Supporting UNC Women's Soccer

The University of North Carolina and Nike extended their agreement for eight more years beginning in July 2002. The agreement provides each varsity team with shoes, apparel, equipment bags and other products. It also provides $100,000 annually to the Chancellor's Academic Enhancement Fund for undergraduate teaching and $100,000 annually to the athletic department to reward Olympic sports programs and coaches for academic and athletic excellence.

DICK BADDOUR

Director of Athletics

Dick Baddour, a 1966 graduate of the University of North Carolina, was named Director of Athletics on June 25, 1997. In his four years as director, the UNC Department of Athletics has undergone a number of changes, yet remains one of the premiere programs in the Atlantic Coast Conference and in the nation.

The Goldsboro, N.C., native heads a program that with 28 varsity sports is the largest in the ACC. Carolina won seven conference championships during the 2000-01 school year, equalling the top figure in the league for the 14th consecutive year. Eighteen Tar Heel teams competed in NCAApostseason play.

Baddour is in his 35th year of continuous service to the university. He graduated from UNC in 1966 and was appointed Assistant Dean of Men in 1967. He served as Assistant Dean of Admissions and Assistant Dean of the UNC School of Law and also earned a Master of Arts degree in education prior to joining the athletic department in 1986.

In 2001, he received the Distinguished Service Medal from the UNC General Alumni Association.

Active in Chapel Hill community affairs, he is a past president of the Public School Foundation and has served on the Parks and Recreation Commission. He and his wife, Lynda, have two sons, Allen and David, and a daughter, Jennifer.

DR. BETH MILLER

Senior Associate Athletic Director

Beth Miller is in her 18th year supervising the 26-sport Olympic program and serves as UNC's Senior Woman Administrator. She is a 1968 alumna of Appalachian State University with a B.S. degree in health and physical education. She has a master's from ASU and earned a Doctor of Arts degree in physical education at Middle Tennessee State in 1974.

From 1969-72, she served as the head volleyball and basketball coach at ASU. She became head volleyball coach at UNC in 1975 and led the Tar Heels to four successive ACC titles from 1980-83 and five postseason tournament appearances. She also coached softball at Carolina from 1978-79.

In 1979, she was named Athletic Business Manager. She retired from coaching volleyball after 1983, but continued to handle all financial affairs for the department through 1987.

Miller currently serves on a number of Atlantic Coast Conference committees, including those for women's basketball, wrestling and officiating. She chairs the committees for women's golf and volleyball. She also serves on UNC's Housing Advisory Board.

A native of Landis, N.C., she has supervised UNC's highly successful Olympic Sports program since 1985.

Department of Athletics Mission Statement

The Department of Athletics has offered high quality athletic programs for many years. Through a dedicated commitment to educational interests, competitive athletic programs, and integrity in all areas, the student-athletes, coaches and staff strive to bring credit and recognition to the University.

The mission of the Department is to sponsor a broad-based athletic program that provides educational and athletic opportunities for young men and women to grow and develop, and to serve the interests of the University by complementing and enhancing its diversity and quality of life. Coaches, as educators, are foundational to this process. In keeping with the University's efforts to offer programs of regional and national acclaim, the Department's athletic programs strive for competitive excellence within the Atlantic Coast Conference or other similar institutions. Through its athletic programs, the University seeks to unite students, faculty, staff and alumni in a common and shared experience. The Department seeks to contribute to the diversity of the University by offering opportunities for enhanced racial/ethnic, cultural and geographic representation.

To fulfill this mission, the Department, with the approval of the Board of Trust, has developed principles of operation to provide guidance and direction to its personnel. This Mission Statement and accompanying principles require strong dedication and commitment from all who participate in, coach in and support the Department of Athletics.

Department of Athletics Statement on Gambling

The mission of the Department of Athletics is to sponsor a broad-based athletic program that provides educational and athletic opportunities for young men and women to grow and develop. In keeping with the Department's mission and the University's commitment to educational interests, competitive athletic programs, and integrity in all areas, the Department of Athletics strongly condemns the influence of gambling on intercollegiate athletics.

