Season Summary

Only seven years after the Cougar Baseball program was first established, UH made its impact felt in the college baseball world by advancing to the NCAA College World Series in Omaha, Neb.

However, it did not look good for the Cougars at the start of the season. UH dropped six of its first seven games. Fortunately, the team rebounded nicely to win 12 of its last 14 regular-season games, including seven straight during one stretch.

But even after their winning ways, it took a flip of a coin for UH to advance to the Missouri Valley Conference playoffs. Rainouts had caused cancellations of doubleheaders against Oklahoma A&M and Tulsa with all three teams in a tie for the MVC Western Division lead.

Since it was too late to hold a three-team playoff to see who would meet Detroit -- the MVC Eastern Division winner -- representatives from the three schools met at the conference office in St. Louis. On the first coin flip, Tulsa was eliminated. On the next flip, UH's representative called tails, and tails it was.

The Cougars would win two straight games against Detroit and advance to the district playoffs.

In the NCAA District 5 Playoffs, the Cougars appeared to be doomed again after falling 7-4 in the first game against Oklahoma. But again, the comeback Cougars rallied to win the last two games, 8-7 and 5-3, to advance to college baseball's promised land.

At Rosenblatt Stadium, the Cougars fell to Boston College (4-1) and Stanford (7-6) to cap their season. However, that squad laid a solid foundation on which future UH teams would build NCAA postseason excellence.

Season Summary

Fourteen years after making their first visit to the NCAA College World Series, the Cougars returned in 1967 and made an indelible mark in school history.

The Cougars started the season out well enough, winning 10 of their first 14 games. After a tough stretch midway through the year against Texas Lutheran and Texas A&M, the team rebounded and won six of its last seven games to set up a showdown against Texas in the NCAA District 6 Playoffs.

The Cougars and Longhorns split the first two games, setting up a third and deciding Game Three. Texas appeared to have all the momentum, taking a 3-0 lead into the top of the ninth inning. Just before the UH leadoff batter stepped into the batter's box, the Texas public address announcer informed the crowd that UT head coach Bibb Falk would be resigning at the end of the season. That sent the Texas crowd into a wave of hysteria that would last for 15 more minutes.

Once the game resumed, the Cougars assembled an amazing four-run rally and then held off Texas in the bottom of the frame to return to the NCAA College World Series.

After being thumped by Stanford 12-1 in the opening game of the World Series, the Cougars reeled off three straight wins over Ohio State, Boston College and Arizona State to set up the deciding game against ASU for the national championship. Unfortunately, the Sun Devils would get the better of the Cougars 11-2, but UH capped the year with a No. 2 ranking in the polls, the highest-ever finish by a Cougar team in a final poll.
