Texas Longhorns current, past and future are chasing their Olympic dreams this summer and that journey begins this week. The U.S. Olympic Team Trials start July 1 and run through July 10 from Hayward Field in Eugene, Oregon, and more than 20 Longhorns are expected to compete for a spot on Team USA at this summer's Olympic Games in Rio de Janeiro in August.

The Jamaican Trials also run June 30-July 3 and a pair of current Longhorns are vying for a chance to wear the Yellow, Green and Black of their home country. Juniors Senoj-Jay Givans and Chrisann Gordon both rank in the top five in Jamaica in their respective events with hopes of making their first Olympic team.

The U.S. Olympic Trials will be aired on NBC and NBC Sports Network. The USATF will also be providing live online coverage at USATF.tv for fans with a subscription to USATF.TV+PLUS services.

Fans can keep up with the action from Eugene and Kingston, Jamaica with updates on the team's official Twitter account @UTexasTrack. The USATF encourages fans to interact with the U.S. Trials by using the official meet hashtag #TrackTown16. Live results from Eugene can be found online at FlashResults.com.

While many Longhorns will be fighting for Olympic bids, two freshman Canadians will be competing at their nation's junior championships in conjunction with the Canadian Trials. Mariam Abdul-Rashid and Raquel Tjernagel will hope to qualify for Team Canada at the IAAF World Junior Championships in Poland later this summer. The Canadian Trials run July 7-10 from Edmonton.

Texas Head Coach Mario Sategna will be in Rio this summer as well for Team USA. Sategna will serve as a member of the coaching staff as the Men's Assistant Coach for Throws. He said he is excited to see what happens at Trials and then at the Games as a new era is potentially ushered in.

"I think anybody that's been in track and field, the Olympics is the pinnacle," Sategna said. "For any of the U.S. athletes as they prepare for Rio, I think if you make the U.S. team you have a chance in Rio because it is the toughest team in the world to make.

"Just like 2008, I think 2016 is going to be a changing of the guard so to speak in that you will see a lot of young athletes emerge as the next stars of this sport. So, I'm excited to see what happens once we get down to Rio and start competing in these Olympic Games."

U.S. OLYMPIC TRIALS BROADCAST SCHEDULE

NBC and NBC Sports Network will be providing extensive coverage of the U.S. Olympic Team Trials throughout the competition. There will also be online coverage provided at USATF.tv for fans with a subscription to USATF.TV+Plus.

The IAAF has Olympic Qualifying Standards for all events and each track & field federation from each nation has its own Qualifying Standards for their respective nation's Olympic Trials. Each nation is allowed to field a total of 3 athletes in each event of track & field at the Olympic Games. Athletes may use marks from May 1, 2015 through June 26, 2016 to hit the Qualifying Standard for their respective event to qualifying for their respective Trials or the Olympic Games should their home nation not contend Trials. No wind-aided marks or indoor times from over-sized tracks are eligible for qualifying. Indoor marks from indoor competitions are allowed toward the Qualifying Standards.