Student gambling is a significant issue on college campuses. Student-athlete involvement in gambling has produced many tragic situations, both for student-athletes and the universities they represent. Student-athletes often compete in contests that generate interest from those involved in gambling and, possibly, organized crime. If given the opportunity, those interests will not hesitate to exploit the position student-athletes hold on college campuses. As such, the University of North Carolina is firmly opposed to all forms of gambling and bribery related to intercollegiate athletics.

To fulfill its educational obligation, the Department provides a gambling education program to all its student-athletes and departmental staff members. This statement and the educational program are reflections of the Department's commitment to keeping intercollegiate athletics free from the influences of gambling and its related activities.

The Department requires its staff members and student-athletes to adhere to NCAA, state and federal laws regarding gambling. In the interest of fair competition and the growth and development of student-athletes, the Department strongly urges its friends and supporters to refrain from gambling/betting on contests involving collegiate competition and to abide by state and federal laws.

The University of North Carolina women's soccer program is fortunate to call as its home Robert Allison Fetzer Field. Fetzer Field at Irwin Belk Track is one of the premier soccer domains in the nation.

Originally built in 1935 and renovated during a period from 1988-90, the facility has been host to the NCAA Division I Women's Soccer Championship Final Four seven times since 1984, including six times since 1988.

A Fetzer Field record crowd of 7,212, at the time the most to ever see a women's collegiate soccer game, watched the Tar Heels fall to Notre Dame 1-0 in the 1995 NCAA semifinals. That is the largest crowd in Fetzer Field history. The largest regular-season crowd in Fetzer Field lore witnessed the Tar Heels' 5-1 victory over second-ranked Notre Dame on September 13, 1998 as 6,024 fans filed through the Fetzer Field gates.

In 1994, a boisterous crowd of 5,206 came out to see the rematch between Carolina and Duke in the 1994 Atlantic Coast Conference Tournament championship match. Duke, which had beaten Carolina 3-2 on October 19, 1994 at Fetzer Field, was not equal to the task in the ACC final just a few weeks later, falling 4-2.

The previous largest regular-season crowd in collegiate women's soccer history also occurred at Fetzer Field when 4,500 showed up to watch UNC beat Duke 2-1 on September 1, 1996. That mark was eclipsed during the UNC-Notre Dame game in 1998.

The Tar Heels have amassed one of the best home records in sports history. Carolina enters the 2002 season with a record of 218-7-2 at Fetzer Field.

Named for former Tar Heel athletic director and the nation. The playing field itself was reworked and leveled, the grandstand was refitted with new aluminum bleachers, a new track was installed, lights were added, two convenient ticket booths were added to the front gate and a computer scoreboard/message center was installed. Even more recently the facility's concession areas have been revamped so they are more convenient for fans. The renovations were completed in time for Carolina to celebrate before 2,200 fans with a 3-0 win over top-ranked Virginia in October 1990.

In 1988, an estimated throng of 4,500 fans came out to Fetzer for the NCAA final between Carolina and NC State. That was, at the time, the largest crowd ever to attend a collegiate women's soccer match.

The 1990 NCAA Tournament drew an estimated 6,700 spectators to the stadium—2,000 to watch the quarterfinal round win over NC State, 1,500 for the semifinal round and 3,200 for the championship game.

Another 7,000 fans streamed through the Fetzer Field gates to watch the 1991 NCAA tournament games, which culminated in a title-game victory over Wisconsin.

In 1992, more than 3,500 enthusiasts braved a steady downpour as the Tar Heels crushed ACC rival Duke 9-1 in the national finals.

A year later, in Mia Hamm's collegiate finale, 5,721 fans were on hand at Fetzer as Carolina routed George Mason 6-0 in the title game.

Currently Fetzer Field is the home facility for six of Carolina's 28 varsity teams—men's soccer, women's soccer, men's outdoor track and field, women's outdoor track and field, men's lacrosse and women's lacrosse.

