent the previous two seasons at Wisconsin assisting then Badgers' head coach Gary Andersen. Woods' line in 2014 helped Badger running back Melvin Gordon become a Heisman Trophy finalist and Doak Walker Award recipient, ending the year 2,587 yards, 29 touchdowns (2nd most in Big Ten history) and an FBS record 7.8 yards per carry for his career. The Badgers broke the school record, for the second consecutive year, for rushing with 4,482 net yards. In addition all five of his starting offensive linemen earned All-Big Ten honors, led by first team honorees and All-Americans Kyle Costigan and Rob Havenstein.

The 2014 season also saw Wisconsin break the Big Ten record for rushing yards with 4,482 and the Badgers set a school record for yards per carry at 6.9. The running back duo of Gordon and Corey Clement broke the NCAA record, for the second consecutive season, for combined rushing by two backs with 3,536 yards. Woods' offensive line also allowed the fewest sacks in school history with 13.

In Woods' first season, the Badgers' turned in a record-setting season offensively for UW. With three All-Big Ten picks leading the way, Woods' offensive line plowed the way for a school-record 480.8 yards per game and an average of 34.8 points per contest, the third-highest total in school history. The Badgers (3,689 rushing – then school record -- and 2,562 passing) were one of just four teams nationally to amass 3,500 rushing yards and 2,500 passing yards on the season, with UW's 3,689 rushing yards setting a school record.

Behind Woods' offensive line, the Badgers' running back duo of sophomore Melvin Gordon (1,609) and senior James White (1,444) broke the then NCAA record for rushing yards by a pair of teammates by running for a combined 3,053 yards. The duo also became the first in FBS history to each rush for 1,400 yards in the same season.

For those efforts, a trio of UW offensive linemen were honored with All-Big Ten recognition, led by Associated Press All-American Ryan Groy. Rob Havenstein and Tyler Marz also earned All-Big Ten accolades, with Dan Voltz being named first-team All-Freshman by both Athlon Sports and College Football News. Groy went on to earn an NFL opportunity, signing with the Chicago Bears in May of 2014, and earned a starting spot at left guard.

Prior to joining the staff at Wisconsin, Woods spent four years at Utah State, the last two seasons in charge of the Aggies' offensive line after coaching USU's tight ends and special teams his first two years.

In 2012, the Aggies' offensive line cleared the way for a Utah State offense that set school records for total offense (6,108 yards), rushing yards (2,663) and total points (454). Center Tyler Larsen and tackle Eric Schultz earned first-team All-WAC honors, with Larsen becoming the first two-time first-team all-conference offensive lineman for Utah State since 1996-97. Guard Jamie Markosian was also a second-team all-league choice.

Behind Woods' offensive line, Utah State was one of just 19 teams in the country to average at least 200 yards rushing and passing in 2012. The previous season, the Aggies' offense established school records for total offense (5,945 yards), rushing yards (3,675), total points (437) and total touchdowns (60). Two of the Aggies' first-team All-WAC honorees were offensive linemen as Larsen and guard Philip Gapelu. The duo were the first pair of Aggie offensive linemen to earn first-team all-conference honors since 1997.

In 2009 and 2010, Woods coached Utah State's tight ends and kickoff return unit, highlighted by Kerwynn Williams setting several FBS and WAC records, including single-season kickoff return yards (1,444) and single-season kickoff return yards per game (120.3).

Woods went to Utah State from New Mexico, where he was an offensive graduate assistant for two seasons. The New Mexico offensive line enjoyed great success in Woods' two seasons there. Junior center Erik Cook earned second-team All-Mountain West honors while offensive tackle Byron Bell was named to the 2008 CollegeFootballNews.com All-Freshman team. Cook was drafted by the Washington Redskins and played two seasons in the NFL, while Bell has started on the Carolina Panthers' offensive line over the past two seasons at left tackle.

Prior to working at New Mexico, Woods was an assistant coach at Citrus Junior College in Glendora, Calif., for one season. At Citrus, he was the offensive line coach/running game coordinator, helping the Fighting Owls to the Western States Conference South Division title.

Woods began his coaching career at his alma mater of Azusa Pacific as the offensive line assistant coach for one season before spending two seasons as tight ends coach. While at Azusa Pacific, Woods helped the Cougars to the NAIA national semifinals, as well as mentoring 2005 NAIA All-American tight end Ricky Burgan.

Woods, a native of San Dimas, Calif., was a two-year letterman at offensive tackle at Azusa Pacific, garnering NAIA first-team All-America accolades as well as being named to the Don Hansen's Football Gazette NAIA All-America first-team list in 2002. That season he anchored a Cougar offense that amassed 400 yards per game, ranking 13th in the country.

Prior to Azusa Pacific, Woods was at Iowa State for one season, signing with the Cyclones after two standout seasons at Citrus College, where he earned National Junior College Athletic Association (NJCAA) All-America honors in 1999.

Woods earned his bachelor's degree in business from Azusa Pacific in 2002 and his master's degree in physical education in 2005, also from Azusa Pacific.

The Oregonian February 19, 2015

My first football memory is ... I just started playing in pee wee football when I was 13 years old. I liked the violence of the sport. You could do things in the game of football that you couldn't do on the playground or in other sports, and I kind of fell in love with that aspect of it.

I knew I wanted to be a coach when ... I didn't come from a football family. My parents didn't come from a football family. There was no real background in the sport when I started, so I relied a lot on my coaches to try to teach me, not only the game and the fundamentals and all that stuff, but the culture of football. Just kind of growing up and recognizing what those guys did for me was something I wanted to try to be able to do for the kids that I coach.

My biggest football influence is ... As a player, Cliff Wurst, who was my offensive line coach at Citrus College, he had a real big influence on me. And I think professionally, I'm in a pretty unique situation where I get to work for the two major guys that have helped me and helped pave the way for me in my career in Dave Baldwin and Gary Andersen. I'm pretty fortunate that way, in that I'm still working with the guys that have kind of brought me up in this profession.

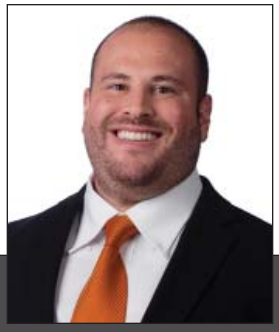

My biggest non-football influence is ... My parents. My dad and my mom have always been there for me, always been supportive of me, even in a field or an industry, if you will, that they didn't have a lot of knowledge about or familiarity with. It's not even close. Those two people are the most influential people in my life.

I would describe my coaching style as ... Aggressive. Business-like. The offensive line has a responsibility to set the tone for physicality and toughness on an offense, and also on a football team, so we have to bring that energy and that excitement and that attitude every single day and every single second with what we're doing. It's my job to try to set that tone, and then it's the offensive linemen's job to carry that vision out. I would say my style a little bit Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, to the point where in the meeting room or on the field, it's business-type approach and get-to-work mentality, blue-collar, hard-hat mentality, and then when we're off the field, I like to have fun and have relationships. It's a relationship business, and I enjoy having that with the coaches and with the players.

I wanted to come to OSU because ... The first thing I'd say is I'm very comfortable working for and with Coach Andersen. I've been with him now for a long time, and in my opinion, there's nobody better in the country to coach for than Gary Andersen. So that was a big part of my decision as far as coming here. Also, I've grown up on the West Coast and have a tremendous amount of respect for the Pac-12 Conference, No. 1, and then Oregon State. They've had success here and always had physical groups up front, which is our mentality and I think that fits our personality as a coaching staff. So I think it just kind of made sense that way.

Something you would be surprised to know about me is ... I'm kind of boring. I'm all ball, all the time, pretty much. I like to golf every once in a while, but I'm not very good at it. You're either a good coach or a good golfer, I think.

My first impression of my position group is ... I'm excited. I think the biggest positive about the group that we have is their willingness to work. I think they've had the foundation laid with the previous coaching staff, as far as what it takes to be successful up front. That comes from hard work and effort and all those types of things, and I think that they have that.

Evan Simon is in his first season as the head football strength and conditioning coach at Oregon State. His duties include the development, implementation and monitoring of all strength and conditioning aspects of the Beavers' football program.

Simon arrived in Corvallis after two years as the head strength and conditioning coach at the University of Wisconsin. He helped the Badgers to New Year's Day appearances in the Capital One Bowl and Outback Bowl.

Prior to working in Madison, Simon was the director of strength and conditioning at Utah State University from August 2009-January 2013. The Aggies appeared in two Famous Idaho Potato Bowl games – USU hadn't played in a bowl game since 1997 prior to his arrival.

From January 2006-July 2009, Simon was the associate director of strength and conditioning at the University of Utah. He was part of staff that led Utah to a 13-0 season, a victory over Alabama in the Sugar Bowl, and a final national ranking of No. 2 following the 2008 season.

The native of Lexington Park, Md., also spent 15 months as the head strength and conditioning coach at Davidson College in North Carolina and over two years as a graduate assistant strength and conditioning coach at the University of Kentucky.

Simon has been a speaker at several national strength and conditioning conventions. He is a certified strength and conditioning specialist through the National Strength and Conditioning Association and a certified strength coach via the Collegiate Strength and Conditioning Coaches Association.

He is a 2002 graduate of Frostburg State in Maryland with a bachelor's degree in health and physical education, and holds a master's degree (2004) from Kentucky in exercise physiology.

He and his wife Linda have two daughters, Abbi and Robyn.

Getting to Know Evan Simon

By Connor Letourneau
The Oregonian January 14, 2015

My first football memory is ... Going to Redskin games with my stepdad, who is really like my real dad. That'd be my first football memory, you know, me being exposed to that and just seeing the game. Stuff like that is probably my first one.

I knew I wanted to work in strength and conditioning ... Well, I've always loved lifting. Lifting is always something that I got enjoyment out of. I competed as a power lifter. I benched a lot of deadlift for the power lifting events. I majored in health fitness at Frostburg (State University). I did exercise physiology (in graduate school) at Kentucky. But I've always really loved getting to know about the body. I love just the development process.

My biggest strength and conditioning influence is ... Well, I have a few of them. I'd say my biggest strength and conditioning influences are the people that have pushed me to learn what I've learned. In no particular order, it'd be Louie Simmons of Westside Barbell. Buddy Morris, who is currently the strength coach for the Arizona Cardinals. Joe DeFranco of DeFranco's Gym is another one. ... There's a lot of people I pull from, but I think a lot of those guys are of like-mindedness in terms of how they apply things.

My biggest non-football influence ... You know, it may be cliché I guess, but I've known my wife since my freshman year of college. We have two kids together. When we were in college, she battled through a really rare type of cancer for someone in her age bracket, tongue and throat cancer. It was one of those things to where watching her go through that, always seeing how tough she is everyday, it was really eye opening. In a lot of ways, it's one of those things where everyday she's who I compare myself to. She's made me a better person just by having her around and seeing her everyday. ... If she's proud of what I did that day, I know it was a good day because she's such a selfless and strong person. She's amazing to me.

I'd describe my work style as ... I'm a put-your-head-down-and-work guy. I'm strategic with what I do. I think through what I do. I analyze what I do. But my style as a coach and as a person is someone who pulls from his experiences, but also pulls from the scientific information that's out there. I like to put a program together that's unique for the guys, but meets all the standards and criteria of a Coach Andersen program. How I work everyday is I want to work hard. I want to feel good everyday about the effort and the energy I'm putting in.

I wanted to come to OSU because ... Coach (Andersen) has always done a great job communicating and being up front. He told me he wanted to be here. You know, this will be a decade coming up of us being together. I knew I wanted to be with him. I always knew this was a great place back in Utah. We played Oregon State in '07 and '08. And when we came up here in '07, just the crowd and the tenacity these guys played with really stood out. It was the same thing when they came to Utah in 2008. That was a heck of a game, a heck of a battle. I've always had respect for this program and respect for this conference. It was one of those things where when he gave me the opportunity, even though our family is from back East, we've always loved the West. It's a chance to live in a great state and a great town, and to have the opportunity to work in the best conference in college football and continue my relationship with Coach Andersen. ... To me, it was a no-brainer. It was an opportunity you can't pass up.

A surprising fact about me is ... that one of my favorite things to do when I have free time and no one is in the house is I'll probably pull up some old movies or old shows. One of my favorite ways to unwind would be to watch episodes of The A-Team or Miami Vice. ... For me, it's just kind of nostalgia. I've always liked action movies and shows. For some reason as a kid, I just always loved those two shows.

By Gina Mizell
The Oregonian February 10, 2015

CORVALLIS — Clutching the metal bar resting on his shoulders behind his head, Ricky Ortiz intensely stares straight ahead and ponders if he's got the energy for one last squat.

"Fourth quarter," Woods barks at Ortiz. "What you got left?"

Enough to finish his set, Ortiz says with his legs as his knees bend one more time. As the Beavers fullback resets the bar, Evan Simon is also nearby. OSU's new head strength and conditioning coach is monitoring and critiquing and jogging -- never walking -- as he moves throughout the Sports Performance Center less than an hour after sunrise on this Thursday morning.

The Beavers don't start spring practice until March. Games are still nearly seven months away. But OSU's winter conditioning program -- which began in early January and will continue through the end of the month -- has served as the players' introduction to their new world under first-year coach Gary Andersen.

The uniforms for these workouts are orange shirts (for offensive players) or black ones (for defensive players) with the motto "Respect the Process" printed on the back. Because these workouts represent Step 1.

"The main thing we're trying to accomplish is to set the standard for the Coach Andersen era," Simon said. " ... What I told the guys is what we do, it's like a house, and strength's the foundation of that house. The foundation only needs to be so big, but it needs to be so strong, as well.

"Right now, we're laying the foundation of an Evan Simon strength program, a Gary Andersen football program, so these things can grow and flourish and be based on a strong foundation moving forward."

Simon and Andersen go back to their days at Utah, when Andersen was defensive coordinator and Simon was the associate director of strength and conditioning. When Andersen was hired as head coach at Utah State, he brought Simon along as director of strength and conditioning. Simon then followed Andersen to Wisconsin, and now OSU.

So Simon sees himself as an extension of Andersen's on-field product, providing physical and mental preparation for the practices and games to come. And this phase of the year-round "process" is built around the concept of "BTA," or Beavers Team Accountability.

The players were drafted into eight teams, led by one new assistant coach and one staffer that stayed at OSU after former coach Mike Riley left for Nebraska. The simple goal? To foster competition, with prizes at stake.

Some of the challenges are traditional tests of strength, speed and agility. Players also earn points for off-the-field successes like taking part in community service, and are docked points for missteps like missing an academic requirement. Yet some tasks fall under the fun or team-building category, such as spirited games of Simon Says, various relay races or a version of the "Whisper Challenge" recently made popular by Tonight Show host Jimmy Fallon, where teammates try to read each others' lips while wearing noise-canceling headphones.

"I don't think we're reinventing the wheel," Simon said. "But Coach Andersen and this whole staff, hopefully myself included, has always had a good gauge of when you've gotta push, when you've got to back down ... (There are) times to do something fun and see how they respond, and times to do things seriously to see how they respond.

"I think it's kind of up and down like a wave, because that's how training is."

The primary physical goal during the winter, Simon details, is to add muscle and set a base aerobic capacity according to position and body size. The spring is about elevating to more intense sprinting and change-of-direction work and maintaining that muscle while helping the body recover after practices. Finally, the summer is the time to maximize strength, power and conditioning through "rest-to-work ratio" sessions that are geared specifically to position requirements during games and to building the necessary stamina to recover in between plays.

For instance, here's a snapshot of a Thursday lower-body-centric workout for offensive skill players:

A short warm-up, including leg lifts while on the back to work the abs and while leaning on the forearms to work the glutes. A trip outside, where fog still lingers as players jump from their knees to their feet before tossing a medicine ball over their head. Then, those sets of squats. Finally, the players move between three stations of sit-ups with weights, one-legged lunges and falling pushups.

In all, the workout takes about an hour and 10 minutes to complete. But the tempo within that time frame is what Woods, a senior running back, cites as the biggest difference between this winter program and the ones under Riley's staff.

"It's rigorous," Woods said. "It's more like a cardio. We're lifting heavy and lifting fast. With the runs, we're competing. It's way more competition with everything, as it should be ... That's how you get the best out of everybody, in my opinion."

As the offensive skill players finish up -- they'll still throw and run routes on their own later -- the linebackers and defensive backs congregate just inside the door. They bounce around and groove to the hip-hop music blasting through the speakers, acting quite jovial for a group about to get physically worked.

