The University of North Carolina and Nike extended their agreement for eight more years beginning in July 2002. The agreement provides each varsity team with shoes, apparel, equipment bags and other product. It also provides $100,000 annually to the Chancellor's Academic Enhancement Fund for undergraduate teaching and $100,000 annually to the athletic department to reward Olympic sport programs and coaches for academic and athletic excellence.

Although statistics will not be kept and games will not be won or lost, Carolina head coach John Bunting knows that this year's spring football session – his fourth at UNC – will be integral in the ultimate success of the 2004 Tar Heels.

As there are every spring, the typical issues will be discussed, dissected and debated, including the position changes and battles and the progress of several younger players. But perhaps the most significant issue is the overall improvement Carolina's defensive unit makes during the NCAA-allotted 15 practices.

Last season, Carolina gave up over 500 total yards per game, ranking 116th in the country in total defense. Now under the guidance of two new defensive coordinators – John Gutekunst and Marvin Sanders – Carolina must make a dramatic improvement.

Gutekunst, a veteran with six years of experience as a head coach at Minnesota in the early 1990s, came to North Carolina after spending the last five years with Lou Holtz at South Carolina. Sanders, a young, energetic coach who tutored the nation's best secondary in Nebraska last year, was a highly sought-after candidate. Nebraska led the nation in interceptions last year and had the top pass defense in the country. Gutekunst will call the plays on game day and will coordinate the run defense, while Sanders will coordinate the pass defense.

"Defensively, our focus is on improving in all facets of the game," says Bunting. "Two years ago our defense was in the top 20 in the country and No. 1 in the ACC, but it has fallen into the 100's in each of the last two seasons. There is no place to go but up. I'm excited about our two new defensive coordinators, who will be challenged to break in a new system. We still have several young players, but we want to see them grow."

Seven starters return from a defensive unit that was one of the youngest in the country last year. Carolina often started three freshmen on the line, two freshmen at linebacker and two newcomers in the backfield. Carolina constantly searched for the right combination in 2003 and only one Tar Heel - defensive lineman Chase Page – started all 12 games. In fact, Carolina has started a different defensive lineup in 23 of the last 24 games dating back to the beginning of the 2002 season.

Page has played tight end and offensive guard during his Carolina career, but has found a home on the defensive line. He started the first nine games last season at defensive tackle, but finished the year at end. He will move back to tackle this spring, while Isaiah Thomas and Shelton Bynum are the early favorites for the other tackle spot. A sophomore from Winston-Salem, N.C., Thomas started the final five games last year, while Bynum, a sophomore from Ellenwood, Ga., started the final three when Page moved to end.

Juniors Alden Blizzard and Brian Rackley are the two top options at end, but should face competition from true freshmen Khalif Mitchell and Terry Hunter, both of whom enrolled in January after attending Hargrave Military Academy for one semester. Junior Tommy Davis, who has 10 career starts, also will battle for playing time. Redshirt freshman Kyndraus Guy, a standout in fall camp last season, had shoulder surgery and will not participate in spring drills.

At linebacker, Carolina welcomes back promising sophomore Larry Edwards along with classmates Melik Brown, Fred Sparkman and Victor Worsley. Doug Justice and Jeff Longhany are experienced players that have combined for 20 starts in the past two seasons.

Last year, Edwards earned his first starting assignment against Virginia and responded with 12 tackles. Two weeks later against Arizona State, he had a season-high 15 stops and was named ACC Rookie of the Week. He started the final eight games and was the team's third-leading tackler with 89 hits.

QB Darian Durant

Bunting plans to move Worsley to outside linebacker this spring to take advantage of his coverage and rush skills. Sparkman played mostly on special teams last year, but will vie for a starting spot at middle linebacker in 2004.

In the defensive backfield, Carolina must replace free safety Dexter Reid, the team's leading tackler in each of the past two years. Gerald Sensabaugh, along with Scott Brumett, enrolled at Carolina in January after East Tennessee State University disbanded football following the 2003 season. Each has one season of eligibility remaining and Sensabaugh is expected to contend for a starting spot immediately.