The facility has been home not only to women's soccer NCAA and ACC Championships, but also the 1991 and 1993 ACC Track and Field Championships, the North Carolina High School Athletic Association Track and Field Championships, the National Junior Olympics, men's soccer and men's lacrosse ACC Tournaments, men's soccer NCAA first round, second round and quarterfinal round action and NCAA men's lacrosse tournament action in first rounds, quarterfinal and semifinal games. In the summer of 1996, the facility was the home training site for the United States Track and Field Team as it prepared for the Summer Olympic Games in Atlanta.

New McCaskill Soccer Center Opens April 11, 1999

The new McCaskill Soccer Center on the University of North Carolina campus was dedicated in a gala ceremony on April 11, 1999. Attending the event were members of the Educational Foundation as well as dozens of other University of North Carolina soccer enthusiasts.

Construction of the new 6,600-square-foot soccer facility at the University of North Carolina was completed early in the month of April 1999.

The new UNC Soccer Center is located on the same site as the former soccer offices next to Fetzer Field where home matches are played. The old soccer offices were located in a building called the UNC Soccer Hut which dated back to 1935.

The new two-story structure accommodates varsity men's and women's soccer locker rooms on the first floor as well as a common team meeting room between the dressing areas.

The second floor houses coaches' offices for both sports as well as a large conference room.

Carolina has one of the richest traditions in collegiate soccer. Since the men's team attained varsity status in 1947 the Tar Heels have suffered only five losing seasons in the last 55 years and only one losing season since 1957.

Carolina has appeared in the NCAA Tournament nine times in the last 15 years. Seven of those appearances have come in the last 13 years when Elmar Bolowich has served as head coach. One of the high water marks for the Tar Heel men's team came in 1987 when UNC claimed the ACC championship and advanced to the NCAA semifinals. Under Bolowich, the Tar Heel men's team made great strides during the 1999 season, earning the first NCAA bid in five years. The 2000 season was an amazing one for UNC men's soccer as Carolina claimed the ACC championship and advanced to the NCAA Tournament quarterfinals. Carolina went track coach Bob Fetzer, Fetzer Field has been the home of Carolina soccer since 1947, the first year UNC sponsored a varsity men's team. The women's program was started in 1979.

Located in the heart of the Carolina campus directly behind Carmichael Auditorium on South Road (N.C. State Road 54), the stadium was completed in 1935 as a Works Project Administration program during the administration of President Franklin Delano Roosevelt

The facility's most recent renovations made it one of the most beautiful all-around collegiate venues in one better in 2001, earning the first NCAA men's soccer championship in school history.

Coach Anson Dorrance's women's teams have been one of the most amazing dynasties in college athletics. The Tar Heels have won 17 national championships in their 22 years of competition. They have an all-time record of 487-22-11.

The women have an incredible record of 218-7-2 at Fetzer Field. In 15 of the past 18 years, Carolina has had at least one player chosen National Player of the Year by some soccer organization. Eight current or former Tar Heels were on the United States National Team which won the Gold Medal at the 1999 Women's World Cup Championship.

"The former 1,200-square-foot soccer office was greatly outdated," says UNC Director of Athletics Dick Baddour. "We've made improvements to a lot of our facilities in recent years and this one was badly needed. That would be the case regardless of the teams' records. We want to give our student-athletes the best chance to succeed and enjoy the experience here. This is a way to help in that regard."

The destruction of the Old UNC Soccer Hut was carried out in early 1997. Construction of the new building commenced following the conclusion of the 1997 season. In the meantime, the soccer offices were housed in temporary facilities at Finley Field, the Tar Heels' practice facility near the University golf course.

While the new center has over five times more space than the old facility, the expansion occurred without any loss of parking on campus, always a major concern.

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill Board of Trustees approved the selection of NBBJ Architects of the Research Triangle Park to design the project. Estimated cost of construction was approximately $1,700,000.00. The project was funded through Athletic Department funds and Educational Foundation gifts. The building was named in honor of Bud and Mildred McCaskill, long-time benefactors of the University and Educational Foundation members.