Simon quickly meets with those players, then jogs -- not walks -- to the other side of the room. The warm-up, this part of "the process," begins again.

And it's a process the Beavers hope will carry through the spring and beyond as they begin the Andersen era.

"We know that your team is built right now," Woods said. " ... In a sense (the coaches are) just asking you to just be a beast 24/7 and they're holding us very accountable ...

"I just think, with what we're doing and where we're going, that by the time fall camp rolls around, it'll be a totally new Beaver team with a new mentality."

Zach Nyborg was named the associate athletic director/chief of staff for football Dec. 22, 2014. He serves on the department's senior staff, manages and allocates all aspects of the football budget, and coordinates all support areas.

Nyborg spent the previous year at BYU as the assistant athletic director/director of football operations. He was a member of the Cougars' senior leadership council and coordinated all aspects of the football program, including recruiting, team travel, game and weekly scheduling, roster management and player personnel among other duties. The Cougars went 8-5 and participated in the inaugural Miami Beach Bowl.

From January 2013 thru May 2014 he was the director of football operations at the University of Wisconsin for then Badgers head coach Gary Andersen. While with Wisconsin he coordinated all aspects of the program, including recruiting, team travel, game and weekly scheduling, roster management and player personnel. Wisconsin went 9-4 in 2013 and appeared in the New Year's Day Capital One Bowl.

Nyborg began his professional career as an offensive and special teams administrative assistant at Utah State University for then Coach Andersen in 2010. He was the team's defensive administrative assistant in 2011 and in 2012 was promoted to offensive graduate assistant for quarterbacks, recruiting coordinator and assistant to the head coach. During his tenure, USU climbed into the top 25 and played in the Famous Idaho Potato Bowl twice (2011 & '12); The Aggies hadn't appeared in a bowl game previous since 1993.

The Centerville, Utah native spent two seasons as an assistant coach at Timpview High School in Provo while earning a bachelor's degree from BYU in business management from the Marriott School of Management.

Nyborg was a three-sport athlete at Viewmont High School in Bountiful, Utah, lettering in football, basketball, and track & field. He earned all-region honors as a quarterback and was a team captain for one season. He was also a two-year captain for the track & field team and an academic all-state selection in basketball.

My first football memory is ... Fifth grade football, I guess. My dad was the coach. I played quarterback, corner and returner. You know, it was just one of those things where you had your dad screaming at you if you threw a pick. But it was a lot of fun. I played with all my buddies. You'd take recess at the elementary school out to the football field and start knocking people around. ... Of course, every kid has the dream of being Steve Young. At least, that's who it was for me. I wanted to be Steve Young.

I knew I wanted to work in football when ... I was on my mission for the LDS church. I went from 2006-2008 in Knoxville, Tennessee. So you have a companion who you go around with. The guy I was with, his dad was the head coach at Timpview High School in Provo. The dad's name was Louis Wong. It was one of the premier high school programs in Utah. While I was on my mission, they won two consecutive state championships. So getting to know his dad through that process was great. He offered me a job without ever meeting me (in person). ... He was like, "Why don't you come back and coach for me?" I was thinking about it, and I was like, "That's a great idea." I was going to BYU for school anyway. So I came home from the mission and I was working the next day.

My biggest football influence is ... Gary Andersen. He puts kids first, and he wants to make a difference in the lives of other people. It's not just athletically, but academically. Our goal is to help kids not only get a degree, but prepare for them for life. And that has to do with socially, too. So it is about academically, socially and athletically helping them change from a young man into a grown man. Then let's win as many football games as we can. That's important for me to have kids be educated, to help them be good citizens and then win a lot of football games because that's fun.

My biggest non-football influence is ... My family. I have seven nieces and a nephew. I look at every decision I make, and I think, Would I ever put my parents in a situation where they'd have to explain to those young kids why I made a decision that doesn't uphold who I am as a person? So my family would probably be the biggest influence.

I'd describe my work style as ... Collaborative. It's managing tasks with relationships. It's also about getting a lot of work done. I believe in work hard, play hard. Make sure you take care of things the best way you can.

I wanted to come to OSU because ... I wanted to get the band back together. We have a tremendous staff. But I also understood the vision and the plan that we have. Something that really stuck out to me, too, was the ability to have a facility renovation. I wanted to have my hand in that because that's something that's been on my bucket list as a professional. But yeah, to get back with the band and make a difference.

A surprising fact about me is ... I got a Harley and I love the heck out of it. I'm excited to ride the Harley out to the coast. So if anyone knows a good Harley ride, let me know. I just got it in June. It's been a lot of fun.

2013-2014: Assistant Athletics Director/ Student-Athlete Academic Services

Jason Thomas has over 13 years of athletic experience, which includes four as a student-athlete and nine as an athletics professional at the Division I intercollegiate level. As a student-athlete at Utah State University, Thomas was afforded the opportunity to gain first-hand experience of the rigorous academic and athletic demands placed on student-athletes. His involvement within Utah State's Student-Athlete Mentor program (SAMs), a peer mentor program, allowed for the development of personal relationships with the coaching staff, campus and community leaders, and student-athletes.

Upon graduation, Thomas was hired at Utah State as a Graduate Intern within Student-Athlete Academic Services (SAAS). As a member of the SAAS staff, he initially served as the head study hall monitor. In this position, he facilitated the study hall program by supervising and monitoring student-athletes, as well as academic tutors and mentors. Upon the completion of his graduate studies, Thomas was moved into a full-time professional position within SAAS, where he served as the academic coordinator and sports counselor for women's basketball, men's and women's track and field, and men's and women's tennis. Within this role, Thomas was responsible for academic programming related to study hall and tutoring. He also created and implemented USU's initial academic mentoring program. Shortly after, Thomas was promoted to assistant director of Student-Athlete Academic Services. With this promotion came additional responsibilities and new sport counselor assignments; Thomas began overseeing football and women's basketball academic support, initial and continuing eligibility and recruiting. In addition, Thomas continued to assist in all other areas of the academic support unit. He was then promoted to an Assistant Athletics Director where he continued his duties as the assistant director of the unit and, in addition, served as a member of the athletics senior staff.

He was appointed Oregon State's director of football operations and student services Dec. 22, 2014. His role provides administrative support and program management for the team.

Thomas spent the 2014 season as the director of football operations at the University of Wisconsin, coordinating all aspects of team travel, managing the team's budget and supervising support staff and student employees.

He is a 2005 graduate of Utah State, graduating cum laude, with a bachelor's degree in human resource management and marketing. He earned his master's degree from USU in corporate wellness in 2008. He and his wife Dayna Barrett, a former Utah State track and field athlete, have two children – Ezekiel and Asher.

My first football memory is ... I broke my foot my junior year, first game of the season. I came back in the third game, about three and a half weeks later. We were playing Fontana. We hadn't beaten Fontana in nine years. I'll never forget it. Coach Hoover, who had won a national championship at UMass, was our head coach. He called a play that basically kept me in at the line of scrimmage. I was flanked out at tight end, and I wasn't supposed to release. But he called a route attached to it, so I didn't really know what to do. I instinctively just kind of released. The quarterback was scrambling. I took it down 45 yards for a touchdown. I guess the memory of it was my dad had a dream the night before that I was going to score a touchdown. It happened. I'll never forget that.

I knew I wanted to work in football when ... Well, I don't think it was that I wanted to work in football. It was that I wanted to work in athletics. I played baseball all of my life. You know, also basketball and football. As I moved into high school, I kind of wanted to specialize. Early on, I was a bigger kid. Everyone thought I was going to be around 6-9. I kind of stopped at 6-3, so I kind of figured that basketball probably wasn't the best fit for me. ... I just had a love for athletics as a whole, and I knew that I wanted to stay in the profession regardless. I think it was for me. It was that I'm a competitor. And the ability to put yourself into that situation at all times was a driving factor for me. Then just a love for football. I enjoy football. I'm a fan of the game. I've always been a big fan of the game. But really, just the ability to work in athletics.

My biggest football influence is ... The late Jeff Hoover, who recruited me out of Utah State. He just was a great man. He gave me a chance. I tore my ACL my senior year of high school, the second game of the season. I had all my trips lined up, and I was definitely realizing the business nature of athletics at that point. A lot of institutions kind of dropped me. Utah State's Coach Hoover stayed. He gave me a shot. ... I will always be indebted to him for that. He believed in me after all these other schools kind of moved on after my injury.

My biggest non-football influence is ... My mom. Her name is Crystal Taylor-Thomas. My mom, she sacrificed for us, for me, my brother and my sister. And that's not to take anything away from dad. He's a great person as well. I just think I just have a special bond with my mom. When I tore my ACL my senior year, I remember being in tears and crying on the sideline. I'll never forget the words. She whispered in my ear and said, "Do you trust Him?" She was referring to trust in God. I'll never forget that. We always go back to that moment of, "Do you trust Him?" But I think it's bigger than that. Do you trust that there's truly a plan for your life? That's what she's instilled in me.

I'd describe my work style as ... I kind of try to be all things to all people. I think that you need to have the ability to meet people where they're at. It all comes down to building relationships in life as a whole. I think my ability to build relationships, deep and meaningful relationships, allows me to help people move through whatever they're moving through in life.

I wanted to come to OSU because ... Anytime there's change, you're going to be a little uncomfortable. But that's not necessarily a bad thing. I think anytime you're uncomfortable, you're going to be stretched. You know, meet new people and experience new things.

A surprising fact about me is ... I'm a musician. Me and my wife, we led at our church in Logan for a long time. I play bass, I sing, I do Christian rap and I've opened up for some pretty big bands.

My first football memory is ... When I was a little kid, we went to my first college game. That's my first real memory. It was 1988, and it was Utah-BYU. In Utah, especially at that time, everyone was BYU fans because they had just won the national championship and most people in my area were LDS. I went to the game as a BYU fan. I'm a little 7-year-old kid, and Utah just drilled them. It was the first time they had beaten BYU in like 10 years. I remember 56-28 was the final score. Ever since then, I loved football. I got into football. My dad was a college football player, my grandpa was a college football player.

I knew I wanted to work in football ... My senior year of high school, I was going to go to Utah to be a walk-on long snapper. I wasn't going to be very good. I was a good snapper, but I wasn't going to be a good college football player. ... I knew I wasn't going to be very good, and I said, "You know what? I love football, and I want to be involved in college football." I called Coach (Ron) McBride and just said, "Hey Coach, I'd like to work for the team instead of play for the team." This was the summer right before I was supposed to come in. He said, "I'll call you back." And he called me back, and he said, "How about I give you a scholarship to work in the football office?" Instead of being a bad walk-on, I got a scholarship to go be in the football office. It was (a pleasant surprise). It was unbelievable to be 18 years old and be working in a football office. And it was different than it is now. We have a lot of support here at Oregon State. There's a lot of people running around the building and in the football office to help. At the University of Utah, it was myself, one other guy that filmed and the director of football operations. That was about it to do everything. And it just so happened that that was Coach (Gary) Andersen's first year as the D-line coach. That was 1997.

My biggest football influence is ... Well, there's probably three that I could say. The first one would probably be my grandfather. You know, listening to his stories of the old days. He played for the University of Wyoming. He was an outstanding high school coach in Wyoming. He won the state championship. So he was probably one I would say. Then the next would probably be Ron McBride. He was the coach of the University of Utah from 1990-2002. He's a great man. He's still down in Salt Lake and involved. He's a great guy, and I think a lot of people will tell you the same thing. Ron McBride is one of the best guys you'll ever meet. Then I had an opportunity to work for a gentlemen, he's actually the associate athletic director now at Arizona State University. His name is Tim Cassidy. I had the opportunity to work under him at Nebraska. He was in the same role there. He's as good as there is in this business. He was a great role model for me, and he taught me the professional ropes. I wouldn't be sitting here if it weren't for him as well.

My biggest non-football influence ... I would say is those three guys (mentioned above) probably shaped my life the most to where it's at. In my life, there's really not a lot of non-football influences. ... Growing up, when your dad was a college football player and your grandpa was, it's like, "What else is there?"

I'd describe my work style as ... I like to get in early. I like to work hard when I'm here. I like to grind. I can tell you being creative is a big part of my job. It comes and goes in spurts. I'd describe it as just that I'm a hard worker. I wake up early, I work hard when I'm here and I don't think of it like work. The two funnest things for me are finding the young men and then getting them on campus after they've signed their NLIs.

I wanted to come to OSU because ... Well, I'd like to think I was one of the first people Coach Andersen talked to about coming here. I can't confirm that. Coach approached me with an opportunity, and it was a no-brainer. Coach, I'll follow him wherever. We could go to the University of Antarctica, and I'd go with him. So when he said, "Vince, I'm going to Oregon State University," I was fired up. I knew that getting an opportunity to go to the Pac-12 and for us, getting back out west at a school that has had success, and to be able to be able to be part of building something back up rather than just maintaining something, I was like, "Oh man, this is awesome. This is literally like a dream come true for me." I was like, "Let's go." Then I was on the plane with him the next day.

A surprising fact about me is ... I'm 36 years old, but my favorite kind of music is smooth jazz. I find it extremely relaxing. I'm an '80s soft-hit and R&B junkie. ... I listen to whatever is on. I like to stay current, but my favorite thing to just turn on when I'm on Pandora is just smooth jazz. I like to just turn that on and chill out.

Zak Bigelow joined the Oregon State football program in January of 2015 as the assistant director of football operations. His duties include the assisting in the day-to-day administration of the program, including team travel, recruiting travel, budgetary management, and serving as a liaison with various support departments.

Bigelow came to OSU from the University of Northern Colorado, where he served two seasons as the football team's director of football operations for the Big Sky Conference program. While at UNC he oversaw the team's budget, team travel, housing, meals, purchasing and other logistics. He also was responsible for social media, on-campus recruiting, fundraising efforts and special events coordination.

Prior to his position at UNC, he spent nearly three years as a graduate assistant coach at the University of Tulsa. For the 2012 season he served on the defensive staff that helped the Golden Hurricane capture the 2012 Conference USA title and defeat Iowa State in the Liberty Bowl. In 2011, he was an offensive graduate assistant and coached the special teams for a team that played in the Armed Forces Bowl. He coached 2011 honorable mention All-American placekicker Kevin Fitzpatrick and Conference USA Freshman Punter of the Year Cole Way.

The Littleton, Colo., native started his professional career in 2010 as the offensive quality control coach at UNC while concluding requirements for his bachelor's degree in business management, graduating Summa Cum Laude from the Montfort School of Business. He was named the Big Sky Conference Scholar Athlete of the Year in 2010 and appeared on the league's all-academic team three times. He later earned his master's degree from the University of Tulsa in 2013, Magna Cum Laude.

As a student-athlete placekicker at UNC, he was a three-year letterman. He was named the Big Sky Conference Player of the Week after making three field goals against Montana State in 2007 in the Bears' first ever Big Sky victory in their inaugural season as a conference member.

PORTLAND STATE 14

Reser Stadium
Corvallis, Ore. • Aug. 30, 2014

Weather — 68 degrees; Wind 9 mph SW; Cloudy

CORVALLIS — Senior quarterback Sean Mannion ran for one touchdown, passed for another and threw for 328 total yards to lead Oregon State's 29-14 victory over Portland State.

An opening-day crowd of 40,309 saw the Beavers (1-0) parlay five second-half turnovers into 16 unanswered points to erase a 14-13 halftime deficit.

Redshirt freshman placekicker Garrett Owens added five field goals and a two extra points in his debut and became the first player in school history with more than three field goals in his first game. The Beavers (1-0) improved to 4-0 in the all-time series, which dates back to 1983.

Mannion completed 26 of 45 passes to eight different receivers and did not have an interception. He passed the 300-yard mark for the 10th time in his last 14 games, for the 18th time overall, and increased his career total to 10,764 yards.

Senior safety Tyrequek Zimmerman had his first two career interceptions to lead a defense that cracked down in the second half to hold the Vikings (0-1), one of the top offensive teams in FCS in 2013, to no points and 40 total yards over the final 30 minutes.

Senior tailback Storm Woods rushed for 126 yards on 16 carries and added a 23-yard TD reception with 5:07 left in the third quarter that sent the Beavers in front 23-14. It was his fourth career 100-yard game, and his second in a row. He gained 107 against Boise State in the 2013 Hawai'i Bowl.

Owens, whose 26-yard field goal with 10:58 in the third quarter put OSU ahead to stay at 16-14, subsequently added 31- and 23-yard field goals for the final margin. His seven attempts were a school record.

