Once again the men's badminton team had another fine year as they finished fourth out of ten teams in the OUAA in tournament play and ahead of traditional powers Western and Waterloo. This qualified them for the team championships at Western for the second consecutive year. The team was defeated there by eventual champion Toronto. Nonetheless, it was a successful season in the highly competitive OUAA.

The men's badminton team had their finest year in recent memory as they qualified for the OUAA Finals in London. The Gryphons finished the tournament part of the schedule in third place out of ten teams and dropped their semi-final match to the eventual OUAA Champions from the University of Toronto. Peter Blecher performed impressively, losing narrowly to Toronto's top player during the playoffs. The team is very young and should be even better next season.
