A PREMIER FACILITY

A host of numerous ACC Tournament, NCAA Tournament and Final Four games over its illustrious history, Fetzer Field has long been one of the nation's most storied soccer facilities. Now, with the relocation of the UNC Soccer offices to the McCaskill Soccer Center adjacent to Fetzer Field, Carolina enjoys perhaps the finest overall facility in all of college soccer.

Fetzer Field, which boasts a capacity of 5,025 fans, is the home to UNC's men's and women's soccer, men's and women's lacrosse and men's and women's outdoor track and field teams. It long has been considered one of the top soccer facilities in all of college athletics and possibly the top facility of its kind in the United States.

The dedication of the McCaskill Soccer Center on April 11, 1999, solidifies Fetzer Field's elite status among soccer facilities. The Center is a two-story structure that houses lockerrooms for the men's and women's soccer teams as well as a team meeting room, coaches' offices and a large conference room. Total costs on the project were $1.8 million.

Located in the heart of the Carolina campus, Fetzer Field was originally completed in 1935 as a Works Projects Administration program. Since 1947, the Tar Heel men have won over 74 percent of their games played there, going 281-91-22 (.741) in 53 seasons.

The facility has been home not only to soccer NCAA and ACC Championships, but also to the 1991 and 1993 ACC Track and Field Championships, the N.C. High School Athletic Association Track and Field Championships, the National Junior Olympics and men's lacrosse NCAA and ACC Tournaments. In 1996, the facility was the home training site for the United States Track and Field Team as it prepared for the Summer Olympic Games in Atlanta.

HISTORY

Fetzer Field, named for former Tar Heel athletic director and track and field head coach Bob Fetzer, was the only home the North Carolina men's soccer program knew from the team's first varsity game in 1947 through the entirety of the 1988 campaign. When Fetzer was being renovated, the Tar Heels played all their 1989 home games at Finley Field near the University golf course as well as the first eight home matches of 1990.

Carolina then returned home to Fetzer on October 21, 1990, and celebrated the homecoming with a stunning 2-0 upset of a No. 10-ranked NC State University Wolfpack team. On November 10, 1990, Carolina played its first night game ever at Fetzer Field, beating Wake Forest 2-1 in the first round of the NCAA

UNC came back from a 2-0 deficit to beat William & Mary, 3-2, in a snowy overtime game in the NCAA Tournament first round at Fetzer Field in 2000.

BEST RECORD EVER AT FETZER IN 2000

In 2000, Carolina went 11-2 for a winning percentage of .846 at Fetzer Field, tying the school record for most wins in a season at Fetzer.

Tournament. Night games are now a regular part of the Carolina men's soccer schedule at Fetzer.

FACILITY UPGRADES

The 1989 campaign was the only year in which Carolina did not play any games at Fetzer Field since the program was founded in 1947. The facility underwent a complete renovation beginning in May of 1989.

The project was completed in October of 1990 and the facility was officially rededicated on April 6, 1991 during a men's lacrosse game between No. 1-ranked Carolina and No. 2-ranked Johns Hopkins. At the same time, the track area of the facility was renamed the Irwin Belk Track.

The renovation project itself included resurfacing and widening of the track which encircles the soccer and lacrosse field, upgrading the grandstand seating with new aluminum bleachers and the building of permanent gatehouses. In addition, the press box at Fetzer Field was enclosed and air conditioned. A new matrix scoreboard was also installed that is a state-of-the-art entity, complete with message board.

On October 21, 1990, the North Carolina men's soccer team officially returned home to a newly renovated Robert Allison Fetzer Field at the University of North Carolina. After nearly two years worth of remodeling and refurbishing at the legendary Fetzer grounds, the Tar Heels were back home once again.

Large crowds were the norm at Fetzer Field in 2000 for the No. 1-ranked Tar Heels.

NEW BUILDING IS STATE-OF-THE-ART

The new, state-of-the-art McCaskill Soccer Center on the University of North Carolina campus was dedicated on the morning of Sunday, April 11, 1999.

"I really think this completes our wonderful facility here," head coach Elmar Bolowich said. "We've had a great stadium, and now we've got a great facility to go along with it. This will benefit the program in the years to come."