Tight end Connor Hamlett had five receptions for 88 yards. Victor Bolden added five catches for 55 yards, Richard Mullaney five for 42.

OSU took a 3-0 lead at 8:04 of the first quarter when Owens drilled a 25-yard field goal in his first collegiate attempt. A 35-yard Mannion-to-Hamlett hookup set up the kick.

Owens hit from 25 yards again at 1:12 of the first quarter for a 6-0 advantage. A career-long 50-yard Woods run on a third-and-20 play from the OSU 12 moved the Beavers into scoring position.

PSU went ahead 7-6 on a 58-yard run by quarterback Paris Penn but the Beavers answered with an 82-yard scoring drive to take a 13-7 lead. Mannion scrambled the last six yards on a third-and-goal for the go-ahead points with 9:36 left in the second quarter.

Penn scored again on an 11-yard run for a 14-13 PSU advantage with 3:50 remaining in the second quarter. The Vikings took that lead into the locker room when Owens missed wide-right on a 50-yard field goal on the half's final play.

HAWAI'I 30

Honolulu, Hawai'i • Sept. 6, 2014

Weather — 90 degrees; Wind 10 mph NE; Partly cloudy

HONOLULU — Senior quarterback Sean Mannion threw three touchdown passes and Oregon State defeated Hawai'i 38-30 at Aloha Stadium.

Mannion completed 26 of 37 passes for 300 yards as the Beavers improved to 2-0 heading into the first of their two bye weeks. Tailback Terron Ward rushed for 125 yards and two touchdowns as the Beavers piled up 464 yards of total offense.

"I think when we look at this game we will wish we closed it out better but we made the plays to win and that's what most important," Mannion said. "It was a good experience to come into a good environment and beat a tough team."

The Beavers never trailed and led 38-7 entering the fourth quarter before the Rainbow Warriors (0-2) rallied for 23 unanswered points. However, an onside kick with 1:35 remaining failed and the Beavers ran out the clock.

OSU took a 7-0 lead at 10:12 of the first quarter on Mannion's 4-yard TD pass to Richard Mullaney. A fumble recovery that ended a Hawai'i drive at the OSU 16, and long completions to Victor Bolden (40) and Connor Hamlett (37) set up the score.

Hamlett made it 14-0 at 6:15 with a 5-yard TD reception from Mannion. Ward's 35-yard run positioned the Beavers for the touchdown. OSU increased that lead to 21-0 at 13:30 of the second quarter on Ward's 32-yard TD run.

Hawai'i parlayed an interception into a touchdown to cut OSU's lead to 21-7. But Garrett Owens' 27-yard field goal with 6:12 left in the half gave the Beavers a 24-7 lead and Ward scored on a 2-yard run with 1:31 remaining for a 31-7 intermission advantage.

"We were sharp and we did a lot of good things," OSU coach Mike Riley said of the first half, when OSU outgained Hawaii 348-111 and outrushed the Warriors 141-44.

Mannion's 7-yard TD pass to Bolden on the first possession of the second half made it 38-7. OSU then held on for its fourth straight win in the series it now leads 7-3. It will resume in Honolulu in 2019.

GAME THREE — OREGON STATE VS. SAN DIEGO STATE

SAN DIEGO STATE	7

Reser Stadium
Corvallis, Ore. • Sept. 20, 2014

Weather — 85 degrees; Wind 2 mph W; Clear

CORVALLIS — Tailbacks Terron Ward and Storm Woods each scored twice and Oregon State wore down San Diego State 28-7 before a crowd of 41,339 at Reser Stadium.

Senior quarterback Sean Mannion displaced former OSU star Derek Anderson (2001-04) in first place atop the school career passing yardage list on a 27-yard connection with Hunter Jarmon with 11:20 left in the third quarter that gave him 11,263 yards at that point. He also assumed third place on the all-time Pac-12 list on the same play.

Mannion completed 24 of 31 passes to 10 different receivers for 275 yards and increased his career total to 11,339 yards.

The Beavers did not need a 300-yard performance from Mannion on this night, however. Woods (11-52) and Ward (15-50) combined for 102 rushing yards and the defense completely stifled the Aztecs after surrendering a touchdown their opening drive.

Ward scored on runs of 12 and two yards, Woods on runs of five and two yards. Steven Nelson and Michael Doctor added interceptions and the Beavers had three sacks for 20 yards in losses. SDSU gained 75 yards on its first drive and then had just 140 the rest of the way.

SDSU had three sacks in the first quarter but none thereafter.

SDSU took a 7-0 lead with 11:27 left in the first quarter on a 2-yard scoring run by tailback Donnel Pumphrey. OSU replied with Ward's 12-yard run with five seconds left in the first quarter to even the score 7-7. Mannion's 32-yard hookup with Jarmon was the big play on the 70-yard drive.

Ward scored again on a 2-yard run with 27 seconds remaining in the first half to give the Beavers a 14-7 intermission lead. Mannion's 49-yard pass to Rahmel Dockery on the previous play positioned OSU for the go-ahead score.

Woods' 5-yard TD run made it 21-7 with 9:58 left in the third quarter. The record-setting pass to Jarmon set up the score. A 2-yard TD run by Woods made it 28-7 with 1:16 left in the third quarter and completed the scoring.

GAME FOUR — OREGON STATE AT #18 USC

Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum
Los Angeles, Calif. • Sept. 27, 2014

Weather — 69 degrees; Wind 8 mph WSW; Partly Cloudy

LOS ANGELES — Southern California scored the final 28 points of the game and the 18th-ranked Trojans defeated Oregon State 28-10 at the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum.

It was the first loss for the Beavers (3-1, 0-1 Pac-12), whose four-game winning streak over the past two seasons was snapped in their Pac-12 Conference opener.

Ryan Murphy's 97-yard kickoff return in the first quarter accounted for OSU's lone touchdown. Trevor Romaine added a 45-yard field goal that gave OSU a short-lived 10-7 advantage in the second quarter.

Senior quarterback Sean Mannion completed 15 of 32 passes for 123 yards. He was intercepted twice and remained tied with former USC star Carson Palmer for 13th on the Pac-12's all-time passing touchdown list with 72.

Junior tailback Storm Woods led OSU's ground attack with 61 yards on nine carries. Junior Richard Mullaney had a team-high five receptions for 78 yards.

The Trojans (3-1, 2-0 Pac-12) took a 7-0 lead on a 31-yard interception return by Su'a Cravens with 5:11 left in the first quarter. But Murphy returned the ensuing kickoff 97 yards for a touchdown to make it 7-7 after Romaine's PAT.

Romaine then sent the Beavers ahead 10-7 with a 45-yard field goal at 11:14 of the second quarter. USC surged in front to stay, 14-10, on Cody Kessler's 16-yard TD pass to Justin Davis with 7:16 left in the half.

The Trojans scored again on a 48-yard Kessler-to-Darreus Rogers Hail Mary pass on the final play of the first half to go ahead 21-10 and added a clinching score early in the fourth quarter.

GAME FIVE — OREGON STATE AT COLORADO

COLORADO	31

Boulder, Colo. • Oct. 4, 2014

Weather — 60 degrees; Wind 20 mph SE; Rainy

BOULDER, Colo. — Senior tailback Terron Ward rushed for 102 yards and scored twice to spark a potent ground attack that powered Oregon State to a 36-31 win over Colorado at Folsom Field.

Ward scored OSU's opening touchdown on a 1-yard run in the first quarter and then added the clinching score on a 10-yard run with 5:09 remaining. After a Colorado score and an OSU punt, the Beavers stiffened defensively and stopped Colorado's final drive at the OSU 40-yard line with 1:48 remaining and then ran out the clock.

The win improved the Beavers to 4-1 overall and 1-1 in the Pac-12. The Buffaloes dropped to 2-4 overall, 0-3 in the Pac-12.

"It feels great to come out here and get a win against a tough team in a tough environment," senior quarterback Sean Mannion said. "We handled the road well. Everyone is satisfied with the way we played and the fact we won."

Ward needed just 12 carries to compile his second 100-yard game of the season and averaged 8.5 yards per carry. Junior tailback Storm Woods added 69 yards and a touchdown on 13 carries; the Beavers rushed for 189 yards on 27 carries, not including sacks.

Mannion also became the 24th quarterback in Pac-12 history with 1,000 or more completions with a 9-yard connection with Richard Mullaney in the first quarter. He now ranks 21st all-time with 1,023 completions.

OSU led 14-0 in the first quarter following short scoring runs by Ward and Woods. Trevor Romaine added 38- and 33-yard field goals but the Buffaloes rallied and took a 21-20 halftime lead with 43 seconds left before the break.

OSU took the lead for good, 23-21, on Romaine's 47-yard field goal with 6:47 to play in the third quarter. Mannion added a 24-yard TD pass and Ward's second TD in the fourth quarter stretched the lead to 36-24 as the Beavers held on for their first Pac-12 win since a 49-17 rout of California in Berkeley on Oct. 19, 2013.

Tight ends Connor Hamlett (6-52) and Caleb Smith (4-67) combined for 10 receptions. Victor Bolden returned after missing the Sept. 27 USC game with a dislocated pinkie finger and had six catches for 38 yards and two runs for 18 more.

GAME SIX — OREGON STATE VS. #20 UTAH

OREGON STATE	23

Reser Stadium
Corvallis, Ore. • Oct. 16, 2014

Weather — 61 degrees; Wind 3 mph NW; Clear

CORVALLIS — Quarterback Sean Mannion moved into second place on the Pac-12's all-time passing yardage list in a 29-23 double-overtime loss to No. 20 Utah (5-1 overall, 2-1 Pac-12) in the Pac-12 before a crowd of 40,479 at Reser Stadium.

The Beavers (4-2, 1-2) tied the game 16-16 on Trevor Romaine's 49-yard field goal on the final play of regulation, and pulled even again at 23-23 on Mannion's 2-yard touchdown pass to Jordan Villamin on fourth down in the first overtime.

However, the Beavers missed a field goal in the second overtime and Utah's Devontae Booker scored on a 19-yard run to end the game. Booker rushed for 229 yards on 33 carries and scored three times.

Mannion completed 21 of 37 passes for 272 yards and two touchdowns and supplanted former USC star Carson Palmer (1998-2002) on the Pac-12 career passing yardage list.

Mannion passed Palmer on a 52-completion to Victor Bolden with 3:21 remaining in the third quarter. It was the longest reception of Bolden's career.

Utah led 9-6 through three quarters on the strength of three Andy Phillips field goals. However, on the third play of the fourth quarter, Mannion hit Villamin in stride down the left sideline and the redshirt freshman broke a tackle and dashed into the end zone with the go-ahead score.

The Utes went back ahead 16-13 with 4:06 remaining on Booker's 1-yard run on fourth-and-goal. It completed a 94-yard, nine-play drive.

OSU then drove to the Utah 32 and called timeout with two seconds to play. Romaine then made a 49-yard field goal – one yard shy of his all-time best – to force the second straight overtime game between the teams.

Each team then scored a touchdown in the first overtime.

OSU also tied the game on the final play of the first half, when Romaine nailed a 45-yard field goal after twice being iced by Utah timeouts for a 6-6 standoff. Earlier in the quarter he converted from 37 yards.

GAME SEVEN — OREGON STATE AT STANFORD

Stanford Stadium
Stanford, Calif. • Oct. 25, 2014

Weather — 69 degrees; Wind - 15 mph SE; Partly cloudy

STANFORD, Calif. — Quarterback Sean Mannion moved closer to the Pac-12 Conference's career passing yardage record but the Beavers fell 38-14 to Stanford at Stanford Stadium.

Mannion completed 14 of 30 passes for 122 yards and remained in second place with 12,134 yards.

The Beavers (4-3 overall, 1-3 Pac-12) were held to 221 yards by the Cardinal (5-3, 3-2 Pac-12), who lead the conference in total defense. Stanford won its fifth straight game in the series.

Stanford took a 7-0 lead on its first possession and was marching for a second when safety Ryan Murphy grabbed his first interception of the season. Following an OSU punt, linebacker Michael Doctor returned another interception to the Stanford 5-yard line and tailback Chris Brown powered over on the next play for a 7-7 tie with 2:03 left in the first quarter.

However, Stanford scored the final 21 points of the first half to take a 28-7 intermission lead. The Cardinal added 10 more unanswered points in the second half before OSU tailback Damien Haskins scored on a 1-yard run with 3:54 to play on his first career carry for the final margin.

That touchdown was set up by quarterback Luke Del Rio's 52-yard completion to Hunter Jarmon, a career-long for both players. Del Rio was 4-for-8 for 87 yards in his first meaningful game action.

Fullback Ricky Ortiz blocked a punt in the third quarter. It was OSU's first such play since Oct. 8, 2011, when Clayton York blocked a punt for a touchdown in a 37-27 victory against Arizona at Reser Stadium.

GAME EIGHT — OREGON STATE VS. CALIFORNIA

CALIFORNIA 45
OREGON STATE 31

Reser Stadium
Corvallis, Ore. • Nov. 1, 2014

Weather — 49 degrees; Wind 1 mph SSE; Partly cloudy

CORVALLIS, Ore. – Quarterback Sean Mannion set the Pac-12 Conference's career passing yardage record but California downed the Beavers 45-31 before a Homecoming crowd of 42,479 at Reser Stadium.

Mannion set the yardage record with 14:02 remaining in the game on a 15-yard completion to tight end Connor Hamlett. That gave him 12,334 yards, eclipsing the old record of 12,327, established by ex-USC star Matt Barkley from 2009-12.

Overall Mannion was 30-for-45 for 320 yards and two touchdowns, stretching his record total to 12,454 yards. He moved ahead of Keith Price (75) and Alex Brink (76) into 10th place on the Pac-12 career list with 77 touchdown passes.

The Beavers (4-4 overall, 1-4 Pac-12) exploded for 21 unanswered points in the third and fourth quarters to erase a 27-10 deficit. Tailback Terron Ward's 16-yard run with 12:02 remaining gave OSU the lead 31-28.

However, the Bears (5-4 overall, 3-4 Pac-12) replied with 17 straight points in the final 8:42 for their first win at Reser Stadium since 2006.

Tailback Storm Woods had a 49-yard run and gained 78 yards on nine carries. Ward added 53 yards and a touchdown on eight carries.

Wide receiver Victor Bolden matched his career high with 11 receptions for 119 yards. Wide receiver Jordan Villamin established career highs for catches (9) and yards (140) and a touchdown.

Cal led 3-0 after one quarter on a 41-yard field goal by James Langford with 1:19 left in the period. He also missed a 50-yarder on Cal's opening possession.

Oregon State went ahead briefly, 7-3, on Mannion's 3-yard touchdown pass to Rahmel Dockery early in the second quarter. But Cal bracketed Trevor Romaine's 30-yard field goal with 14- and 21-yard TD runs by Daniel Lasco and added Langford's 26-yard field goal with 14 seconds left for a 20-10 intermission lead.

GAME NINE — OREGON STATE VS. WASHINGTON STATE

OREGON STATE 32

Reser Stadium
Corvallis, Ore. • Nov. 8, 2014

Weather — 47 degrees; Wind calm; Cloudy/foggy

CORVALLIS — Quarterback Sean Mannion threw for 419 yards but Oregon State fell 39-32 to Washington State before a Dad's Weekend crowd of 44,377 at Reser Stadium.

The Cougars (3-7, 2-5 Pac-12) scored twice in the fourth quarter to erase a 25-24 deficit for their first victory at Reser Stadium since 2006. The Beavers (4-5, 1-5) had won 7 of the previous 8 games in the series.

Mannion was 31-for-41 for one touchdown without an interception and assumed sole possession of ninth on the Pac-12 career list with 78 touchdown passes.

Freshman placekicker Garrett Owens was 4-for-4 on field goals (24, 37, 44, 46) in his third career start. His 46-yarder was a career-long.

The Beavers rallied from a 24-16 second-half deficit to take a 25-24 on Owens' 47-yard field goal with 14:15 to play, but they couldn't hold the Cougars off.

OSU jumped to a 10-0 first-quarter lead on Mannion's 14-yard TD pass to Connor Hamlett and a 24-yard field goal by Owens. The Cougars rallied behind three Luke Falk touchdown passes that offset two more Owens' field goals, and took a 21-16 halftime advantage.

The Cougars answered again on another Falk TD pass and a two-point conversion to surge ahead 32-25 with 11:01 remaining. Falk's fifth TD pass, with 5:07 remaining, made it 39-25 and offset Terron Ward's TD with 3:00 to play that trimmed the lead to 39-32.