Fetzer Field and the McCaskill Soccer Center give Carolina two of the best facilities in collegiate women's soccer.

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill: A Compendium of Key Facts

History

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill was the nation's first state university to open its doors and the only public university to award degrees in the 18th century.

Authorized by the N.C. Constitution in 1776, the university was chartered by the N.C. General Assembly Dec. 11, 1789, the same year George Washington first was inaugurated as president.

The cornerstone was laid for Old East, the nation's first state university building, Oct. 12, 1793. Hinton James, the first student, arrived from Wilmington, N.C., Feb. 12, 1795. By March 1 of that year there were 41 students and two professors, and by 1860 only Yale University had a larger enrollment.

Location

The 729-acre central campus includes the two oldest state university buildings, Old East and Person Hall. Old East and Playmakers Theatre, an 1852 Greek-revival building, are National Historic Landmarks.

The American Society of Landscape Architects selected the Carolina campus as one of the most beautifully landscaped spots in the country. That 1999 ranking, timed to the society's centennial, is among the latest affirmations of the charm of mighty oaks, majestic quadrangles, brick sidewalks and other landscaping synonymous with UNC.

A campus master plan approved in spring 2000 by UNC trustees represents a visionary look forward, offering a striking view of how the campus should exist in future decades to meet the needs of students, faculty, staff and the surrounding community. The plan captures the ambience of north campus in the Polk and McCorkle place quadrangles and aims to transform the southern region into an equally wonderful place in which to learn, teach, work and live. Among the plan's early projects are four new residence halls on south campus opening in fall 2002 and a planned arts common will create a new front door to the campus.

The master plan guides a $1 billion-plus construction program made possible in part by North Carolinians' overwhelming approval of a $3.1 billion bond referendum for higher education in November 2000. The referendum is bringing Carolina $510 million for renovations, repairs and new buildings. The university is investing another $600-plus million from non-state sources including private gifts for other buildings essential to continued excellence.

Chapel Hill has been called "the perfect college town" by several publications including Sports Illustrated.

UNC anchors one corner of the famed Research Triangle Park, which continues to play a vital role in nurturing the economic development of North Carolina.

Recent Rankings

In U.S. News and World Report magazine's September 2001 "America's Best Colleges" guidebook, UNC ranked fifth among the nation's top public universities and tied for 28th overall among both public and private campuses. Among undergraduate business programs, the Kenan-Flagler Business School tied for fifth nationwide.

U.S. News also ranked 20 graduate degree programs and specialty areas at UNC among the top 25 nationwide in its graduate rankings issued in April 2002. The magazine rated programs in the schools of business, education, medicine and public health as well as doctoral programs in the College of Arts and Sciences. (Certain professional degree programs are ranked annually; other disciplines and specialties are ranked periodically.)

The 2002 Fiske Guide to Colleges labeled UNC one of 21 public universities in the United States and Canada that were the "best college buys."

Kiplinger's Personal Finance magazine rated Carolina first among a list of the 100 best buys in U.S. public colleges and universities because of its combination of top-quality academics and low cost. Kiplinger's list, published in 2000, called UNC "a place where high achievers are in good company."

Black Enterprise magazine ranked UNC 14th in its 2001 "Black Enterprise-DayStar Top 50 Colleges and Universities for African Americans" list, the highest ranking among major public universities. DayStar, a research firm, gathered the data for the list, which is based on responses to questions about which schools were both a good academic and social fit for African-American students.

The Journal of Blacks in Higher Education concluded that UNC had the most tenured African-American faculty – 51 – among the nation's highest-ranked universities. The same 2002 survey also listed Carolina as one of only four highly ranked universities to have 100 or more African-American professors.

Business Week magazine ranked the Kenan-Flagler Business School's executive education programs among the best in the world in 2001. Kenan-Flagler was fifth among executive MBA programs and 18th among executive education programs. "Grads praise the commitment and knowledge of faculty and staff," according to Business Week.