The facility has already begun to pay dividends. UNC was ranked No. 1 in the nation for much of the season and went 11-2 at Fetzer Field in 2000 against one of the nation's toughest schedules. Fetzer hosted three NCAA Tournament games in 2000.

The 6,600-square-foot McCaskill Soccer Center, named after Norman and Carol McCaskill, is located adjacent to Fetzer Field on the UNC campus.

"I think this building is a reflection of how much our alumni care about soccer at North Carolina," UNC women's soccer coach Anson Dorrance said. "We have a rabid following, and I think our fans will love this building."

The new facility is a two-story structure, which houses locker rooms for the varsity men's and women's soccer teams as well as a team meeting room on the first floor. The second floor houses offices for both sports as well as a large conference room which can be used by all of the Tar Heels' Olympic sports team.

The building was designed by NBBJ Architects of Research Triangle Park and was constructed by Resolute Building Company of Chapel Hill. Total costs of the project were $1.8 million.

CAROLINA SOCCER CAMP

The Carolina Soccer Camp, held on the UNC campus each summer, combines of an outstanding, qualified staff and excellent facilities to create an environment for serious soccer players to develop their skills, get a solid understanding of the game and have fun. The same training methods that have made the Tar Heels a national power are implemented in the camp.

The camp is divided into three different types of sessions to challenge campers to reach their maximum potential as players.

CAROLINA ATHLETICS — A TOTAL PROGRAM

ACADEMIC EXCELLENCE

At the University of North Carolina, athletes are still first and foremost students. While most universities make that claim, Carolina student-athletes prove it.

The men's soccer team was among the best on the Carolina campus in the classroom last year. The squad posted a team grade point average of 2.96 in the 2000-01 academic year, giving the team its highest GPA in Elmar Bolowich's 12-year head coaching career. Previously, the men's soccer team had the highest GPA of any men's team on campus for two years in a row in 1998-99 and 1999-2000.

Twelve men's soccer players — Jay Batt, Michael Bucy, Matt Crawford, Danny Jackson, Nick Jordan, Ryan Kneipper, Matt Laycock, Ryan Levitan, Logan Pause, Grant Porter, Brad Thomas and Michael Ueltschey — were listed on the ACC Academic Honor Roll for the 2000-01 academic year. In addition, Bucy, Crawford, Kneipper, Laycock, Pause, Thomas and Ueltschey all made the Dean's List.

Performances such as these are direct result of the emphasis placed on academics by the North Carolina athletic department.

Bucy was named to the 1999-2000 and 2000-01 GTE First-Team Academic All-America University Division Men's Fall-Winter At-Large Team selected by the College Sports Information Directors of America after being a third-team choice in 1998-99. The GTE Academic All-America Teams are the most prestigious academic honors a student-athlete can earn on an annual basis.

In the 2000-01 academic year, 235 Carolina student-athletes made the ACC Academic Honor Roll, which requires a cumulative GPA of at least 3.0 for the year. In the fall of 2000, 116 student-athletes made the Dean's List, and 135 did so in the spring of 2000.

"We have an athletic program with our priorities in line with the fundamental academic mission of the University," says Athletic Director Dick Baddour. "Our young people are students first and athletes second and that will always be the case at the University. That is a credit to our coaches, administrators, support staff, but most of all, our student-athletes. Their accomplishments in the classroom are very impressive."

October 1986, North Carolina opened the doors to its new Student-Athlete Development Center, located at the east end of Kenan Stadium, adjacent to Kenan Fieldhouse. This

TAR HEEL MEN'S SOCCER DOMINATES ON THE FIELD AND IN THE CLASSROOM

The men's soccer team posted a team grade point average of 2.96 for the 2000-01 academic year, the best GPA in Elmar Bolowich's tenure as head coach at Carolina.

10,000 square-foot, state-of-the-art academic center boasts an impressive array of facilities for the benefit of all Tar Heel student-athletes in the 28-sport program.