The Beavers never got the ball back, however, as WSU got two first downs and ran out the clock. Falk was 44-for-61 for 471 yards and five touchdowns in his first career start.

ARIZONA STATE	27

Reser Stadium
Corvallis, Ore. • Nov. 15, 2014

Weather — 34 degrees; Wind 8 mph N; Clear

CORVALLIS — Quarterback Sean Mannion threw two second-half touchdown passes and Michael Doctor returned an interception 35 yards for the clinching score as Oregon State upended No. 7 Arizona State 35-27 at Reser Stadium.

It was OSU's (5-5, 2-5 Pac-12) first victory over a ranked team since a 27-20 win over UCLA at the Rose Bowl on Sept. 22, 2012. OSU's last win over a top-10 team was a 29-27 upset of No. 9 Arizona on Oct. 9, 2010; its last home win over a top-10 team was a 27-21 victory over No. 1 USC on Sept. 25, 2008.

Senior linebacker D.J. Alexander sacked ASU quarterback Taylor Kelly for a 13-yard loss on a 4th-and-2 from the ASU 33-yard line with 1:10 to play to end ASU's final drive. OSU took three knees to end the game and thousands in the crowd of 40,525 stormed the field.

Senior tailback Terron Ward (148) and junior tailback Storm Woods (125) combined for 273 rushing yards and established career-bests for their longest run as the Beavers pounded out 247 yards rushing and 498 yards of total offense. The last time two Beavers rushed for 100 yards in the same game was in the 2007 Emerald Bowl against Maryland, when Yvenson Bernard (177) and James Rodgers (115) combined for 292.

Mannion completed 19 of 33 passes for 251 yards and two touchdowns and engineered two second-half scoring drives that erased a 24-14 ASU lead. The Beavers scored 21 of the final 24 points of the game to snap a four-game losing streak.

OSU started quickly as Woods broke free for a 78-yard TD run up the middle on their second snap to give the Beavers a 7-0 lead with 11:17 left in the first quarter. It was their longest run from scrimmage since the 2002 season and their longest play from scrimmage this season.

After an ASU field goal, Ward broke free on a play similar to Woods' and scampered 66 yards for another touchdown with 5:09 left in the quarter. It was also the longest run of his career.

Mannion's 20-yard TD pass to Victor Bolden drew the Beavers within 24-21 with 5:50 left in the third quarter. Another ASU field goal made it 27-21 with 12:43 to play.

Mannion then sent the Beavers ahead 28-27 with a 67-yard scoring strike to Jordan Villamin with 10:55 to play. He set the school record of 80 TD passes on that play, breaking a tie with Derek Anderson.

GAME ELEVEN — OREGON STATE AT WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON	37
OREGON STATE	13

Husky Stadium
Seattle, Wash. • Nov. 22, 2014

Weather — 46 degrees; Wind: None; Mostly cloudy

SEATTLE, Wash. — Jordan Villamin and Victor Bolden combined for 15 catches and 206 yards with two touchdowns but the Beavers were edged, 37-13, by Washington at Husky Stadium.

Villamin scored two touchdowns – a 9-yarder in the first half and a 11-yarder in the third quarter – to give him three scores in his last two games and six on the season.

Bolden, meanwhile, finished with 10 catches for a career-best 145 yards. His tally was buoyed by a 72-yard reception in the second quarter that was a career-long. It helped set up Villamin's first score that cut the Huskies' lead to 10 points at the time.

Sean Mannion, the first Pac-12 Conference quarterback with more than 13,000 passing yards, threw for 314 yards on 30-for-46 passing. His two touchdown strikes to Villamin gave him 82 for his career, tying former Stanford signal caller Andrew Luck for seventh-most in conference history.

Villamin pulled the Beavers to within 10 points in the third quarter when he caught an 11-yard pass by Mannion near the back of the right side of the end zone. He was initially ruled out of the bounds on the fade but after review, it was determined that he managed to get his left foot in bounds.

Villamin finished the night with five receptions for 61 yards.

Ryan Murphy led the Beavers defensively with a career-best 12 tackles. OSU, overall, was credited with six tackles for loss, including two by Dylan Wynn.

Washington jumped out to a 17-0 lead thanks to two first-quarter touchdowns. The first, a 54-yard pass to Jayden Mickens, came four minutes into the game. UW pushed ahead seven minutes later when Dwayne Washington carried the ball for 68 yards.

Cameron Van Winkle hit a field goal from 34 yards out at 10:41 of the second half but OSU answered eight minutes later on a drive that didn't begin with much promise.

Facing 1st and 25 from their own 5, the Beavers threatened when Mannion found Bolden on a 72-yard pass that put OSU deep in the Huskies' territory. A few plays later, he found a streaking Villamin over the middle in the back of the end zone for a 9-yard touchdown strike. It was Villamin's first catch of the night and the last score of the first half.

Bolden caught five passes for 113 yards to lead OSU offensively in the first half, while Storm Woods was a threat on the ground and out of the backfield. He carried the ball nine times for 40 yards and caught five passes for 24 yards.

OREGON	47

Reser Stadium
Corvallis, Ore. • Nov. 29, 2014

Weather — 40 degrees; Wind 3 mph NNE; Clear

CORVALLIS — The 118th version of the Civil War went in favor of Oregon, 47-19, in front of 45,722 at Reser Stadium.

OSU senior quarterback Sean Mannion threw for 162 yards and a touchdown in his final college game to extend his Pac-12 Conference career yardage record to 13,600.

Junior tailback Storm Woods rushed for 128 yards on 22 carries and scored on a 3-yard run. It was his third 100-yard game of the season and the sixth of his career.

Mannion and Hunter Jarmon teamed up on a 20-yard completion in the third quarter for Jarmon's first career TD. Freshman Garrett Owens kicked a 39-yard field goal on the final play of the first half. He was 11 of 13 on the season and made his last seven in a row.

Oregon State added two points in the fourth quarter on an Oregon safety to complete the Beavers' scoring.

OREGON STATE - CAREER: Tyrequek was a three-year starter at safety for the Beavers, making 38 straight starts to finish his career ... he accumulated 266 tackles in his career including seven games of 10 or more ... signed as an undrafted free agent with the Kansas City Chiefs in May. 2014: Tyrequek led the Beavers in tackles for the second straight season with 91 ... registered his first career interception in the season-opener against Portland State, he finished the game with two picks ... picked off his third pass of the season against Arizona State ... tied for the team lead with three interceptions in 2014 ... recorded pass break-ups against California and Washington State ... made a sack against Utah. 2013: Tyrequek missed spring practice with a toe injury ... started all 13 games at strong safety ... led the team with 104 tackles, including three tackles-for-loss ... recorded four passes broken up ... registered the first sack of his career against Colorado ... set career-high with 13 tackles at San Diego State. 2012: Won the starting spot at strong safety when Anthony Watkins was unable to compete during fall camp due to injury ... started all 13 games ... fourth on the team with 63 tackles. 2011: Originally recruited as a wide receiver, he switched to safety at the beginning of the second week of fall camp ... one of 10 true freshmen to play in 2011, an Oregon State record ... played in all 12 games almost exclusively on special teams ... tied for the team lead with eight special teams tackles.

LAWTON: Rated the eighth-best prospect in Oklahoma per Rivals ... in addition to wide receiver, he also played safety ... VYPE Magazine picked Zimmerman to its All-Oklahoma First Team as a defensive back ... the Tulsa World selected him All-Oklahoma as a wide receiver ... The Oklahoman picked him First Team as a defensive back ... as a senior he was the District 6A Wide Receiver of the Year ... SuperPrep listed him the 36th best prospect in the "Midlands (Oklahoma, Missouri, Utah, Colorado, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, New Mexico)" ... played in the Oil Bowl ... in 2010 he caught 37 passes for 619 yards and 12 touchdowns ... on defense he had 61 tackles and 11 interceptions ... he also rushed for 215 yards and two touchdowns on 18 carries ... on defense he had 44 tackles and six interceptions ... as a junior he made 43 receptions for 779 yards and 10 touchdowns ... clocked at 4.4 seconds in the 40 and squats more than 500 pounds.

PERSONAL: Born September 29, 1992 in St. Matthews, South Carolina ... son of Andre Zimmerman and Lovier Miller ... has three siblings, Wykeyhe Walker, Yasmine Walker and Chelsie Miller ... chose OSU because "it's a safe place, is a great school academics-wise and I love the football team" ... majored in human development and family sciences.

BOWL CHAMPIONSHIP SERIES

The Bowl Championship Series (BCS) is a type of "Super Alliance" that was designed in 1997 to match the two top-rated teams in a national championship and to create competitive match-ups in the four other BCS games. The BCS is composed of three variables that comprise a team's standing: the Harris poll, the ESPN/USA Today Coaches poll, and a series of five computer rankings.

2013 — SHERATON HAWAI'I BOWL — OREGON STATE VS. BOISE STATE

BOISE STATE 23

Honolulu, Hawai'i • Dec. 24, 2013

Weather — 81 degrees; Wind 14 mph NE; 58% Humidity

HONOLULU, Hawai'i — Rashaad Reynolds returned two fumbles for touchdowns and the Oregon State offense racked up 454 yards to pace the Beavers to a 38-23 win over Boise State at the 2013 Sheraton Hawai'i Bowl.

The Beavers took the early lead taking a 31-6 advantage into halftime. That was due in large part to the Beavers' defense, which forced two fumbles. Both were returned by Reynolds, who, in his last collegiate game, collected 10 tackles amongst the two fumble returns.

The first fumble return came with OSU up 10-3 in the first quarter after a touchdown reception by Brandin Cooks and field goal by Trevor Romaine. Scott Crichton sacked Boise State quarterback Grant Hedrick, forcing a fumble, which enabled Reynolds to pick the ball up at the Broncos' 3-yard line and make it to the end zone with ease, upping the Beavers' lead to 17-3.

Reynolds scored the game's next touchdown, and in grand fashion, returning the Boise State fumble 70 yards. With the Broncos driving, cornerback Larry Scott forced a fumble from Troy Ware after a short pass. Reynolds picked it up and had a clear path to the end zone.

That momentum carried over to the Oregon State offense, which scored its next two – and final – touchdowns on the ground. The first came on a 9-yard carry from Terron Ward. It came with 2:46 left in the first half and sent OSU to the 25-point lead at the break.

Woods stood out offensively for the Beavers, collecting 107 yards on the ground via 16 carries. He paced the Beavers' ground game, which totaled 195 yards overall.

Sean Mannion passed for 259 yards, with 60 going to Cooks, who reached that figure by way of eight catches. He finished the season with a Pac-12 Conference record 128 receptions as well as 1,730 yards, surpassing USC's Marqise Lee in both categories.

Mannion's 259 passing yards gave him 4,662 for the season, surpassing Washington's Cody Pickett for the most in a single-year by a Pac-12 quarterback. He also tossed 37 touchdowns in 2013, tied for the third-most with Andrew Luck.

TEXAS	31

Alamodome
San Antonio, Texas • Dec. 29, 2012

Weather — Indoors

The Longhorns (9-4) never led before Goodwin scored his second touchdown on a deep post pattern, just a down after Texas converted a fourth-and-1 play to keep its chances alive.

Storm Woods ran for 118 yards and scored two touchdowns for Oregon State (9-4).

Ash was 21 of 33 for 241 yards. Ash sputtered until the fourth quarter, when he went 9 for 11 for 146 yards. Texas had no choice but to stick with the only backups two redshirt freshmen who haven't taken a snap all season.

Oregon State quarterback Cody Vaz was 15 of 28 for 194 yards. The Beavers had negative 4 yards in the fourth quarter as they were muffled by the Longhorns defense that was led by Alex Okafor, who finished with 4 1/2 sacks.

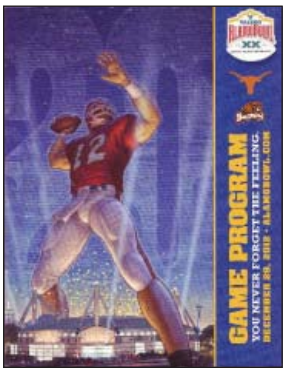

The Valero Alamo Bowl marked the Beavers' 16th bowl game and OSU is 10-6 all-time in them - 5-2 under head coach Mike Riley. The dean of Pac-12 Conference coaches engineered one of the top turnarounds in the nation in 2012, with the Beavers improving to a 9-4 mark after finishing the 2011 campaign at 3-9.

The six-win improvement tied Ohio State and Middle Tennessee for the best win improvements from last season.

Oregon State found itself up 20-10 at halftime and 27-17 entering the fourth quarter but two late Texas touchdowns sealed the come-from-behind win for the Longhorns. Ash found Johnathan Gray from 15 yards out with 8:18 remaining and followed that up with a 36-yard touchdown pass to Marquise Goodwin with just 2:24 left in the game.

2009 — MAACO BOWL LAS VEGAS — OREGON STATE VS. BYU

BYU	44
OREGON STATE	20

Sam Boyd Stadium
Las Vegas, Nev. • Dec. 22, 2009

Weather — 51 degrees, Cloudy, W-37-44 (North)

(AP) - Max Hall threw for 192 yards and three touchdowns leading No. 15 BYU past No. 16 Oregon State 44-20 in the Las Vegas Bowl.

Hall gave the Cougars their third win in five straight bowl appearances in the Sin City and ended the Beavers' run of five consecutive bowl wins.

Hall threw a 25-yard touchdown pass to Luke Ashworth, a 17-yard scoring strike to Dennis Pitta and a 15-yard TD pass to Manase Tonga. He had 139 yards passing in the first half.

Tonga added an 18-yard rushing touchdown, and Harvey Unga finished with 76 yards rushing and a TD for BYU (11-2).

Oregon State (8-5) scored on 1-yard runs by quarterback Sean Canfield and Jacquizz Rodgers, and a 31-yard pass to Damola Adeniji from Ryan Katz. Adeniji led all receivers with seven receptions for 102 yards.

Canfield completed only four passes in the first half as the Beavers struggled to sustain drives. He finished 20 for 41 for 173 yards and an interception.

The normally dependable Rodgers fumbled for the first time in his college career in the first quarter, on his 621st touch, and Matt Bauman returned it 34 yards for the go-ahead score. Officials used replay to see whether Canfield's checkdown toss to Rodgers was a lateral or a forward pass, and upheld the touchdown.

Winds gusted to 50 mph at Sam Boyd Stadium and temperatures fell to 30 degrees. The gusts were so strong that one of Oregon State's punts traveled untouched only 6 yards.

PITTSBURGH 0

Sun Bowl
El Paso, Texas • Dec. 31, 2008

Weather — 48 degrees, Clear, W-9 (South-Southwest)

Three points, 20 punts and 10 sacks. Go ahead and say it was unsightly, but Oregon State coach Mike Riley saw nothing short of a masterpiece.

In the lowest-scoring major bowl game in a half-century, the Beavers shut down No. 20 Pittsburgh 3-0 in the Sun Bowl on Justin Kahut's 44-yard field goal.

"That's the game we were in," Riley said. "We played that game. We ended up winning it. Some people will call it ugly, but I can't."

The defensive struggle went on all day. Pitt kicker Connor Lee tried a 58-yard field goal in the closing minutes but the ball, helped by a steady wind, dropped just short of the crossbar.

"I had more confidence in a 58-yard field goal try than going for it on fourth-and-8," Pitt coach Dave Wannstedt said. "I wanted to give our team a chance. I really thought he could kick it."

Not since Air Force and TCU played to 0-0 standoff in the Cotton Bowl on Jan. 1, 1959, had a bowl produced so few points. It was also the lowest-scoring Sun Bowl since a scoreless tie in 1940 between Catholic and Arizona State.

"We were three downs and out way too much," Riley said. "We put a terrific burden on our defense and we put a lot of burden on the punt team. They came through. That's the game we were in and we played that game. We ended up winning it."

"Guys sulked for a bit," Beavers' defensive end Victor Butler said. "But in the end you've got to get your head in the game. You've got to go play football because the other team wants to play and win just as much as you do."

Pitt (9-4), making its first bowl appearance since the 2004 season and the first under Wannstedt, led the Big East in scoring this season, averaging 29.3 points per game. The Panthers managed just 178 total yards.

"We couldn't get anything on offense started at all," standout tailback LeSean McCoy said. "We played horribly."

There was no sign of offense in El Paso, not with McCoy held to 85 yards rushing after averaging 116.9 yards per game this season. Quarterback Bill Stull was 7-for-24 for 52 yards with one interception.