The Financial Times cited Kenan-Flagler's executive education programs in its 2002 rankings. The London newspaper listed Kenan-Flagler eighth among international executive education programs, tied for ninth for open-enrollment programs and 10th for custom programs. The survey is based on responses of participants or corporate purchasers and surveys of business schools. Open programs are courses open to all executives through specific training or development designed for their companies.

Kenan-Flagler received national honors for outstanding leadership in training MBA students in environmental and social impact management skills. Among schools receiving "cutting-edge MBA program" distinction in "Beyond Grey Pinstripes 2001: Preparing MBAs for Social and Environmental Stewardship," Kenan-Flagler earned top marks for environmental stewardship, social impact management and sustainability management. The selections were part of a joint project of The Aspen Institute Initiative for Social Innovation through Business and the World Resources Institute.

Key Statistics

Now in its third century, UNC belongs to the select group of 61 American and two Canadian campuses forming the Association of American Universities. UNC's academic offerings span more than 100 fields, including 84 bachelor's, 165 master's and 108 doctoral degrees as well as professional degrees in dentistry, medicine, pharmacy and law. Five health schools -- which, with UNC Hospitals, comprise one of the nation's most complete academic medical centers -- are integrated with liberal arts, basic sciences and high-tech academic programs.

In fall 2001, Carolina enrolled 25,480 students from all 100 North Carolina counties, the other 49 states and nearly 100 other countries. Eighty-one percent of Carolina's 15,844 undergraduates were from North Carolina.

Sixty-four percent of Carolina's students were undergraduates, 29 percent graduates and another 9 percent were professional degree-seekers.

Those students learn from a faculty that totaled about 2,600 full-time members in fall 2001. Many Carolina faculty members hold or have held major posts in virtually every national scholarly or professional organization and have earned election to the most prestigious academic groups.

Carolina ranks eighth nationally among public research universities for the number of prestigious awards that faculty have received in the arts, humanities, science and health.

The UNC community benefits from a library with more than 5.2 million volumes and perennially ranks among the best research libraries in the nation as judged by the Association of Research Libraries. UNC's North Carolina Collection is the largest of its kind among state-oriented collections on campuses nationwide. And the Southern and rare book collections also long have been among the country's finest.

Carolina's 236,142 alumni live in all 50 states and around the world. Notable alumni include U.S. President James K. Polk; Nobel Prize winner Robert Furchgott; Pulitzer Prize winners writers Jonathan Yardley and Taylor Branch and editorial cartoonist Jeff MacNelly; writers Thomas Wolfe, Clyde Edgerton, Russell Banks, Charles Frazier, Jill McCorkle, Kaye Gibbons and Randall Kenan; journalists Charles Kuralt, Roger Mudd, Tom Wicker, Deborah Potter and Stuart Scott; radio personality Rick Dees; geneticist Francis Collins; and corporate banker Hugh McColl.

Prominent alumni include athletes Michael Jordan, Vince Carter, Mia Hamm, Marion Jones, Allen Johnson and Davis Love III; U.S. Senator John Edwards; former White House Chief of Staff Erskine Bowles; former White House Communications Director Don Baer; Bill Harrison, chairman and chief executive officer of JP Morgan Chase & Co.; and Scott Livengood, Krispy Kreme Doughnut chairman, president and chief executive officer. Others include John Crawford, designer of the Intel 386 and 486 chip; David Gardner, founder of The Motley Fool; actors Jack Palance, Andy Griffith, George Grizzard, Dan Cortese, Billy Crudup and Josh Tower; actresses Louise Fletcher, Sharon Lawrence and Tally Sessions; opera singer Vickie Livengood; and fashion designer Alexander Julian.

