2002-03 MEN'S SEASON OUTLOOK

The USC men's swimming and diving team did more with less last year, utilizing a small, but extremely talented core to do most of the damage at the 2002 NCAA Championships.

With only five All-Americans, the Trojans still finished fifth – a hair out of fourth – last year. Only two All-Americans return, but with the development of some key returning veterans and the infusion of some talented newcomers, the 2003 squad has a chance to repeat the success.

Senior co-captains Erik Vendt and Jeff Lee are USC's sole returning All-Americans, but 11th-year Coach Mark Schubert could hardly ask for a stronger pair.

The 2002 NCAA Swimmer of the Year, Vendt returns for his final year at Troy to defend his NCAA 400y IM and 1650y free titles. One of America's greatest long-distance freestylers ever, Vendt holds eight USC records. Vendt, who will also be a key on relays this year, currently has three career NCAA titles and has a chance to become only the sixth Trojan ever to have five or more.

Said Schubert: "You know how good he is, yet he's really improved a lot since NCAAAs last season. He had a terrific summer and has a lot of big goals and expectations. Although he's certainly accomplished a lot since being at USC, there's a lot he can still do individually and team-wise."

Lee was a five-time All-American in 2002 and is the only returning Trojan from last year's NCAA-title-winning 800y free relay. He also finished in the 100y and 200y fly and the 500y free, missing by a split second the title in the 200y fly.

Said Schubert: "I think he's been the most improved swimmer two or three years in a row. He's just really been a fabulous leader and a guy that's done whatever we've needed him to do. I see his role as a relay swimmer being more important this year than ever before."

Junior Trent Staley is a two-time NCAA participant who is looking to make the jump as a point-scorer at the national meet. USC's strongest returning backstroke and a fine middle-distance freestyler, he's also been a great long course swimmer but has worked hard to improve his shortcourse.

Said Schubert: "He's a spectacular long course swimmer. This year, he's gotten a lot stronger and a lot more mature physically, which will help his speed. We'll certainly look to him to be the No. 1 backstroke, but also to continue to improve his 500."

Sophomore breaststroker Paul Fahey competed in three events at the NCAAAs last year in his first year with the Trojans and is also looking to make the jump to an NCAA point-scorer. A fine dual-meet competitor, he's also a versatile swimmer that Schubert can place just about anywhere.

Said Schubert: "He's probably one of our most improved swimmers throughout last year and this last summer. He's a guy who we need to see his speed improve, but I anticipate with another year's maturity that he'll come along."

Junior Mike Gausman is another swimmer with NCAA experience who Schubert is counting on for marked improvement. One of USC's top in the butterfly, he can also swim the medley and freestyle. He suffered a broken leg over the summer, but quickly rounded back into shape.

Said Schubert: "He's working hard in the weightroom. I'd really like to see his 100 fly improve, which would help his 200 fly with the increased speed. His underwater has improved a lot and he's a guy who can swim a lot of different things for us. He's also become one of the emotional leaders of the team."

One of USC's most improved swimmers over the last two years, junior J.D. Abercrombie has reached the finals of the 100m fly at U.S. Nationals the past two years. He's looking for similar success this year and is shooting to qualify for the NCAAAs for the first time.

Said Schubert: "He's really established himself. I was impressed not just with his 100 fly when he made the World University team, but he swam a much improved 200 fly and a 200 IM. I expect to see him helping us a quite a bit."

Senior David Ringe is another strong butterfly who is looking to make his second trip to the NCAAAs. A three-time Pac-10 finalist, Schubert is hoping he can become a point-scorer at the NCAA level.

Said Schubert: "David's really going to be a big part of our sprint relays, 100y fly and 200y fly. He's matured a lot. He's had some tough luck and just missed NCAAAs last year. This year, I think he can come on and score for us and do a good job."

The Trojans top returning diver is redshirt sophomore Ray Vincent. Vincent missed the 2002 season recovering from shoulder surgery, but is healthy again and looking to make the NCAAAs for the first time.

Said Head Diving Coach Hongping Li: "Ray is hungry to win and ready to compete for the team. He is capable of winning dual meets and at the Pac-10 Championships and performing well at the NCAA Championships. The challenge for him this year is to stay injury free during the season."