"When you talk about our defense, that was a beautiful performance against a running back that some said was one of the best in the country," Riley said.

The Beavers also won without their spectacular brothers, tailback Jacquizz Rodgers and receiver James Rodgers, both out with shoulder injuries.

Reserve tailback Jeremy Francis had 76 yards rushing and Moevao was 21-for-42 for 193 yards passing with two interceptions. The Beavers finished with 273 total yards. The Panthers finally got a spark early in the fourth quarter when T.J. Porter returned a punt 36 yards to Oregon State's 42.

But three plays later, the big return was wasted because Butler, who had four sacks, stripped Stull and recovered the fumble.

Oregon State led 3-0 after Kahut connected on his field goal with 2:18 remaining before halftime. He later missed a 37-yard attempt midway through the third period.

The Beavers came up empty on the best touchdown opportunity by either team. Officials ruled tight end John Reese was out of bounds on an apparent 9-yard TD reception 10 seconds before the break.

"This is the game it turned out to be," Riley said. "It didn't have to be 3-0. we missed some red-zone opportunities."

The call was upheld after a replay review, and on the next play, Pitt linebacker Scott McKillop -- the Big East defensive player of the year -- intercepted Moevao's pass in the end zone.

2007 — EMERALD BOWL — OREGON STATE VS. MARYLAND

OREGON STATE 21
MARYLAND 14

AT&T Park
San Francisco, Calif. • Dec. 28, 2007

Weather — 47 degrees, Cloudy

The first meeting between the two programs in the sixth annual Emerald Bowl at AT&T Park proved to be entertaining, but both teams showed some rustiness after the long layoff from the regular season. The game was played in misty turning to rainy conditions as it progressed.

The Beaver defense, which had been fierce in the first quarter allowing just 16 points all season, was surprised as the Terrapins hit for two touchdowns. The Terps went 80 yards on the opening drive of the game culminating in Chris Turner's 9-yard pass to Isaiah Williams.

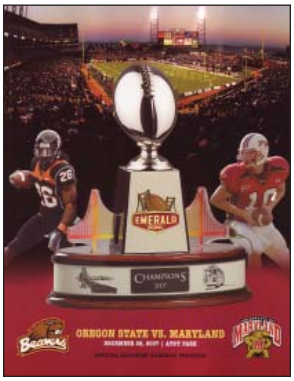

Oregon State answered on the following drive that saw starting quarterback Lyle Moevao being injured and forcing Sean Canfield, who had been out since Nov. 3 at USC, into the game. The lefty tied the score with a 14-yard pass to James Rodgers. Maryland would regain the lead when Turner hit Darrius Heyward-Bey for 63 yards — that was the last of the scoring for the ACC bunch.

Canfield worked the team down the field in the last two minutes of the half before Yvenson Bernard, who would earn offensive MVP of the game, scored from two yards out to tie the game at 14-14.

Neither team mounted much offense in the third quarter until Beaver punt returner Taylor Kavanaugh posted a 26-yard return to the Terps 36 to set up what proved to be the winning score. Bernard took a first down handoff and went 29 yards and two plays later approached the goal line only to fumble, but it was pounced on by Rodgers for the score.

Maryland had just two possessions in the fourth quarter and when the Beavers took over with 6:24 left in the game, it was one of the most memorable drives in school history. The drive didn't amount to any scoring, but OSU picked up six first downs in forcing Maryland to use its final two timeouts.

"I'm really proud of our football team for fighting through a strange game in a lot of ways," coach Mike Riley said. "I thought the defense got stronger and stronger as the game went on. … Offensively, I couldn't describe what the formula is — just getting the ball to Yvenson Bernard and James Rodgers as much as possible."

OREGON STATE	39
MISSOURI	38

Sun Bowl
El Paso, Texas • Dec. 29, 2006

Weather — 48 degrees, Sunny

Oregon State wanted nothing to do with overtime.

Yvenson Bernard pushed into the end zone on a gutsy 2-point conversion run after Joe Newton caught a 14-yard touchdown pass with 22.1 seconds left, and No. 24 Oregon State beat Missouri 39-38 in the 73rd annual Sun Bowl. The win was OSU's third consecutive bowl victory.

The Beavers trailed by 14 points with 12:08 to go before rallying for their eighth victory in nine games. Bernard's 7-yard reception had cut the gap to seven with 6:02 to go.

Tony Temple had 194 yards, four short of the Sun Bowl record, on 20 carries with two touchdowns and Chase Daniel threw two touchdown passes for Missouri (8-5).

Senior quarterback Matt Moore threw four touchdown passes, a Sun Bowl record, and ran for a fifth for Oregon State. He was 5-for-7 for 55 yards on the winning drive, set up after Sammie Stroughter's 38-yard punt return to the Oregon State 46.

Bernard's conversion run came after Missouri called a timeout to freeze kicker Alexis Serna before the extra point. Instead, it gave the Beavers time to persuade coach Mike Riley to go for two - and the gamble paid off.

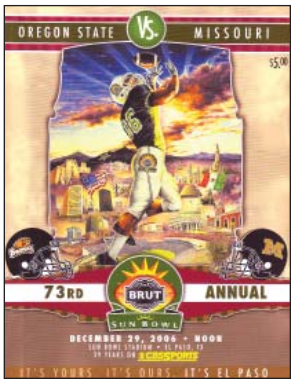

Missouri had seven plays of 29 yards or longer, including Danario Alexander's 74-yard touchdown catch and Temple's 65-yard run. Missouri responded after Oregon State scored on its opening drive of the second half for a 21-17 lead.

Tommie Saunders' 29-yard TD catch from tight end Chase Coffman off a lateral gave the lead back to Missouri and Temple's 65-yard untouched touchdown run seemingly put the Tigers in control at 31-21 with 5:58 in the third.

The victory was the latest in a series of nail-biters for Oregon State, which beat Hawai'i and Oregon by a combined five points in the last two regular-season games.

Moore was 31-for-54 for 356 yards and set a school record of 182 passes without an interception before getting picked off by Brandon Massey in the third quarter. Oregon State retained possession on the play after Massey fumbled.

The longest season in OSU history ended with the Beavers posting the second most victories ever for the program with 10. Oregon State ended the year No. 21 in the final Associated Press Poll, and No. 22 in the final USA Today Poll and Bowl Championship Series standings.

OREGON STATE 38
NOTRE DAME 21

Bank One Ballpark
Phoenix, Ariz. • Dec. 28, 2004

Weather — Indoors

PHOENIX, Ariz — For the second time since 2000 Oregon State and Notre Dame met in a bowl game in the Valley of the Sun. For the second time Oregon State made a statement with a 38-21 win over the Fighting Irish in the 16th annual Insight Bowl at Bank One Ballpark. The game was televised nationally by ESPN and featured an Insight Bowl attendance record of 45,917.

The Beavers, led by senior quarterback Derek Anderson, scored on two of their first three possessions and would eventually build a 21-0 lead midway through the second quarter. Notre Dame fought back to within 24-14 before Anderson put together arguably the best drive of his four-year career. The Scappoose native took OSU on a 90-yard, 12-play drive that concluded on a 1-yard touchdown pass to tight end Joe Newton, the last of two touchdown scores for the sophomore.

The win capped a rags to riches season for the Beavers and fourth-year head coach Mike Riley. OSU began the season 1-4, but rallied to win six of the final seven contests and end the year as one of the hottest teams in the nation.

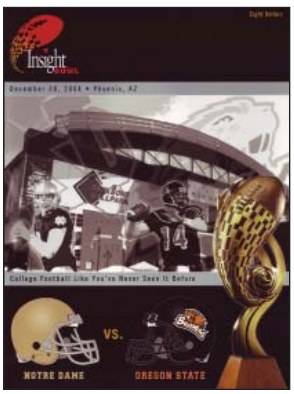

"It was a big game for us," Anderson said. "To bounce back from the start that we had in this season and finish like this, it's huge."

Anderson, the offensive MVP of the Insight Bowl, tied a bowl record with four touchdown passes and turned in the sixth best passing mark in the history of the event with 358 yards. He connected with eight different receivers and was responsible for all but 20 yards of the entire offensive output.

Oregon State's first score was set up by a 52-yard punt return by freshman Sammie Stroughter. The Beavers began the drive at the Irish 27. Four plays later Anderson connected with senior George Gillett for a 12-yard score.

A second freshman set up the Beavers for their next score as Derrick Doggett blocked D.J. Fitzpatrick's punt and recovered on the four-yard line. Anderson found Newton on the second play, after being sacked, to push the lead to 14-0.

The Beavers third score came as Anderson found reserve tight end Dan Haines for 11 yards. Notre Dame desperately responded to stay in the game late in the half, scoring with 56 seconds remaining, on a 13-yard pass from quarterback Brady Quinn to tight end Anthony Fasano.

The second half began with cornerback Aric Williams intercepting Quinn as the Irish were putting together a nice drive that could have closed the gap. Williams' interception led to an Alexis Serna 38-yard field goal to make the score 24-7.

Notre Dame did close the gap to 24-14 after Jerome Collins blocked Sam Paulescu's punt. The Irish's best drive of the game went 49 yards on six plays and was capped by a Darius Walker five-yard touchdown run.

The third quarter ended with OSU leading 24-14 and Notre Dame appeared to have momentum on its side, before Anderson's game breaking 90-yard drive.

Senior tailback Dwight Wright concluded the Beaver scoring on a 2-yard run with 3:19 remaining.

"This team has gained a lot of notoriety for Oregon State," Riley said after the game. "Big games against the two defending national champions (LSU and USC), we didn't win 'em but we certainly had opportunities.

"The big win against our arch rival (Oregon), a nice bowl win, beating all the Northwest schools. I think this team made its mark under some trying times."

For Oregon State it was its third bowl victory in its last four postseason appearances. Junior linebacker Trent Bray, who had a game-high 10 tackles, was named the defensive MVP and Newton earned the ESPN Capital One Player of the Game honor.

2003 — LAS VEGAS BOWL — OREGON STATE VS. NEW MEXICO

NEW MEXICO	14

Sam Boyd Stadium
Las Vegas, Nev. • Dec. 24, 2003

Weather — 58 degrees, Cloudy, Wind Calm

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Mike Riley made his bowl game debut as a head coach a successful one, as Oregon State dominated New Mexico, winning 55-14.

The Beavers' roster was dotted with student-athletes from Las Vegas, and the thought of returning home for a bowl game was exciting, judging from the team's performance.

The Beavers opened the game with the ball and went 83 yards in nine plays for the first score. Quarterback Derek Anderson threw a 34-yard strike to tailback Steven Jackson, one of the Las Vegas boys, for the first of Jackson's bowl game-record-tying five touchdowns. Kirk Yliniemi booted a 21-yard field goal on the next drive, giving OSU a 10-0 lead. New Mexico had no first downs at this point.

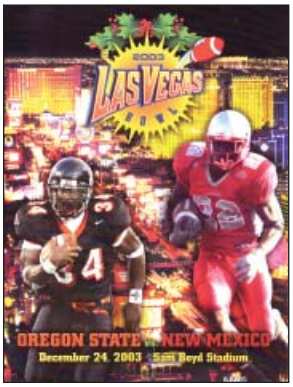

The Lobos used a Brand Ratcliff 40-yard kickoff return to set up their only score of the first three quarters. Quarterback Casey Kelly and Hank Baskett hooked up on a 27-yard pass to make the game 10-7, but that was about it for the Lobo offense for the half.

Oregon State ended the opening quarter with a 17-7 lead, as Anderson hit receiver Mike Hass for 42 yards on the final play of the opening stanza. The Beaver offense had already rolled up 204 yards and 10 first downs, while the Beaver defense had allowed just one first down.

The Beavers made it 24-7 midway through the second quarter on the first of four rushing touchdowns, this one a three-yard romp. Less than two minutes later, thanks to a UNM fumble, Jackson went 11 yards to make the score 31-7, the eventual halftime score.

The first half statistics were staggering. OSU had 17 first downs, UNM one. Total yardage was 308-35.

The Beaver defense once again stymied the Lobo offense on the first possession of the second half, and the Beaver offense extended the margin on its first drive. Jackson accounted for 48 of the 59 yards on the drive, including a six-yard score.

The teams traded punts for most of the remaining third quarter, before Yliniemi's 31-yard field goal made it 41-7 at the end of three.

Jackson added another one-yard score early in the fourth quarter to end his night and ultimately his OSU career — he announced after the game that he was forgoing his final year of college eligibility and entering the NFL Draft. Jackson ended the game with 149 yards rushing. Anderson also sat on the sideline for the rest of the game after passing for 322 yards and two touchdowns.

The teams traded touchdowns to end the game. Reserve quarterback Adam Rothenfluh finished the scoring with a 19-yard pass to Josh Hawkins.

The Beaver defense, led partly by Las Vegas natives Richard Seigler, Jonathan Pollard and Lawrence Turner, limited the Lobos to 127 yards of offense.

OREGON STATE	13

Bank One Ballpark
Phoenix, Ariz. • Dec. 26, 2002

Weather — 46 degrees, Clear, Wind Calm

After heading to the locker room following the first half tied 10-10 with the No. 24 ranked Pittsburgh Panthers, things fell apart for Oregon State in the second half. The Beavers wound up dropping a 38-13 decision to Pitt at the Insight Bowl before 40,533 fans at Bank One Ballpark.

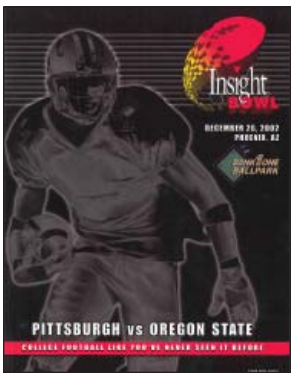

Despite the defeat, it was another very successful season for Oregon State. The Beavers made their third trip in four years to a bowl game and OSU finished the season with eight victories (8-5), which tied for the fourth most season wins in school history.

Pittsburgh opened the scoring by taking the opening kickoff and moving 69 yards in six plays to score when wide receiver Larry Fitzgerald made a diving finger tip reception of a 40-yard touchdown pass from Rod Rutherford with 11:50 left in the quarter. The Panther touchdown amounted to only the third offensive TD allowed by the Beavers' defense during the first quarter of play in the 2002 season.

Oregon State bounced right back with a quick touchdown of its own to quickly tie the contest. It took the Beavers less than two minutes to knot the score at 7-7. OSU moved 72 yards in only three plays. On a second-down play from the OSU 35-yard line, the Beavers' James Newson caught a quick pass from Derek Anderson and appeared to be tackled after about a 10-yard gain. Instead, Newson's knee did not go down and he broke free for a 65-yard TD run down the sideline to tie the game.

Neither team had a scoring threat again until the second quarter. On OSU's fourth possession of the game, the Beavers drove from their own 10 to Pitt's 32 where the drive stalled. Kirk Yliniemi then booted a 50-yard field goal to give OSU a 10-7 lead with 7:56 left in the half. For Yliniemi, the 50-yard field goal matched his career long successful kick.

It appeared OSU would take its 10-7 lead to the locker room, but a great play by Pitt's special teams of downing a punt on OSU's 3-yard line led to an eventual field goal. Unable to move away from the goal line, the Beavers' Carl Tobey punted from the end zone and Pitt got the ball at OSU's 32-yard line with 1:07 to play. Pitt reached OSU's 27-yard line and David Abdul booted a 45-yard field goal as time ran out in the first half.

Pitt's Tez Morris intercepted an Anderson pass during OSU's first possession of the second half and returned the pick 37 yards to the OSU 23-yard line to change the entire momentum of the game. It was the only interception thrown by Anderson. Three plays later Rutherford scored on a 1-yard run for a 17-10 Panther lead.

The backbreaker for OSU came later in the third quarter when the Panthers' Shawn Robinson returned a punt 66 yards for a touchdown to give Pitt a 24-10 lead with 3:26 remaining in the period.

The Beavers had a good chance to get back into the game on their next possession. OSU moved from its own 30 to the Pitt 7-yard line for first and goal. However, Anderson got sacked on first down (loss of 7 yards) and the Beavers were held to a 31-yard field goal by Yliniemi. The field goal by Yliniemi was his 15th consecutive successful boot of the season, which tied the OSU career record.

Pittsburgh added a pair of touchdowns in the fourth quarter when the Beavers gave the Panthers great field position as a result of failing on a fourth down attempt and a fumble.

One huge problem for OSU in the game was its inability to establish the run. Steven Jackson entered the game as the nation's No. 4 leading rusher and the Beavers' season record holder, but he finished the game with only 34 yards.