"This spring, we have to see if Gerald Sensabaugh is the kind of player we think he can be," says Bunting. "He has good speed and was an outstanding player at ETSU. I think he has the ability to be an outstanding player in the ACC."

Mahlon Carey converted from running back to strong safety last season and played well at times. He was the team's second-leading tackler, but must become more consistent, especially against the run.

At cornerback, Carolina is expecting a healthy return for Cedrick Holt, a talented junior whose 2003 season was cut short when he broke his ankle in the NC State game. Holt may not be completely healthy this spring, but should be ready this fall. His absence will create more competition between Lionell Green, Kareen Taylor, Chris Hawkins and Jacoby Watkins. Green, who started the final seven games of the 2003 season, has the skills to be an excellent cover corner.

Offensively, Carolina has far fewer questions to answer this spring. The Tar Heels return record-setting quarterback Darian Durant, tailbacks Ronnie McGill and Jacque Lewis, three talented offensive linemen, led by all-conference candidate Jason Brown, and an array of athletic wide receivers, including UNC's single-season reception record-holder Jarwarski Pollock.

While Durant will work to remain sharp during spring drills, Carolina coaches will closely monitor the play of reserves Matt Baker, Nick Cangelosi, Roger Heinz and Jared Hall. Baker, a 6-2, 213-pound junior, is the favorite to back up Durant. Although Baker has played in just six games, he is the most experienced signal caller in the program behind Durant.

Cangelosi and Heinz, two highly regarded prospects, redshirted last year and each has four years of eligibility remaining. Hall is a walk-on, but has a strong arm and has been impressive in practice.

McGill and Lewis helped rejuvenate Carolina's rushing attack in 2003 as the Tar Heels ran for over 150 yards per game. McGill rushed for seven touchdowns, the most by a Tar Heel since Jonathan Linton had 10 in 1997. Lewis was third on the team in rushing, but was as much of a threat catching the ball. He finished second on the team with 34 catches, including a team-high five touchdown receptions. Senior Chad Scott is a slippery runner with good speed and will play an important role in the offense as well.

Despite his stature, Pollock (5-7, 170) is a big threat at wide receiver. He broke the UNC single-season record with 71 catches last year and finished second in the league in receptions per game. Pollock's only shortcoming was his lack of ability to score as he had just one touchdown reception.

Mike Mason was one of three true freshmen wide receivers to play in 2003, when he had 22 receptions and proved to be a terrific kick returner. Classmates Adarius Bowman and Jesse Holley each had at least 10 catches. Holley, a guard on the UNC basketball team, will most likely miss all of spring practice.

One area of concern this spring is the Tar Heels' experience at tight end. Sophomore Jon Hamlett, who was impressive in UNC's win at East Carolina, is the projected starter. He had 11 catches last season for 115 yards. Behind Hamlett, Carolina will look to Brumett, a linebacker during his three years at ETSU. Walk-ons John Dunn and Justin Phillips saw some action in 2003 and continue to improve. Another option is converted defensive lineman Jocques Dumas. Dumas asked the coaches to let him switch to tight end and with his 6-6 frame, he should be a big target for Carolina's quarterbacks.

On the offensive line, Carolina must replace both starting guards from 2003, Jeb Terry and Jupiter Wilson. Junior Kyle Ralph is slated to start at left guard, while candidates for the other guard position include redshirt freshman Charlston Gray, junior Arthur Smith and sophomore Mickey Rice.

Brown has started each of the last two seasons at center and did not allow a sack in 2003. Veterans Willie McNeill and Skip Seagraves will man the tackle spots with Brian Chacos as the top backup.

On special teams, Mason has the ability to be one of the top return men in recent UNC history. He averaged 26.0 yards per kickoff return as a freshman and scored on a 96-yard return at Maryland. Sophomore David Wooldridge was one of the best punters in the second half of the ACC season after winning the starting job. Although Carolina does not currently have a scholarship kicker on the team, several walk-ons will compete for the spot this spring.

