1979 NATIONAL CHAMPIONSHIP

In 1979, head coach Earl Stewart led SMU to the pinnacle in women's golf as the Mustangs won the AIAW national title.

Led by the play of Kyle O'Brien, the Mustangs won their first national title in just the fourth year of existence on the Hilltop. In route to guiding her teammates to the team title, O'Brien also took home the AIAW individual medalist award for the Mustangs. Her four rounds of 72-74-74-72 gave her a 292 for the tournament sweeping both the team and individual awards for the Ponies.

Other members of the 1979 national title team included Debbie Hall, Therese Hession, Mary Murphy, and Missie McGeorge. The 1979 national title raised the Mustangs among the nation's elite programs. From 1978 to 1983, the Mustangs never finished out of the top five in the nation, finishing runner-up in 1980, one year after their championship run.

To this day, the 1979 national championship team is the only women's golf team in the history of the SMU program to achieve national champion status, and is one of six teams in the history of SMU athletics to win a national championship.