2001 ('00 SEASON) — FIESTA BOWL — OREGON STATE VS. NOTRE DAME

OREGON STATE 41
NOTRE DAME 9

Sun Devil Stadium
Tempe, Ariz. • Jan. 1, 2001

Weather — 63 degrees, Clear, W-5 (West)

TEMPE, Ariz — Oregon State played its best and most complete football game of the season in routing No. 10 Notre Dame 41-9 in the 30th annual Tostitos Fiesta Bowl in the Beavers' first-ever appearance in a BCS Bowl.

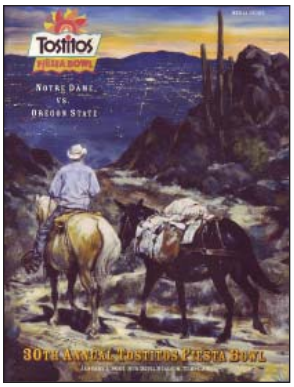

Oregon State totally dominated the Irish from the opening kickoff. The Beavers led only 12-3 at halftime and Notre Dame was fortunate the margin wasn't larger as OSU rolled up 278 yards in the first half, including 246 through the air, to 98 for the Irish.

The Beavers scored on three of their four possessions in the first half. On the one possession OSU did not score, the Beavers drove 83 yards in nine plays, only to be stopped on fourth down at the Notre Dame 1-yard line. Patrick McCall was thrown for a 4-yard loss on fourth down as OSU was attempting to stretch its 6-0 lead. As it was, the Beavers took only four plays to score on their next possession, which started at their 10-yard line. After a 14-yard pass to T.J. Houshmandzadeh and a 2-yard run by Ken Simonton, Jonathan Smith connected on a 74-yard TD pass to Chad Johnson boosting OSU's lead to 12-0.

Notre Dame had generated only eight yards in total offense on six offensive plays in the first quarter, a quarter dominated by the aggressive Beaver defense.

It took a major mistake by OSU for Notre Dame to avoid being shut out in the first half. The Beavers had the Irish pinned on their own 2-yard line facing a third down-and-31 situation. OSU forced an incomplete pass, but the Beavers' Calvin Carlyle was flagged for a late hit on the play and the 15-yard personal foul carried an automatic first down. The Irish took advantage of the break and marched to OSU's 12-yard line before kicking a 29-yard field goal as time expired in the first half.

The third quarter will be remembered forever by Beaver fans, as OSU pummeled Notre Dame with a 29-point blitzkrieg. It all started innocently enough as the Irish forced the Beavers to punt for the first time in the contest after holding OSU on the opening series. The floodgates opened after that. In the span of eight minutes the Beavers accounted for 29 points.

On Notre Dame's first possession of the second half, Darnell Robinson sacked Irish quarterback Matt LoVecchio on second down and forced a fumble in the process. Two plays later Smith connected on a 23-yard TD pass to Houshmandzadeh. Next came a bizarre punt return for a TD as Houshmandzadeh returned a Notre Dame punt from OSU's 27, was hit at the 50 and fumbled, only to have teammate Terrell Roberts field the ball in the air and race 45 yards for a TD.

Smith passed 4-yards to Johnson for another score and Simonton, who had 85 yards rushing on 18 carries, scored the final Beaver TD on a 4-yard run.

Smith was named the Offensive Player of the Game after completing 16 of 24 passes for 305 yards and 3 touchdowns. Robinson was named the Defensive Player of the Game after recording seven tackles, a sack, two tackles for loss, a pass breakup and a pass interception.

1999 — O'AHU BOWL — OREGON STATE VS. HAWAI'I

OREGON STATE 17

Honolulu, Hawai'i • Dec. 24, 1999

Weather — 79 degrees, Fair, W-15-25 (South-Southwest)

HONOLULU, Hawai'i — Oregon State fans invaded the Islands in mass as the program made its first bowl appearance since January of 1965. The Beavers had the unenviable chore of playing the University of Hawai'i Rainbow Warriors in the O'ahu Bowl at UH's home field — Aloha Stadium.

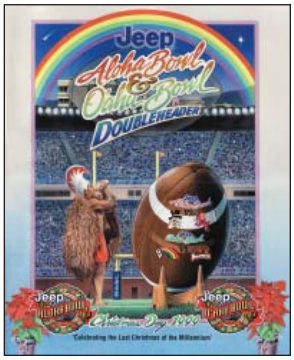

Oregon State looked like it was on its way to its first postseason victory since the 1962 Liberty Bowl, when it took its first possession 79 yards in 10 plays to score on Ken Simonton's 1-yard run with 8:23 left in the opening quarter. He rushed for 30 yards on OSU's first play from scrimmage and accounted for 40 yards on the first TD drive.

OSU got a big break late in the first period and didn't capitalize on the opportunity, which might have been one of the big plays of the game. OSU had to punt on its second possession and UH's Avion Weaver fumbled after a hit by Terrence Carroll, who also recovered the ball at the Hawaii 14-yard line. The Beavers were unable to move the ball and Ryan Cesca's 42-yard field goal sailed right, seemingly giving Hawai'i new confidence.

Once again, Cesca missed on a field goal attempt from 31 yards out. The Warriors took over on their own 20 and put together their only long drive of the game, moving 80 yards in eight plays to score on a 9-yard pass from Dan Robinson to Channon Harris, putting Hawai'i up 10-7. OSU tied the contest on the final play of the first half, a 37-yard field goal by Cesca, following an interception by Calvin Carlyle.

Hawai'i scored 10 points in the third quarter and the Beavers were held scoreless as they could not sustain a drive. The Rainbows moved out to a 23-10 lead with 2:58 left in the game on a 35-yard field goal by Hannum and appeared to have the game locked up at that point. However, OSU's offense finally caught fire and Smith moved the Beavers 81 yards in 10 plays in only 1:31 elapsed time as Simonton scored on a 13-yard draw play to narrow the margin to 23-17.

Then, the biggest play of the game occurred following the Beaver touchdown. OSU executed an onside kick and Roddy Tompkins recovered at the Hawai'i 48. But, an official threw a flag indicating the Beavers had not lined up properly and voided the recovery. The next onside kick went out of bounds and Hawai'i was able to run out the remaining 1:27.

Simonton was named OSU's outstanding player of the game after rushing for 157 yards, scoring two touchdowns and accounting for 182 all-purpose yards.

1965 ('64 SEASON) — ROSE BOWL — OREGON STATE VS. MICHIGAN

MICHIGAN 34

Rose Bowl
Pasadena, Calif. • Jan. 1, 1965

Despite this visual evidence to the contrary, the Rose Bowl can be anything but a bed of roses. Oregon State found that out on January 1, 1965, losing to Michigan 34-7. The No. 8-ranked Beavers had gone into the game as 11-point underdogs to the No. 4-ranked Wolverines, but OSU did go into the game with some optimism.

Early on, Oregon State looked like it might pull off a stunner. After a scoreless first quarter, the Beavers took a 7-0 lead on a Doug McDougal 5-yard pass from Paul Brothers, but Michigan led 12-7 at halftime and the lead would grow.

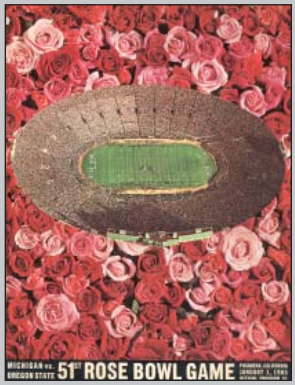

Leading up to the game, there was controversy. When OSU and Oregon rejoined the Athletic Association of Western Universities for the 1964 season, schools didn't have time to juggle their schedules for a full round-robin slate of conference games. The Beavers and USC both finished with 3-1 records in league play, the selection of the Rose Bowl representative was left up to a vote of the conference's faculty athletic representatives; OSU had an 8-2 overall mark to USC's 7-3. The decision didn't sit well with many in and around Los Angeles and the Beavers took quite a bit of grief from the press and public during their visit.

VILLANOVA 0

Philadelphia Stadium
Philadelphia, Pa. • Dec. 15, 1962

With the temperature 17 degrees at kickoff, only 17,048 fans made their way to the enormous arena on the south side to see the No. 17-ranked Beavers beat hometown Villanova 6-0. Wrote the late George Pasero of The Oregon Journal: "The Liberty Bowl was televised, of course, with an estimated audience of 27 million in saloons and living rooms a lot more comfortable than the 17,048 human ice cakes who attended."

Both teams switched from cleats to tennis shoes prior to the game due to frozen footing.

The only score came on Terry Baker's 99-yard run with 9:54 left in the first quarter, and Oregon State spent the rest of the afternoon holding off the Wildcats. OSU's undersized line was pushed around between the 20-yard lines and Villanova outgained the Beavers 309-299, but Oregon State came up with four fumbles and two interceptions.

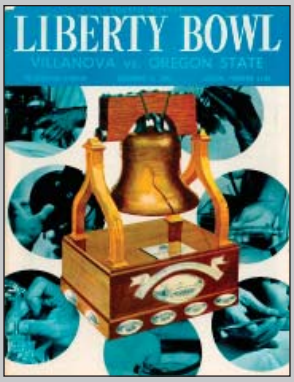

Baker wasn't all of Oregon State's offense, but it was close. He rushed for 137 yards and passed for 123. His performance clinched his Heisman Trophy.

1957 ('56 SEASON) — ROSE BOWL — OREGON STATE VS. IOWA

IOWA 35
OREGON STATE 19

Rose Bowl
Pasadena, Calif. • Jan. 1, 1957

Oregon State played in its second Rose Bowl game, but its first at the Rose Bowl. The Beavers' previous appearance was in 1942 in the only Rose Bowl not played in Southern California — the game was moved to Durham, N.C. because of World War II.

A crowd of 100,000 witnessed 10th-ranked Oregon State victimized by some early mistakes and the Beavers lost 35-19 to third-ranked Iowa. OSC head coach Tommy Prothro and the Beavers had already had one crack at Iowa, losing to the Hawkeyes 14-13 on Iowa's home field in early October; it was the first Rose Bowl to pair teams that had already played during the regular season. Wrote the late George Pasero of The Oregon Journal after talking to the Beavers after the game: "All the opinions ended up at the same place. OSC tackling was the worst of the season and no one seemed able to explain why."

Halfback Joe Francis rushed for 73 yards and passed for another 130 yards to lead Oregon State's offensive attack. Back Sterling Hammock had four receptions for 65 yards.

GAME NOTES

This game produced two important firsts. It was OSU's first-ever trip to the famous New Year's Day classic, and it remains the only Rose Bowl played outside Pasadena, which has prompted sports historians over the years to prefix the bowl's famous name with the word "displaced."

The reason was due to the blackout of the West Coast that had followed the attack on Pearl Harbor. The host stadium was Duke University's home field in Durham, N.C., with the undefeated Blue Devils picked as 3-1 favorites. Oregon State's victory came as a big surprise to Eastern and Southern sportswriters, with Sid Feder of the Associated Press writing, "Probably never in the quarter century history of the Tournament of Roses had such a completely overlooked betting underdog jumped up to beat the big fellows. Oregon State came East to the wonderment of most of Dixie as to why the Westerners were going to show up at all."

Beaver boss Lon Stiner, at 38 and the youngest head coach in Rose Bowl history, had prepared his team with a passing attack that dazzled the North Carolinians. Jack Gunether of UPI wrote, "The Beavers skipped and slammed and flicked passes with an ease and finesse which completely baffled the record crowd."

For Oregon State, the star was Dan Durdan, who passed and ran Oregon State College to victory. He was awarded Player of the Game honors and later inducted into the Rose Bowl Hall of Fame. Beaver greats Bob Dethman and George Zelick also added points. Duke blocking back Tommy Prothro also played magnificently.

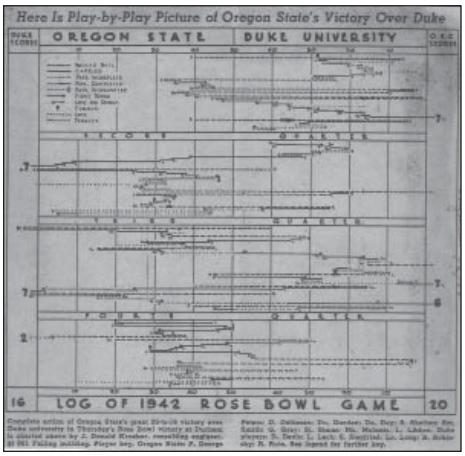

In one of the great ironies in the annals of college football, Prothro would one day become Oregon State head coach and take the Beavers to not one but two Rose Bowls. The football practice field at OSU bears his name. Returning home, the victorious Stiner and company were feted at a special Rose Bowl Banquet with Oregon Gov. Charles Sprague one of the principal speakers. In 1985, the entire squad was inducted into the State of Oregon Sports Hall of Fame. In 1988 they entered the OSU Athletic Hall of Fame. OSU fans at the time considered the game to be the greatest win in school history.

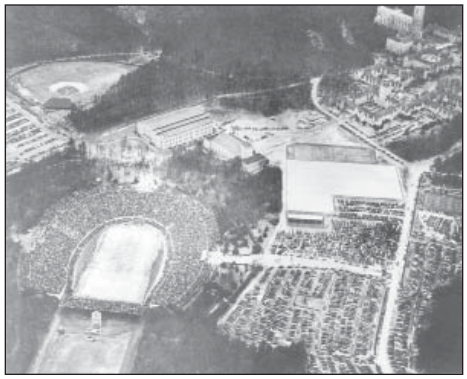

The winning score came in the third quarter when Gene Gray scored on a 68-yard pass from Bob Dethman.

GAME NOTES

HONOLULU, Hawai'i — Power generated by the Oregon State College Beavers overcame the tricky plays and passing attack of Hawaii's Rainbows and gave the boys from the Northwest a 39-6 victory in a Pineapple Bowl game that was finished under arc lights.

The Beaver victory climaxed an island invasion that started with Oregon State defeating the Healani town team on Christmas day.

The Beavers rolled up three touchdowns in the first period against Hawai'i, and added another in the third and two more in the fourth. Hawai'i scored in the second period. Showers late in the game handicapped Hawaii's passing attack.

Bob Olson, Morrie Kohler, Ken Dow and George Peters scored a touchdown by power drives in the first five minutes of play, with Olson passing to Peters for the final six yards. A few minutes later, Bob Dethman returned a Hawai'i punt 12 yards to the 29-yard line, from where Bob Dethman cracked center for 18 yards and Jim Kisselburgh ambled 11 yards through tackle to score.

Vic Kohler intercepted one of Roy Strohlin's passes in the same period, lateralled to John Tsoutsouvas who was down on the Oregon State 49. John Hackenbruck made 18 on an end-around. Kohler added five at the line, and then Joe Tomich passed to Hackenbruck in the end zone.

Hawai'i drove to Oregon State's 12-yard line early in the second quarter before the Beavers held, but Kisselburgh's kick was short and Hawai'i scored on two plays, with Strohlin passing from Oregon State's 47 to Cal Campbell on the 19 and then to Nolle Smith in the end zone. Oregon State battled down to the Hawai'i 1-yard line where Dow fumbled as the half ended.

OSU AWARD WINNERS

OREGON STATE UNIVERSITY SPORTS HALL OF FAME

The Oregon State University Sports Hall of Fame was established in 1988 in an effort to honor and preserve the memory of those student-athletes, teams, coaches, and members of the athletic staff who have contributed in an outstanding and positive way to the promotion of the Oregon State University athletic and academic program.

To be considered for this high honor, there are seven criteria that must be met:

1. If a nominee was an athlete, the person must have completed his or her eligibility at least five (5) years prior to induction.
2. If a student-athlete, the person must have earned two Varsity "O" letters.
3. If a coach, athletic administrator, or athletic staff member, the person must have either earned a Varsity "O" letter at Oregon State University or have been on the staff for at least five (5) years and have become inactive at OSU.
4. The records of the person considered should be so outstanding that there would be little question as to the qualifications necessary for induction.
5. Consideration will be given for personal conduct in sports and the personal contribution to the idea of sport.
6. Consideration will be given to teams who have contributed in a very outstanding and positive way.
7. Criteria and qualifications will be based upon the nominees' participation while attending or serving Oregon State University. However, accomplishments after leaving the University may be an important part of consideration.

OSU'S ALL-AMERICANS

HERM ABRAHAM • 1916

Herm Abraham, was Oregon State's first All-American in the sport. He led the Aggies to an upset at Michigan State in 1915. He earned All-American honors by the Newspaper Enterprise Association in 1916, after lettering three years.