Private Support

The Carolina First Campaign is the key to achieving Chancellor James Moeser's goal of making UNC the nation's leading public university. Carolina First's goal is to raise more than $1.5 billion in private support. That level of funding is critical for the university to compete nationally for top faculty and students, invest in departments and programs, and build and renovate facilities through strategic initiatives; improving the public's health and quality of life through research; and the campus and its master plan for the future. The eight-year campaign began July 1, 1999. The impact of gifts already has been substantial: donors have created nearly 100 professorships and more than 200 undergraduate and graduate scholarships. Donors have also given endowed and expendable funds to support departments, programs and buildings. The final campaign goal and progress toward it will be announced in October 2002.

Students

The entering freshman class of 2001 was the strongest in Carolina history, marking the third straight year of record-setting improvement in academic preparation and overall diversity.

The average SAT score of 1257—among the highest in the nation for any university, public or private—was six points higher than any other class in university history and 37 points higher than the class enrolling just five years ago.

The class enrolled in record numbers in Advanced Placement, International Baccalaureate and other top-level secondary-school courses: 23 percent took seven or more, and 84 percent took three or more. The class also earned records-setting marks on national end-of-course exams: 74 percent submitted at least one Advanced Placement score (an increase of 3 percent over the previous high in 2000), and 64 percent submitted at least one score of 3 or better (also a 3 percent increase over 2000).

The 2001 freshman class also included 336 valedictorians; 36 percent were among the top 10 students in their high-school class.

UNC students have a long tradition of outstanding achievement. Thirty-five have been awarded the Rhodes Scholarship since it was created in 1902, including the first U.S. black woman recipient. Twelve Chapel Hill students have won the Rhodes since 1980.

UNC students regularly earn other prestigious merit awards for study in the United States and abroad. In 2002, Kelly Vance won a Luce Scholarship for 10 months of study in Asia and a Fullerton Medical Scholarship for four years of medical school. Joanna Pearson received a one-year George J. Mitchell Scholarship for postgraduate study in Ireland or Northern Ireland. James Redding earned a one-year Andrew W. Mellon Fellowship in Humanistic Studies to pursue a Ph.D. in Renaissance English literature at Yale University. Ellen Elizabeth Veazey received a one-year Morris K. Udall Scholarship for outstanding students of environmental public policy. And Mark Dodson won a one-year Goldwater Scholarship for outstanding science and engineering students.

Thirty-two top high school students will study this fall at Carolina and Duke University as Robertson Scholars. They comprise the second class of this unique joint merit scholarship program created by a $24 million gift from Julian and Josie Robertson. The full-tuition scholarship allows each student to spend a semester in residence at the other campus. The scholarships bring together two of the nation's finest universities and attract top students from the United States and abroad.

Learning

The 2002 freshman class is the third wave of Carolina students required to own laptop computers as part of the Carolina Computing Initiative. In 2000, 3,400 Chapel Hill freshmen became the largest class in the United States ever required to own laptops during the first year of the requirement. Students can access a world of knowledge at their fingertips and communicate with faculty and peers with just a few keystrokes.

Carolina is making it easier for students and others with laptops to connect to the Internet, e-mail and course materials—whether they are in classrooms, labs, libraries and nearby outdoor sites—thanks to wireless technology. Wireless access points have been installed at key campus locations, allowing students with adapter cards to connect to cyberspace without physically plugging into the campus network.

The Academic Support Program assists student-athletes in exploring their interests and abilities, enjoying a broad educational experience and reaching or exceeding their academic goals.

Located primarily in the Pope Academic Support Center, the program opened its doors in 1986. It is equipped with study facilities, tutorial rooms, a computer lab, a 128-seat auditorium, and counselors' offices. At the center, students meet with staff to discuss course selection, major and career exploration, academic progress and academic eligibility.

In the 2001-2002 academic year, 248 Carolina student-athletes made the ACC Academic Honor Roll, which requires a cumulative GPA of at least 3.0 for the year. In the fall of 2001, 154 student-athletes made the Dean's List, and 135 did so in the spring of 2002.

"Our young people are students first and athletes second and that will always be the case

Support Center, Carolina possesses a state-of-the-art building dedicated to the complete needs of today's student-athletes.