JOHN BUNTING
HEAD COACH

During his three years back at his beloved alma mater, John Bunting has seen both the light and the darkness. He's felt ecstasy and misery, pride and embarrassment. He's floated on a cloud and been dragged through the gunk.

His 2001 Tar Heel football team finished 8-5. It won five straight games—including a memorable 41-9 shellacking of Florida State—was in contention for a BCS berth late in the year and finished the season with a victory over Auburn in the Chick-Fil-A Peach Bowl.

"That was a perfect team to walk into," Bunting says of his hiring in December, 2000. "That was a senior class laden with guys who were ready for me. They wanted to win. They were frustrated with losing. And they had talent. It was an ideal situation to win a bunch of ball games."

The next two seasons wheeled 180 degrees. The Tar Heels were 3-9 in 2002 and endured a tough late-season stretch when, with starting QB Darian Durant sidelined with a broken thumb, they scored only four touchdowns in four games and yielded 172 points over the same month. In 2003, Carolina was 2-10, playing well at times, but rarely well enough for an entire game. Carolina lost several close games, including four by eight points or less, including a three-overtime defeat to Syracuse and 2-point loss to Arizona State on the game's last play.

Through the ups and the downs, Carolina's 32nd head coach has demonstrated a remarkable combination of resiliency, toughness, intelligence, passion and leadership. He's needed every skill in the book as the Tar Heels are trying to restore the program to the heights it enjoyed in the 1990s—including seven consecutive bowl berths and back-to-back Top 10 finishes in 1996-97.

Bunting was an All-ACC linebacker for the Tar Heels during his 1969-71 playing career in Chapel Hill. He returned to Carolina after a stellar playing career with the Philadelphia Eagles and a coaching career that included a head-coaching stint in NCAA Division III and NFL assistant positions in Kansas City, St. Louis and New Orleans. After three-plus years in the competitive fire of top-line Division I-A football, Bunting now comfortably has his arms around the challenge of running a program at the upper reaches of the college game. It's more than X-and-Os and tackling technique. It's recruiting and fund-raising, it's academic counseling and university politics.

"In order to get this program turned around, I've got to win on a lot of fronts. I've got to get out there and meet those people so they stay supportive. We've got to keep them excited about what we're doing. I'm also more focused on the discipline within the team. My tolerance threshold is low.

"More than anything, I've got to make sure our staff recruits guys that are in touch with my mindset. We can't take anyone who's not mentally and emotionally ready for this program."

Bunting's hiring by Chancellor James Moeser and Athletic Director Dick Baddour culminated a decades-long dream by Bunting, who set his sights on one day coaching at his alma mater shortly after leaving Chapel Hill in the spring of 1972. At each stop along the way—from Philadelphia to Glassboro to Kansas City to St. Louis to New Orleans—Bunting took with him a framed photograph of Kenan Stadium. It hung in his locker or over his office desk for 30 years.

"Years ago I mentioned I'd like to be the head coach at North Carolina," said Bunting. "What a stupid thing to say. I didn't even know what coaching was like. But, I knew I'd like to explore the possibility. I just didn't want to say, 20 years from now, 'Gee, I wish I'd bothered to find out.'"

Carolina's football family is glad he went to the trouble.

Adam Metts was a senior on the 2001 team and a part of the 7-5 Peach Bowl champion team. He sees greatness ahead for Bunting & Co.

"I think coach Bunting can be the next Dean Smith, but for football," Metts says. "He knows the game, and he also knows how to relate it to players. He's a great motivator. This whole team was concentrated and so much more consumed by the game of football this year. A lot of it I attribute to coach Bunting and his staff and how they prepared us."

Winning. Graduating. Playing a game you love at the highest levels. Having an opportunity to succeed in the professional ranks.

Those are the cornerstones to what the Carolina program under Bunting will offer to its players.

