LAMBERT FIELD

As the home of Boilermaker baseball, Lambert Field is as fine a playing field between the fences as any in the Big Ten. In the 40 years since the field was relocated from the current site of Mackey Arena, it has proven to be one of the top surfaces in the Midwest.

Beyond the warning track and backstop, Lambert Field is ripe for an aesthetic and technology overhaul that will align it with the best of home venues of Big Ten peers. An ambitious plan is taking shape to surround Lambert Field with a stadium that is an integral part to the reemergence of the Boilermaker baseball program.