Included in the building, convenient to classrooms and dorms alike, are a full assortment of computers, several study rooms, a language lab with tape players, seven tutorial rooms, a large classroom that can be divided into two smaller ones and a 128-seat auditorium that is used for seminars and lectures. The Center has the latest and most up-to-date computer systems in place.

"Our goal is to assist our student-athletes in making sound academic decisions," says Robert Mercer, the Interim Director of Academic Support Service. "By providing our student athletes with direction and support with their studies and their graduation planning, we are helping them to realize their full potential while they are attending the University and after they have graduated."

The Academic Support Program staff, which serves approximately 725 student-athletes, consists of Interim Director Robert Mercer; Associate Directors Dr. Carl Carey, Susan Maloy and Burgess McSwain; Assistant Director Dr. Kathy Parker; Academic Counselors Marisa Marucci and Heather Murphy; and Office Assistant Doug Roberts. Murphy works directly with the men's soccer team. The Academic Support Center is open from 8 a.m. to midnight during the week and from 7:30 p.m. to midnight on Sundays.

With a commitment to academic excellence soundly in place at the University of North Carolina, the Student-Athlete Development Center becomes a vitally useful tool for helping with the education of student-athletes . . . and for proving that "student" does indeed belong as a prefix to the word "athlete" at Carolina.

FITNESS AND CONDITIONING

The men's soccer team utilizes a 8,000-square-foot fitness center under the direction of Greg Gatz, director of strength and conditioning for men's soccer. Gatz specializes in sport-specific training and speed and strength development. The fitness center is located below the Development Center in a wing of the Kenan Fieldhouse and features state-of-the-art equipment, free weights and Olympic weights.

One of three fitness facilities used by Carolina athletes, the Kenan facility also features a performance lab where specialized aerobic equipment such as stairmasters, treadmills and biocycles is used for conditioning and monitoring rehabilitation progress. The squad also makes use of modern strength, flexibility and conditioning methods in a year-round training cycle. The result of such training is athletes who are properly conditioned for competition.

The men's soccer team was awarded the Team Lifting Award as

MEDICAL CARE

In addition to the academic and fitness programs, the Tar Heels receive excellent care from one of the country's best sports medicine staffs.

Carolina's Director of Sports Medicine, Dr. Tim Taft, oversees a program that includes care by Dr. Bryan Smith, Head Team Physician. Coordinator of Athletic Training Dan Hooker directs a staff of full-time athletic trainers and physical therapists, graduate students and undergraduates.

The medical and athletic training facilities are located in the Student Health Center and Fetzer Gym. Both are near Tar Heel practice areas for easy access to the conscientious treatment and advice on the care and prevention of injuries that is available from the sports medicine staff.

The Athletic Department also recognizes a responsibility in educating student athletes on the physical, mental, emotional and legal issues involved in drug abuse. Accordingly, the department has established a drug education and prevention program which is administered by the University's Student Health Services.

COMMUNITY SERVICE

The Carolina men's soccer team was very active in volunteer work during the 2000-01 academic year. Team members raised money for the UNC Hospitals and became a part of the national Adopt-A-Highway program.

"As a team, we make every effort we can to give back to the community," says head coach Elmar Bolowich. "We want to be known as a team that is active in the community in helping children and those who aren't as fortunate as we are."

As a part of the Carolina Outreach program, a group of Tar Heel players led by senior Michael Bucy organized the second-annual UNC Children's Hospital Dance Marathon to raise over $70,000 for the hospital, the only public hospital for children in the state of North Carolina.

"The Dance Marathon is about pursuing a common, worthwhile goal," Bucy says. "We celebrate not only the money we raise, but also the kids, who will touch our lives, and we leave thankful for being a part of it ... this is our dream."

The Tar Heel team adopted an interstate highway near Chapel Hill and Hillsborough, N.C., in the spring of 2000. At a minimum of four times a year, UNC players and their coaches have pledged to clean a two-mile stretch of road on Interstate 40 between exits 261 and 263.

Carolina Outreach, a part of the Atlantic Coast Conference Outreach program, is an organization of Tar Heel athletes dedicated to improving the lives of the residents of the town of Chapel Hill and the state of North Carolina.