"Coach Bunting is a fair and honest man," says linebacker David Thornton, who bolted from obscurity to a fourth-round NFL selection under Bunting. "He has a passion for his players on and off the field. He gave me the opportunity to play and didn't look at me differently because I was a former walk-on. He wants to put the best players on the field. It's a blessing that he came here when he did."

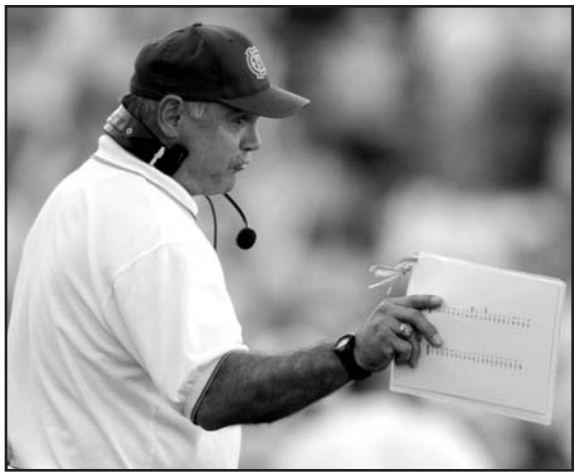

Defensive end Julius Peppers was the No. 2 pick overall in the draft and pointed to Bunting's attention to detail in helping refine his talents during his final year of collegiate football.

"Coach Bunting tried to get me adjusted to the NFL with a training-camp approach and bringing an NFL mentality to Carolina. He took me in his office and told me what it was going to be like at the next level. He had me watch tape of guys like (NFL defensive end) Joe Johnson and telling me things that would improve my game."

More and more Bunting will apply his thumbprint to the Carolina program. Fans appreciate his openness, his honesty, his regular-guy persona. Players know that no one played the game any smarter or tougher than Bunting did during his run as a Tar Heel.

He's living a dream, coaching on the campus he loved so much as a young man three decades ago. One of his favorite touches is the Old Well Walk, where the team busses deliver the players and Bunting to the Old Well two hours before home games. From there they walk through a tunnel of cheering fans through Polk Place to Kenan Stadium. It's an emotional stroll each week for Bunting.

"I have to fight back the tears every time," Bunting says. "But that's the way I am. I love this place. I couldn't be happier being back here after all these years."

GUNTER BREWER
Wide Receivers
5th Year at UNC

Gunter Brewer is entering his fifth season as the Tar Heels' wide receivers coach, having joined the staff in February of 2000. Brewer came to Carolina after coaching at Marshall from 1996-99.

An energetic and enthusiastic coach, Brewer has produced several outstanding receivers at Carolina. In each of the last two seasons, a Carolina wideout has set the single-season school record for receptions. Jarwarski Pollock hauled in a school-record 71 receptions in 2003, bettering the mark set the previous year by Sam Aiken (68).

KEN BROWNING
Tight Ends/Director of High School Relations
11th Year at UNC

A veteran assistant coach who has been with the Tar Heels since 1994, Ken Browning enters his fourth season as Carolina's tight ends coach. He also is Carolina's Director of High School Relations and will continue to direct UNC's camps and clinics. From 1994 to 2000, Browning coached Carolina's defensive tackles and, in 2000, he was UNC's defensive coordinator.

As tight ends coach, Browning coached Zach Hilton, now with the New Orleans Saints and 2002 honorable-mention All-ACC Bobby Blizzard. With Blizzard missing several games in 2003, Browning developed true freshman Jon Hamlett and walk-ons Justin Phillips and John Dunn into solid contributors.

JEFF CONNORS
Assistant A.D./Strength & Conditioning
4th Year at UNC

Jeff Connors is in his fourth year as Carolina's Strength and Conditioning Coordinator and his third as an assistant athletic director. While his primary focus is the football team's strength and conditioning program, Connors oversees the department's entire strength and conditioning program.

Connors was honored as a Master Strength & Conditioning Coach in 2003 by the Collegiate Strength & Conditioning Coaches association (CSCCa). The Master Strength & Conditioning Coach certification is the highest honor that can be achieved as a strength and conditioning coach.