Carolina has always had top-flight athletic facilities, an excellent, knowledgeable and dependable coaching staff and a hard-working and devoted support staff to aid its student-athletes in their athletic endeavors. For the past 16 years, it has also had a building dedicated solely to the development of the student-athlete's mind and body. The top floor of the Student-Athlete Development Center houses the athletic department's academic support center, boasting a full-time staff of 10 professionals in the area of athletic academic counseling. The Academic Center has also expanded offices to include space in the old Kenan Fieldhouse. This space became available when the football operations moved to the Frank H. Kenan Center on the west side of Kenan Stadium.

The staff includes a director and nine full-time assistant directors. Susan Maloy is the academic center director who works specifically with the women's soccer team at Carolina. The bottom floor of the building is home to the department's strength, conditioning and fitness center.

The physical surroundings at the Student-Athlete Development Center include a reading lounge, study lounge, computer lab, foreign language lab, a multitude of study and tutoring rooms, a classroom, a conference room and an auditorium which seats over 100 people.

The freshman athlete is especially well served by the Center. First-year athletes have mandatory study hall for two hours a night, five nights a week. There is also a required learning skills program for freshmen once a week. Upperclass athletes who maintain above a 2.30 grade point average have no specific requirements, but most all continue to use the facilities found at the Center.

Interim director Robert Mercer is quite specific in his goals for the program. "This is not a hand-holding program for students to stay eligible. It's not just a tutoring program. Tutoring is an extension of the classroom but we don't want students to become dependent on it."

The statistics bear out the fact that the Center, in its 16 years of existence, has made a difference in the fortunes of Tar Heel student-athletes in the academic arena.

"Our numbers on the ACC Honor Roll have almost tripled in the past 15 years," says Mercer. "We consistently place more than 100 student-athletes on the Dean's List each semester. But I think the real measurement is, we've had a graduation rate percentage for our student-athletes consistently in the 70 to 80 percent range. That's within percentage points of the student body as a whole."

Mercer is proud of the fact Carolina's athletic academic program is considered a role model for all of college athletics. But he insists his staff keep the goals rather simple.

"We're here for the struggling student, the mediocre student and the good student," Mercer says. "To say we're here to keep people eligible is not accurate. We're not satisfied with mediocrity. We want to help make them the best they can be."

While Mercer and his staff oversee the academic progress of Carolina's athletes on the top floor, Director of Strength and Conditioning for Olympic Sports Greg Gatz and his primary assistant Jodi Hopkins work on the bottom floor to help make Carolina's Olympic sports athletes faster and stronger.

Gatz and Hopkins, along with a corps of graduate assistants, oversee all weight training for the 26 Olympic sports, including the sport of women's soccer.

When the Student-Athlete Development Center opened in 1986, a new 8,000 square-foot weight room was added as part of the Kenan Fieldhouse expansion. The strength area contains a complete line of Nautilus equipment, cardiovascular machines and over 20,000 pounds of free weight equipment.

Kristin DePlatchett was named a first-team Academic All-America by the College Sports Information Directors of America and Verizon in 2001.

at the University," says Athletic Director Dick Baddour. "That is a credit to our coaches, administrators and support staff, but most of all, our student-athletes. Their accomplishments in the classroom are very impressive."

The Academic Support Program staff, which serves approximately 750 student-athletes, consists of Senior Associate Athletic Director John Blanchard, Associate Directors Susan Maloy, Robert Mercer and Burgess McSwain; Academic Counselors Marisa Marucci and Heather Murphy; Learning Specialist Jenny Olson; and Office Assistant Doug Roberts. The Academic Support Center is open from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. during the week and from 7:30 p.m. to 10 p.m. on Sundays. Visitors are welcome to tour the facility during afternoon hours.

In 1986, the University of North Carolina Athletic Department opened the doors to the building which has become the prototype for its kind in the world of intercollegiate athletics.

The building's opening was the culmination of a dream for former University of North Carolina Director of Athletics John D. Swofford and his staff. In the Pope Academic
