Texas Track and Field hopes to bring home some hardware this weekend from the NCAA Indoor Championships in Fayetteville, Arkansas. The Longhorns enter the championship meet ranked No. 5 for both the men and women. After finishing second by just half a point last year, the women's team is eyeing another push for the title while the men also are in contention.

The women have nine entries in the meet and the men have eight to rank among the national leaders. If both teams can maintain or outperform their current ranking, it would mark the first time since 2008 the men and women finished in the top five at the indoor championship meet. The last time both teams finished in the Top 10 was 2012.

Action gets underway on Friday at 10 a.m. with the beginning of the men's heptathlon. Sophomore Wolf Mahler will open the meet for the Longhorns in the event, where he ranks No. 8 after winning the Big 12 title two weeks ago in Ames, Iowa. Field events start at 4 p.m. Friday with running events toeing the line at 6 p.m. Saturday's schedule starts at 10:45 a.m. Running events begin at 6 p.m. again and the first field event of the day is at 3:30 p.m.

The teams in contention for the team titles come mostly from the SEC and Big 12 Conference. The SEC boasts five Top 10 teams on the men's and women's side. The Big 12 has three women's teams in the Top 10. Oregon also is among the favorites after sweeping the championships last year. The Oregon men rank No. 2 entering the meet and the women are No. 6, one spot behind Texas. The Longhorns and rest of the NCAA looks to stop Oregon's run of five straight women's indoor titles.

Sprints will be a key area for the women with the Longhorns boasting some of the nation's top runners in their respective events. Texas has six entries in the sprints, plus the 4x400 relay. The men have a balanced team at the meet with four running events and four field events.

Fans can watch the action live on ESPN3.com with a live webcast both days beginning at 6 p.m. Live results will be provided at flashresults.com with live field event capabilities. Updates will be available on Twitter by following the handles @UTexasTrack and @NCAA. Fans also are encouraged to follow and interact with the meet by using the hashtag #NCAAD1TF. ESPNU also will air the meet tape delayed at 6:30 p.m. March 22.

TEXAS TRACK & FIELD NOTEBOOK Longhorns Both in Top Five

- This week the men and women both held their spots in the Top Five of the USTFCCCA Rankings.
- The rankings this week only reflect athletes competing at the NCAA Championships.
- Texas is among three schools that have their men and women ranked in the Top Five.
- The Big 12 Conference is well represented in the Top 25 with six men's teams and four women's teams ranked this week. Three of the women's teams are No. 9 or better. Texas Tech (10) joins Texas in the men's Top 10 with Oklahoma State (13) and TCU (15) just outside.

Events to Watch

NCAA INDOOR TRACK & FIELD CHAMPIONSHIPS

• Women's 4x400m

Last year the team championship came down to the final event of the meet. Oregon and Texas both ran times faster than the previous collegiate record, but the Ducks outleaned the Longhorns by .02. That finish gave Oregon the team title by just half a point over Texas. Could this year produce similar drama?

• Women's Pole Vault

Kaitlin Petrillose broke the collegiate record last year to win her first NCAA title for the Longhorns. Her record has since been broken by 2 different women this year. With 3 women in the field who have all held the collegiate record, this will be an event with much anticipation and attention.

• Women's 400m

Texas ranks 2-4-8 in the NCAA in this event and represents the last 3 outdoor champions in the 400. Can Courtney Okolo or Ashley Spencer win their first indoor title? Or sophomore and World Junior Champion Kendall Baisden? With 3 entries, the Longhorns could score huge points and make a major impact on the team standings here.

• Men's 5000m

Craig Lutz ranks No. 5 in the event coming in with his time of 13:40.30. Less than 2 seconds are between he and No. 2, not much of a gap for a long distance race. Big points could be earned here for the men in an event Texas has not had an All-American in since 2003.

• Women's 5000m

Sandie Raines looks to give the Longhorns a boost in the women's distance events. The sophomore transfer ranks No. 7 in the event and is less than half a second separate No. 6 from No. 8. After not having a distance runner last year at the meet, any potential points Raines can score could have heavy implications for the team standings.

• Men's Shot Put

Ryan Crouser goes for the repeat. The redshirt junior has won 3 straight NCAA titles when counting his back-to-back outdoor crowns. He leads the field by more than half a meter this year and currently ranks No. 3 in the world.

• Women's 60m Hurdles

Hundredths of a second divide No. 2 down to No. 7 on the descending order list. Longhorn Morgan Snow stands at No. 4 with a time of 8.07 seconds. Texas has not had a women's hurdle champion indoors since 1998, the last year of the 55 meter hurdles.

• Men's 60m

Senoj-Jay Givans pulled off the upset at the Big 12 Conference Championships to repeat in the 60 meters. He defeated the nation's No. 1 and No. 2 runners in John Teeters of Oklahoma State and Baylor's Tayvon Bromell. Givans won by just .003 of a second over TCU's Ronnie Baker, the No. 5 runner. After wowing the crowd at the Big 12 meet, the NCAA Championships could provide more fireworks with such a tightly bunched field.

• Men's 3000m

Although no Longhorns are in the field, the men's 3000m could prove to be key in the team scoring and championship race as Oregon has 5 entries for a potential point grab. Arkansas also has 2 runners highly ranked in the event.