TERRY BAKER • 1962

The Heisman Trophy winner was the nation's most heralded athlete after leading OSU to a 1962 Liberty Bowl victory over Villanova. Terry Baker was a unanimous first team All-American in 1962, and in addition was named the Sportsman of the Year by Sports Illustrated, Helms Foundation Award recipient, AP, UPI, and the Sporting News Player of the Year to name just a few. The two-time Oregon State team MVP played in the 1962 College All-Star Game. Baker also excelled in basketball where he helped the 1963 team to the Final Four. He was inducted into the State of Oregon Sports Hall of Fame in 1980. His number 11 is the only number retired at OSU. He is (as of June 2009) the only individual to win the Heisman Trophy and play in the Final Four. Baker was the first individual from the West Coast to win the Heisman. He was drafted first overall in 1963 by the Los Angeles Rams of the NFL.

Vern Burke

TED BATES • 1958

Ted Bates earned All-American acclaim as an offensive lineman in 1958, and was also named an All-Pacific Coast Conference and All-Coast selection. He played in the 1957 Rose Bowl and was the recipient of the 1958 Hayward Award for the top amateur athlete in the state. Bates played in the 1958 East-West Shrine and Hula Bowl games. He played four NFL seasons with the Chicago Cardinals. Bates was a 1996 inductee into the State of Oregon Sports Hall of Fame.

INOKE BRECKTERFIELD • 1997 & 1998

Inoke Breckterfield is one of Oregon State's top all-time defensive lineman. He concluded his career by being selected a third-team All-American in 1998. Breckterfield played in the Hula Bowl after being selected first team All-Pac-10. He won the conference's prestigious Morris Trophy, given to the league's top defensive lineman. The Honolulu native ended his career as the school's all-time leader for quarterback sacks with 19.5 and tackles-for-loss with 55.5. Breckterfield signed a free agent contract with Edmonton of the CFL following his collegiate career and later played for Winnipeg and Toronto.

STEVE BROWN • 1972

Steve Brown was a three-year varsity letterman from 1970-72. He earned All-American honors (1972) by nine organizations and publications, including seven first team selections, and he was a two-time All-Pac-8, two-time All-Coast and two-time team defensive MVP selection. Brown came to OSU as a fullback before moving to the defensive side as a freshman. He had a school record 186 tackles as a senior. As a junior he led the team with 134 tackles and had four interceptions against defending conference champion Stanford. He also had 22 tackles in that same '71 game vs. Stanford. At the conclusion of his OSU career he played in the East-West Shrine Game, Hula Bowl and Coaches All-American Bowl. Brown was the team captain of the West in the Shrine Game and co-captain of the North Squad in the Hula Bowl where he made 19 tackles and intercepted three passes. He also had 15 tackles and one interception in the Coaches All-American Bowl. He went on to play professionally for Calgary in 1973 and for the Portland Storm in 1974 before suffering a career-ending knee injury.

BRANDON BROWNER • 2003

Brandon Browner played just two seasons at Oregon State leaving after his sophomore year to pursue the NFL. Browner, a cornerback, was the second OSU player in the history of the program to declare himself eligible for the NFL Draft prior to the end of his college eligibility. He redshirted in 2002 before earning 2003 Freshman All-American honors. The 6-4 Sylmar, Calif., native was the 2003 Pac-10 Freshman of the Year.

VERN BURKE • 1962

Vern Burke is still considered one the best receivers ever to wear an Oregon State uniform. He caught 69 passes for 1,007 yards in 1962, both NCAA records at the time. At the time of his enshrinement into the OSU Sports Hall of Fame in 1991, he held records for the most passes caught in one game (12) and career receiving touchdowns (19). He was a consensus All-American in 1963 and played five years of professional football. Burke played in the 1963 East-West Shrine and Hula Bowl games. He was inducted into the State of Oregon Sports Hall of Fame in 1982.

SEAN CANFIELD • 2009

Sean Canfield capped his excellent career by becoming OSU's first ever Pac-10 Conference First Team quarterback and earning SI.com Honorable Mention All-American. He compiled a single season school record completion percentage of 67.9 (303-446) as a senior, resulting in 3,271 passing yards and 21 touchdowns. He led the league as a senior with a 251.6 yards per game passing average. For his career he threw for 5,970 yards and 38 touchdowns, both the fourth-highest total in school history at the time.

TERRENCE CARROLL • 1997

Terrence Carroll is one of the top safeties in the program's history and earned Sporting News Freshman All-America honors in 1997 as a redshirt. He started all 11 games for first-year head coach Mike Riley, making 63 tackles, two interceptions and blocking two kicks. He would go on to be a catalyst for the program that ended a 28-year losing streak and he went on to help the team win the 2001 Fiesta Bowl title as a senior. For his career he made 255 tackles and nine interceptions.

BRANDIN COOKS • 2013

Brandin Cooks established himself as one of the most explosive players in the nation in 2013. He was awarded the Biletnikoff Award following a record-setting season and became a consensus All-American earning recognition from the Sporting News, Associated Press, FWAA and Walter Camp Foundation among others. He was the first FWAA first teamer for OSU since 1968. Cooks set the Pac-12 single season record with 128 receptions as well as the conference's single season record with 1,730 receiving yards in 2013. In addition, he established OSU career record with 24 receiving touchdowns and single season with 16. Cooks was drafted by the New Orleans Saints in the first round of the 2014 NFL Draft.

Steve Coury

STEVE COURY • 1979

Steve Coury was by most accounts Oregon State's MVP in the decade of the 1970's. He was selected first team all-league in the Pac-10 and third team All-American by the AP as a senior in 1979. The offensive MVP also earned second team All-Coast. He played in the Blue-Gray Classic and East-West Shrine games. Coury set the record for career receiving yards (1,837) and receptions (135). He accounted for 142 receiving yards in a 1979 game. The four-year letterman went on to play at Ottawa in 1980 before embarking on a coaching career.

SCOTT CRICHTON • 2011, 2012 & 2013

Scott Crichton was named to Freshman All-American teams by Yahoo!Sports.com, CBSSports.com, Phil Steele, Sporting News and CollegeFootballnews.com in 2011. Crichton started all 12 games at defensive end as a redshirt freshman leading the Beavers with 6.5 sacks, 14.5 tackles-for-loss and set a school record with six forced fumbles. In 2012, Crichton posted 17.5 tackles-for-loss and 9.0 sacks to garner All-America honorable mention status from SI.com. Crichton earned All-America honorable mention from SI.com again in 2013 following another dominant season that included 19.0 TFLs and 7.5 sacks. Crichton left early for the NFL following his junior season and was taken in the third round of the 2014 NFL Draft by the Minnesota Vikings. Crichton finished his Oregon State career ranked among the top five in OSU history with 51.0 TFLs and 22.5 sacks and had the OSU record with 10 forced fumbles.

Scott Crichton

JOHN DIDION • 1967 & 1968

In 1968, John Didion earned consensus All-American honors as a center. As a junior, he was a second team All-American selection by AP and UPI (1967). At the conclusion of his college career, he played in the Coaches All-America, Senior Bowl, Hula Bowl, College All-Star, and East-West Shrine games. He was drafted in the seventh round by the Washington Redskins and enjoyed a pro career that included stints with the Redskins, Saints, Bears and Seahawks.

JIM DIXON • 1926

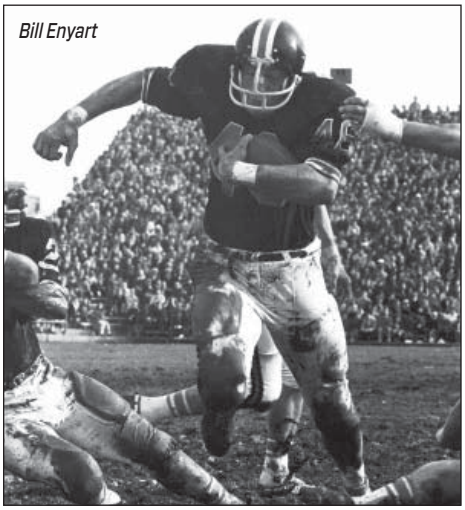

Jim Dixon played at Oregon State from 1924-26 and was an All-American and All-Coast left tackle selection as a senior. He later served as an assistant coach at Oregon State from 1933-51. The Dixon Recreation Center on campus is named in his honor.

VERNON EILERS • 1928

Vernon Eilers played at Oregon State from 1926-28 and was an All-American selection at guard as a senior by Charles Parker. Helped Oregon State to a 7-1 record in 1926.

BILL ENYART • 1968

Bill Enyart was the third all-time leading rusher in OSU history with 2,155 yards at the time of his induction into the OSU Sports Hall of Fame in 1991. He holds the OSU record for rushing yards in one game with 299 against Utah in 1968. He was a first team All-American in 1968 and was twice named All-Pacific-8. Enyart also was a two-time CoSIDA Academic All-American. He was named the 1968 Hula Bowl Most Valuable Back. Enyart also played in the Senior Bowl, East-West Shrine, College All-Star and the All-American Bowl games. He was inducted to the College Football Hall of Fame in 2011. He was drafted in the second round by Buffalo and later played for Oakland.

Bill Enyart

RED FRANKLIN • 1933

Red Franklin earned All-American honors in 1933. He had an outstanding career as a halfback and kick returner. At the time of his induction into the OSU Sports Hall of Fame, he held the second longest kickoff return in school history with 94-yard gallop against Fordham and San Francisco during the 1933 season. He played three years for Brooklyn of the NFL. Franklin was inducted into the State of Oregon Sports Hall of Fame in 1980.

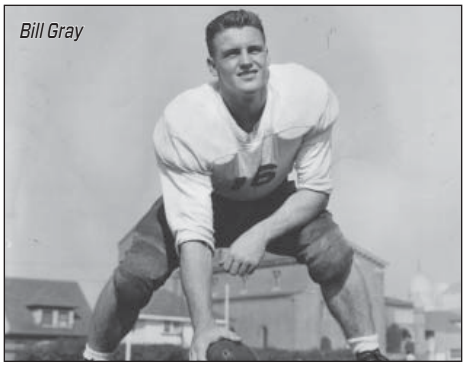

CHRIS GIBSON • 2000

Chris Gibson lettered from 1998-2001 and is considered one of the program's all-time best offensive centers. He was a third team All-American as a junior (2000) by the Associated Press and the College Football News after helping the team to the Fiesta Bowl title. He was a first team All-Pac-10 selection in 2000 and second team in 2001. Gibson also played in the O'ahu Bowl.

DeLAWRENCE GRANT • 2000

DeLawrence Grant lettered at Oregon State as a defensive end during the 1999 and 2000 seasons, after transferring from El Camino College. Grant, who is one of the quickest defensive lineman in the history of the program, was a second team All-American by the Sporting News and Rivals.com, and third team by the College Football News (2000). Grant was a first team All-Pac-10 selection as a senior and was drafted in the third round by the Oakland Raiders of the NFL.

Bill Gray

BILL GRAY • 1943 & 1946

Bill Gray earned first team All-American status at center in 1946 after helping OSU to a 7-1-1 record. He was part of the freshman squad for OSU in 1942, before having his football career interrupted by WWII. Assigned to a V-12 program while awaiting orders in Southern California, Gray earned All-America honorable mention while playing for USC. After his tour with the Marine Corps, Gray returned to Oregon State to finish his football career. Following his graduation, he was drafted by the NFL's Washington Redskins, where he played two seasons.

JOE GRAY • 1937

"The Gray Ghost" was one of the most outstanding halfbacks in Oregon State history. As a senior, in 1937, he received All-America honorable mention. Gray was also a first team All-Coast pick in his final season and was mentioned on several other All-Coast teams as a junior. At the time, he was called the greatest running and passing back ever to play at Oregon State. Gray was the first OSU player ever drafted in the first round by the NFL (Chicago).

QUENTIN GREENOUGH • 1941

Quentin Greenough played two seasons at Oregon State and stared at center in the 1942 Rose Bowl against Duke. As a senior he was named All-Coast and second team All-American (1941). He played in the 1944 East-West Shrine Game. He later served as an assistant coach at Oregon State. Greenough was inducted into the State of Oregon Sports Hall of Fame in 1981.

CRAIG HANNEMAN • 1970

A three-year letterman defensive lineman from 1968-70, Craig Hanneman was selected a second team All-American in 1970 and first team All-Pac-8 and All-Coast. He was named OSU's 1968 Rookie of the Year, 1970 defensive MVP and team captain. Hanneman's top games included 13 tackles versus UCLA and 12 against California in the '70 season. He also recovered two fumbles against Houston and had three tackles for loss for 33 yards against Oklahoma. At the conclusion of his senior season, he played in the Hula Bowl, Coaches All-American Bowl and East-West Shrine Game. He was drafted in the sixth round by the Pittsburgh Steelers and played for the club from 1972-73. He concluded his professional career with the New England Patriots from 1974-76.

MIKE HASS • 2004 & 2005

Mike Hass was named first team All-American in 2005 by the Walter Camp Foundation, ESPN.com and the Associated Press. His honors as a senior included earning the Biletnikoff Award as the nation's premier receiver after making a school record 90 receptions for a Pac-10 record 1,532 yards. He concluded his career with 19 100-yard plus receiving yards games and was the first player in Pac-10 history with three 1,000-plus receiving yards seasons. He caught at least one pass in his last 30 games. For his career he accumulated 3,924 yards receiving, third in the history of the Pac-10 (Troy Walters, Stanford, 4.047). He was selected to play in the East-West Shrine Game following his senior season. Hass was also selected the Male Oregon Amateur Athlete of the Year (Hayward Award) at the Oregon Sports Awards. Mike earned third team Associated Press All-American status as a junior in 2004. The first team All-Pac-10 Conference selection in 2004 broke the league record for receiving yards when he collected 293 at Boise State on Sept. 10 and later would add his name in the OSU record book for pass receptions in one game with 14 at Arizona State – all in '03. BEYOND FOOTBALL

Oregon State University's football program prioritizes success on and off the field. Beyond Football, an initiative funded by an anonymous donor and OSU alum, is ensuring that student-athletes succeed off the field, in the game of life.

Unveiled in 2013, the program aims to transform players into life-long leaders by identifying unique interests and skills of the student-athletes, connecting them with leaders, innovators and business professionals that may have otherwise been not accessible, providing real world experiences, and creating meaningful opportunities for businesses to engage and invest in OSU athletics.

Director - Beyond Football

Focused on three tenants, ENGAGE, EMPOWER and PREPARE, the student-athletes are engaged with the program from the time they arrive on campus. To help acclimate the student-athletes to campus life, the young men are involved with a number of eye-opening sessions covering such topics as effective organizational and study skills, decision-making, financial literacy, healthy nutritional choices, and personal accountability and responsibility. They are also encouraged to participate in a career exploration course made available to all OSU student-athletes.

Once the student-athletes are acclimated to campus, the program transitions to helping them develop skills related to landing a job and contributing to a successful workplace. A combination of courses offered by campus faculty and seminars expand student-athletes' abilities in regards to resume and cover letter writing, networking, etiquette and interviewing.

"With an open mind comes endless possibilities," said senior defensive end Lavonte Barnett, who participated in a recent career mentoring trip to Portland in May. "Beyond Football has helped me prepare to meet the future once my playing days are over."

"We take care of our kids," said Andersen. "When they commit to us, we make a commitment to them to ensure they are empowered to succeed athletically, academically and socially."

In the minds of the student-athletes, Beyond Football reaffirms the decision to commit to Oregon State University.

"Football is only one aspect of my life, "said junior wide receiver Malik Gilmore. "The relationships I build with people are most important to me. The Beyond Football program is awesome! I think Coach Andersen did a great job putting together a staff that has the player's best interests at heart both on and off the field."

Alumni and community members can provide feedback or get involved in the program by emailing Scott Spiegelberg, program director, at scott.spiegelberg@oregonstate.edu.

The home of the Oregon State University Beavers has had over $150 million in fiscal improvements completed since the 2005 season. The east side of the complex houses some of the finest amenities in all of college and NFL football, including the popular Club and Loge, and a new playing surface (FieldTurf) was installed prior to the 2012 season.

Over the last 10 years the capacity of the stadium has increased by 11,000 and now features some of the best viewing in all of college football.

The OSU student-body sits directly behind the Beavers' bench along the east sidelines, with passionate fans in other sections. One of the unique aspects of the stadium is that the seating is close to the field, giving OSU a distinct home field advantage.