JOHN GUTEKUNST
Defensive Coordinator/Linebackers
1st Year at UNC

John Gutekunst, who has earned a reputation as one of the top defensive coaches in the college game for more than 35 years, enters his first season as Carolina's defensive coordinator.

Gutekunst brings a wealth of experience to Chapel Hill that includes a six-year stint as head coach at the University of Minnesota from 1986-91. He also served as defensive coordinator and secondary coach under Lou Holtz at Minnesota during the 1984-85 seasons and was defensive coordinator at Rutgers from 1994-95. Most recently, Gutekunst was South Carolina's secondary coach for five seasons under Holtz.

HAL HUNTER
Offensive Line
3rd Year at UNC

Hal Hunter enters his third season as Carolina's offensive line coach. Hunter was added to UNC's coaching staff on Jan. 18, 2002, after two seasons as Indiana's offensive coordinator.

Last year, Carolina's offensive line helped lead a resurgent running game as the Tar Heels rushed for over 150 yards per game, their highest average since 1995. Guard Jeb Terry was named second-team All-ACC and Jason Brown emerged as one of the top centers in the conference.

BRAD LAWING
Defensive Line/Recruiting Coordinator
2nd Year at UNC

One of the top recruiters in the country, Brad Lawing enters his second season at Carolina's defensive line coach and recruiting coordinator. Since he was named recruiting coordinator in December 2003, Lawing has helped assemble back-to-back top 20 recruiting classes at UNC.

Last season, Lawing helped develop talented true freshmen Isaiah Thomas and Shelton Bynum into solid contributors at defensive tackle.

ANDRE' POWELL
Tailbacks
4th Year at UNC

Andre' Powell enters his fourth year as the Tar Heels' running backs coach. An enthusiastic coach and recruiter, Powell coaches a position that consisted entirely of freshmen and sophomores when he began in 2001.

Last year, Carolina revived its running attack with a trio of talented tailbacks – Ronnie McGill, Jacque Lewis and Chad Scott – all of whom will return for 2004 campaign. Carolina rushed for over 150 yards per game, its highest mark since the 1995 season. Against Wake Forest, McGill rushed for 244 yards, the ninth-highest single-game total in school history.

MARVIN SANDERS
Co-Defensive Coordinator/Defensive Backs
1st Year at UNC

Marvin Sanders, who helped lead Nebraska to a 10-3 record in 2003, including a victory over Michigan State in the Alamo Bowl, is entering his first season as North Carolina's co-defensive coordinator and defensive backs coach. In 2003, Nebraska ranked first in the nation in pass efficiency defense and led the nation with 32 interceptions.

Sanders will coordinate the defense along with John Gutekunst. Sanders will coach the secondary and coordinate the pass defense, while Gutekunst will coordinate the run defense.

GARY TRANQUILL
Offensive Coordinator/Quarterbacks
4th Year at UNC

A coaching veteran with over 40 years of college and professional coaching experience, Gary Tranquill enters his fourth season as Carolina's offensive coordinator and quarterbacks coach.

Tranquill has a diverse coaching background that includes 11 years of experience as an offensive coordinator at five different schools, three years as a defensive coordinator and five years as a Division I head coach. He has worked with some of the top quarterbacks in the Atlantic Coast Conference, including Carolina record-setting signal caller Darian Durant. Durant has set virtually every career passing and total offense mark during his three years at UNC.

JAMES WEBSTER
Assistant Head Coach/Special Teams Coordinator
4th Year at UNC

James Webster, a former Carolina teammate of Head Coach John Bunting, begins his fourth season as the assistant head coach and second as special teams coordinator. Webster, who is in his 27th season as a college coach, was the first assistant coach added to Bunting's staff. Webster was elevated to special teams coordinator in 2003 after coaching defensive ends the previous two years.

Last year, Carolina's kickoff return team was third in the country and Michael Waddell ranked first in the nation with a 31.7 kickoff return average.