That home field advantage has helped the Beavers score some of the program's biggest wins in recent seasons, including snapping USC's 27-game Pac-10 Conference win streak in 2006 and then defeating the No. 1 Trojans in 2008.

Reser Stadium was originally known as Parker Stadium until June 14, 1999. At that time Al and Pat Reser of Beaverton, Ore., made a personal seven-figure gift to OSU athletics.

The stadium, which is located on the south side of campus, was originally built in 1953 at a cost of $330,463.19 with a seating capacity of 28,000. Following the 1965 Rose Bowl, additional end zone bleacher seats were added to raise the capacity to 33,000. The stadium was expanded to 40,593 in 1967 with a new addition to the west side, including a new press box. Stadium capacity was reduced in 1990 as a result of the construction of the original Valley Football Center. In June of 1996, an enlarged Valley Football Center opened. The stadium's capacity is now 45,674.

SAMARITAN SPORTS MEDICINE CENTER

Size: 17,000 square feet

Amenities: The Samaritan Sports Medicine Center, opened in late 2014. The 17,000-square-foot sports medicine center on the campus of Oregon State University is located between Reser Stadium and the Merritt Truax Indoor Center.

Clinic operations are led by Douglas Aukerman, MD, a sports medicine physician who serves as Director of Sports Medicine for Samaritan Health Services and Senior Associate Athletic Director for sports medicine at OSU.

The center provides diagnostic and treatment services, and serves as a site for student internships, training and research. Samaritan operates the facility on land leased from OSU.

"This project will enhance the university's academic and research mission, particularly in the areas of athletic training and exercise and sports science," said Ed Ray, president of Oregon State University, at the dedication ceremony. "We are fortunate to have a comprehensive health care partner in our community that offers board-certified and fellowship-trained sports medicine specialists, as well as a broad complement of professional staff and support for training and research."

OREGON STATE UNIVERSITY

Oregon State is a leading research university located in one of the safest, smartest, greenest small cities in the nation. Situated 90 miles south of Portland, and an hour from the Cascades or the Pacific Coast, Corvallis is the perfect home base for exploring Oregon's natural wonders.

Oregon State University has always been a place with a purpose — making a positive difference in quality of life, natural resources and economic prosperity in Oregon and beyond. Through discovery, innovation and application, we are meeting challenges, solving problems and turning ideas into reality.

Founded in 1868, Oregon State is the state's Land Grant university and is one of only two universities in the U.S. to have Sea Grant, Space Grant and Sun Grant designations. Oregon State is also the only university in Oregon to hold both the Carnegie Foundation's top designation for research institutions and its prestigious Community Engagement classification.

As Oregon's leading public research university, with $285 million in external funding in the 2014 fiscal year, Oregon State's impact reaches across the state and beyond. With 12 colleges, 15 Agricultural Experiment Stations, 35 county Extension offices, the Hatfield Marine Sciences Center in Newport and OSU-Cascades in Bend, Oregon State has a presence in every one of Oregon's 36 counties, with a statewide economic footprint of $2.232 billion.

Oregon State welcomes a diverse student body of over 30,058 students from across Oregon, all 50 states and more than 100 countries. They can choose from more than 200 undergraduate and more than 80 graduate degree programs,including over 30 degrees online offered through Oregon State Ecampus. Oregon State increasingly attracts high-achieving students, with nationally recognized programs in areas such as conservation biology, agricultural sciences, nuclear engineering, forestry, fisheries and wildlife management, community health, pharmacy and zoology.

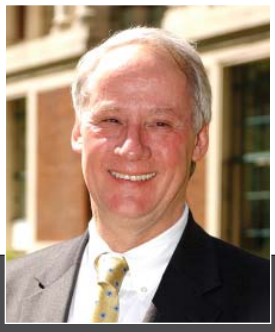

Oregon State also ranks high in sustainability, fourth among universities nationwide for using renewable energy and first in the Pac-12 Conference. And our students literally help power the university: 22 exercise machines at Dixon Recreation Center are connected to the grid.

The 400-acre main campus in Corvallis includes a Historic District, making Oregon State one of only a handful of U.S. university campuses listed on the National Register of Historic Places. The district includes such icons as Weatherford Hall, the Memorial Union and Benton Hall, the oldest building on campus.

Oregon State is located in Corvallis, a vibrant college town of 55,000 in the heart of Western Oregon's Willamette Valley. Corvallis consistently ranks among the best and safest cities to live in the U.S., as well as among the most environmentally responsible.

Under his leadership, OSU has completed and updated a visionary campus-wide strategic plan that has served as the framework for the university's development in profound and historic ways. Annual research awards and contracts have increased substantially and totaled nearly $285 million in fiscal year 2014.

President Ray partnered with the OSU Foundation to launch the university's first comprehensive fundraising campaign. The public phase launched in October 2007 with an initial goal of $625 million. By the end of the Campaign for OSU on December 31, 2014, its total reached $1.14 billion, including nearly $189 million for scholarships and fellowships, 79 newly endowed faculty positions, and funding for key scientific and learning facilities like the Lois Bates Acheson Veterinary Teaching Hospital, the Hallie Ford Center for Healthy Children and Families, The Linus Pauling Science Center, the International Living Learning Center, a renovated Furman Hall for the College of Education, the Graduate Studies Center at the OSU-Cascades Campus and four new cultural centers.

Mindful of OSU's commitment to the people of Oregon, Dr. Ray has overseen the expansion of dual-enrollment agreements to all 17 of the state's community colleges, making it easier for students to complete four-year degrees. He has also taken a leadership role in fostering a more seamless P-20 system, working with area school superintendents, community college leaders and university colleagues to strengthen institutional connections and enhance the student experience. Dr. Ray has also helped to usher in a new era of partnership and cooperation between Oregon's public universities. In Central Oregon, an effort to expand OSU-Cascades by fall 2015 to a robust four-year branch campus of Oregon State has begun, thanks to strong state and community support and financial investment.

In addition to his work at OSU, Dr. Ray's leadership extends to many organizations. He serves on boards of the American Council on Education and the Association of Public Land-grant Universities and chairs the Association of American Colleges and Universities. In recognition of his contributions to higher education, he received the 2013 CASE District VIII Leadership Award.

Dr. Ray was a member of the economics faculty at Ohio State from 1970-2003, serving as economics department chair from 1976 to 1992. He served as associate provost from May 1992 until May 1993, senior vice provost and chief information officer from 1993-1998, and executive vice president and provost from 1998-2003.

His research interests include the history of protectionism in the United States, the determinants of U.S. foreign direct investment and foreign direct investment in the United States, the structure of tariff and non-tariff trade barriers in the United States and abroad, and the adoption of Social Security. His work has been published in The American Economic Review, The Journal of Political Economy, The Quarterly Journal of Economics, The Review of Economic Studies, The Review of Economics and Statistics, and other leading journals. He has co-authored a principles text, and his book, "U. S. Protectionism and the World Debt Crisis," was published by Quorum Press in 1989.

Dr. Ray received his undergraduate degree in mathematics from Queens College (CUNY) in June 1966, graduating cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa. He earned his master's in economics from Stanford University in 1969 and his doctorate in economics also from Stanford in June 1971.

Dr. Ray's wife Beth passed away in March 2014. He has three children and three grandchildren.

Todd Stansbury was named vice president and director of athletics at Oregon State University June 18, 2015, rejoining the Pac-12 Conference institution after serving as the Beavers' executive associate athletic director from February 2003 to January 2012. He officially began his new role Aug. 1, 2015.

"Todd is committed to high-level athletics achievement by competing and winning championships the right way – the Oregon State way," OSU president Ed Ray said upon Stansbury's hiring. "He is very skilled at growing fan excitement and engagement, and will guide the success of our student-athletes in sports, academics and community."

During his previous tenure at Oregon State, Stansbury was part of the senior leadership team that led a renaissance of Oregon State athletics. The Beavers played in eight bowl games; the baseball team won two College World Series titles; and nearly every program advanced to postseason play while Stansbury was in Corvallis during his first stint. He was also instrumental in fundraising for the $150 million Reser Stadium expansion, the reintroduction of the women's track and field program, the renovation of Goss Stadium at Coleman Field, and the construction of the Sports Performance Center, the Beth Ray Student Success Center, the OSU Boathouse and the Whyte Track and Field Center.

While the 54-year-old Stansbury has led high-profile coaching searches, facility expansion and construction projects during his athletics career, he also has been instrumental as a leader of student-athlete growth on and off the field. He is part of a team that developed several key lifeskills career development initiatives at OSU. These include the Everyday Champions program which encompasses the Leadership Institute, Varsity OSU and the international service program Beavers Without Borders, among others.

Between his tenures at Oregon State, Stansbury served as the vice president and director of athletics at the University of Central Florida in Orlando from March 1, 2012 through June 18, 2015. He led the Knights to a successful transition from Conference USA to the American Athletic Conference where UCF won three titles in its initial year in the new league. Among those three championships was the football team's historic 12-1 season in 2013 that culminated in a No. 10 Associated Press final national ranking after defeating Baylor in the Fiesta Bowl. UCF also was the only Division I program in 2014-15 to win conference titles in football, volleyball, women's soccer and softball.

Academically, UCF teams combined for 15 consecutive terms with a department 3.00 GPA or higher with Stansbury at the helm. Under his leadership, the Knights boasted a 95 percent graduation rate, the top score among public institutions at the Division I level. In addition, he developed the Institute for Student-Athlete Leadership that included Knights Without Borders; resurrected the Varsity Knights program; and partnered with several local and national student-athlete leadership and achievement programs.

Stansbury's first role as a director of athletics came in July of 2000 when he was hired at East Tennessee State University. He initiated and implemented a program-wide strategic plan and reorganization while completing numerous infrastructure and capital projects, including the development of a state-of-the-art golf practice facility and the expansion of the athletic training facility into an out-patient rehabilitation center. In addition to numerous athletic accomplishments, ETSU was recognized by USA Today for increasing the graduation rates of its student-athletes while under his direction.

Stansbury began his professional career as a banker in the asset-based lending division of Citizens and Southern National Bank in Atlanta before returning to the Georgia Institute of Technology (Georgia Tech), his alma mater, as an academic counselor for football in 1988.

As the assistant athletic director for academics at Georgia Tech, he was responsible for the overall development and management of the educational support program for student-athletes. This platform was a major component of the Homer Rice Total Person Program, which was adopted nationally by the NCAA Foundation and Division I-A athletic directors as the NCAA Champs/Life Skills Program. Georgia Tech was consistently recognized nationally for its graduation rates while Stansbury served in this capacity.

In 1995 Stansbury left Georgia Tech to become the global coordinator for the Institute for International Sport. In this capacity he and his wife, Karen, spent 16 months traveling around the world promoting the 1997 World Scholar-Athlete Games and developing a global network of educators, sport organizations and government leaders.

Upon his return to the U.S. in 1996, Stansbury worked for Southern Network Services in Birmingham, Ala., as the manager of internet business services where he developed the business plan for the new internet services division.

He returned to intercollegiate athletics in 1997 at the University of Houston, serving as associate athletic director. His responsibilities included NCAA compliance and student-athlete support services. He also served as the primary liaison to the university's administrative units. Under his direction the student-athlete support program was transformed and recognized by USA Today for increasing graduation rates.

The Oakville, Ontario, native attended Georgia Tech on a football scholarship where he lettered as a linebacker and graduated with a B.S. in industrial management in 1984. He was a third round draft choice of the Saskatchewan Rough Riders of the Canadian Football League. He later completed a M.S. in sports administration at Georgia State University in 1993.

Married to the former Karen Hammond of Easley, S.C., the Stansburys' interest in the outdoors and travel has led to a number of adventures including trekking the Himalayas of Nepal, tracking the mountain gorilla in the Congo (Zaire) and sailing the Whitsunday Islands of Australia.

Stansbury is among the most experienced administrators in the NCAA. His work includes serving on numerous national and conference boards, including the Football Oversight Committee, the American Athletic Conference Finance Committee and several UCF boards.

With his leadership skills, wealth of experience and integrity, Oregon State athletics will continue to be a source of pride for Beaver Nation and be a competitor for conference and national championships while maintaining a strong emphasis on academic excellence.

THE PAC-12 STORY

Built on a firm foundation of academic excellence and superior athletic performance, the Conference ushered in a new era on July 1, 2011, officially becoming the Pac-12 Conference with the additions of the University of Colorado and University of Utah.

Just 27 days after the Conference officially changed its name, Commissioner Larry Scott announced the creation of the Pac-12 Networks on July 27, 2011, solidifying a landmark television deal and putting the Conference on the forefront of collegiate athletics. The Networks, including one national network, six regional networks, and a robust digital network marked the first-ever integrated media company owned by a college conference. In addition, the "TV Everywhere" rights allow fans to access Pac-12 Networks outside the home on any digital device, including smartphones and tablet computers.

That same year, the Pac-12 also launched its Globalization Initiative to proactively promote the Conference and member institutions through student-athlete exchanges and sport. In the first four years, Pac-12 student-athletes have enjoyed unique cultural and athletic experiences in China, fielding full university and Pac-12 all-star teams in women's volleyball and men's basketball, with the first-ever men's basketball regular season game schedule to be played in China between Washington and Texas to tip off the 2015-16 campaign. The Conference and its member schools have gained significant brand exposure for the future and set a foundation for growth.

On the field, the Pac-12 rises above the rest, upholding its tradition as the "Conference of Champions®," claiming an incredible 140 NCAA team titles since 1999-2000, including nine in 2014-15, an average of nearly nine championships per academic year. Even more impressive has been the breadth of the Pac-12's success, with championships coming in 28 different men's and women's sports. The Pac-12 has led or tied the nation in NCAA Championships in 49 of the last 55 years, the only exceptions being in 1980-81, 1988-89, 1990-91 and 1995-96 when the Conference finished second, and only twice finished third in 1998-99 and 2004-05.

For the 10th-consecutive year, the Pac-12 had the most or tied for the most NCAA titles of any conference in the country, winning at least six every year since 2000-01. No other conference has won double-digit NCAA crowns in a single year, the Pac-12 doing so seven times, including a record 14 in 1996-97.

Spanning nearly a century of outstanding athletics achievements, the Pac-12 was the first conference to reach 400 championships in 2010-11. With the inclusion of Colorado and Utah, the Conference surpassed another major milestone, with league teams capturing 450 titles, outdistancing the next conference by nearly 200. In all, Conference teams have won 478 NCAA Championships (291 men's, 158 women's, 29 combined).

Pac-12 members have won 291 NCAA team championships on the men's side, 77 more than the next closest conference. Men's NCAA crowns have come at a phenomenal rate for the Pac-12 - 16 basketball titles by six schools (more than any other conference), 54 tennis titles, 47 outdoor track & field crowns, and 28 baseball titles. Pac-12 members have won 25 of 46 NCAA titles in volleyball, 41 of 46 in water polo, 29 in skiing, and 24 in swimming & diving national championships.

Individually, the Conference has produced an impressive number of NCAA individual champions. Over 2,000 (2,208) individual crowns have been won by Pac-12 student-athletes over the years with 1,333 by male student-athletes. Student-athletes have also captured 174 individual titles at combined championships (ie., skiing and fencing).

On the women's side, the story is much the same. Since the NCAA began conducting women's championships 34 years ago, Pac-12 members have claimed at least four national titles in a single season on 25 occasions, including 15-consecutive years from 2000-2015. Overall, the Pac-12 has captured 158 NCAA women's titles, easily outdistancing the SEC, which is second with 97. Pac-12 members have dominated a number of sports, winning 23 softball titles, 21 tennis crowns, 14 volleyball titles, 16 of the last 26 trophies in golf, and 14 in swimming & diving.

Pac-12 women student-athletes shine nationally on an individual basis, as well, having captured an unmatched 701 NCAA individual crowns, an average of nearly 21 championships per season.

The Pac-12's excellence is further proven in the annual Division I Learfield Sports Directors' Cup competition, the prestigious award that honors the best overall collegiate athletics programs in the country. Stanford continued its remarkable run and won a remarkable 21st-consecutive Directors' Cup in 2014-15 leading the Pac-12 to an unprecedented 1-2-3 finish in the final standings. Seven Pac-12 member institutions ranked among the top-30 Division I programs, tying for the most of any conference, and five were in the top 15: No. 1 Stanford, No. 2 UCLA, No. 3 USC, No. 12 California and No. 13 Oregon. At least five member institutions have been ranked in the top 20 in all but one year of the Director's Cup program, with seven appearing in the top 20 on five different occasions (1998, 2001, 2003, 2005 and 2006).