Seniors Nick Degenstein and Eric Tolmachoff, sophomore Mike Stoller and junior Justin Curtin are all keys to this year's dual-meet success who Schubert and Li hope can break through to bigger success. Tolmachoff has struggled with injuries during his USC career but trained at as high of a level as anyone last year, Schubert said. He has just missed out on being a Pac-10 finalist the last two years in the 500y free. Degenstein is a versatile swimmer who's one of the hardest trainers on the team. Stoller is a sprinter who Schubert hopes can make a big leap this year. Curtin was a point-scorer at dual meets and at the Pac-10s last year and should remain so this year.

Two of the top newcomers to this year's squad have come a long distance to compete at Troy: Mihály Flaskay from Hungary and Ous Mellouli from Tunisia. Flaskay comes to USC as one of world's top breaststrokers while Mellouli joins Troy as a fantastic medley swimmer who can swim many different events.

Said Schubert: "Mihály really burst on the scene as the top young emerging breaststroker in the world. We fully anticipate that he will swim on our relays this year. I think potentially he could be as good as anyone in the world this year. Ous is probably one of the top African swimmers in the world. He's improved dramatically in the last two years."

Freshmen Ryan Donaldson, Tyler Storie and Tyler Panos should also make significant contributions this year. Donaldson was one of the top prepsters in the country last year in the 200 IM and is a versatile talent. Storie comes to USC as a fine long-distance freestyler and Panos was one of the top prep backstrokers in the country last year with a lot of tools to work with.

2002-03 WOMEN'S SEASON OUTLOOK

The USC women's swimming and diving program has been bitten so hard by the injury bug in the past 12 months, it's a wonder Coach Mark Schubert doesn't carry around a can of insect repellent along with his stopwatch.

But in 2002-2003, USC is closing on getting everyone healthy and ready to make a strong push at the Pac-10 and NCAA Championships in March.

In fact, the Trojans were second at the Pac-10s a year ago and only one point out of third place at NAAs in 2002 with a squad that was far from 100% healthy.

That was thanks to some gutsy performances in the pool by the Trojan swimmers and a superb showing by USC's three-woman diving contingent which accounted for more than one third of Troy's points.

Troy returns six of its eight All-Americans from last year and six of 10 individual point-scorers from the NCAA Championships.

Leading the charge is the 2002 NCAA and Pac-10 Diver of the Year Blythe Hartley, who became the first woman ever to win titles in the 1-meter and platform in the same meet. She was also third in the 3-meter.

"After her success as a freshman, undoubtedly, Blythe has become the core of the USC diving team," said fourth-year diving coach Hongping Li, the 2002 NCAA Diving Coach of the Year. "When it comes to contributing points, whether it is in dual meets, the Pac-10 Championships or NCAA Championships, there remains only one major competitor for Blythe — and that is herself."

Hartley set the bar high in terms of success for the Trojans a year ago and figures to do it again, but there is a cavalcade of swimmers who are stepping up to the blocks, ready for the challenge.

Senior co-captain Michala Kwasny will be first in line. A career nine-time All-American and USC's record holder in the 200y and 200m fly, she was a three-time All-American a year ago. She's strong across the board and is the two-time defending Pac-10 champion in the 400y IM.

Said Schubert: "Michala's getting in good shape and will be a key leader for us this year. She's very excited about having a great senior year."

Sophomore Kaitlin Sandeno, who suffered a severe back strain early last season that limited her training to the final four weeks of the year, still was a three-time All-American as a freshman. Now close to 100% and nearing the form that made her one of the world's most versatile and successful swimmers, she can challenge for NCAA titles in any event she swims, specifically the 200y fly and 400y IM and the 500y and 1650y free.

2002 NCAA Women's Diver of the Year Blythe Hartley

Said Schubert: "Things are going very well for her now and I think that's a key. She can do so many different things for us and we can place her in a variety of spots to really help us in dual meets."

Another three-time returning All-American is junior diver Nicci Fusaro. Along with teammate Hartley, Fusaro became one of only two Trojans ever to earn All-American honors in each diving specialty in the same NCAA meet. A career four-time All-American, she also won a pair of Pac-10 titles at last year's meet.

Said Li: "After tasting the NCAA finals in her freshman and sophomore year, Nicci has become a more confident and competitive diver. Nicci's continued improvement has established her as one of the most valuable athletes on our team."

Sophomore Joanna Fargus, who was on the mend over the summer recovering from a foot injury, returns as one of the NCAA's top backstrokers and is also a fine freestyler. With a USC-high four All-American honors under her belt from her first trip to the NAAs, the England-native only figures to improve.

Said Schubert: "Joanna has made an awful lot of good technical changes and improved her underwater swimming. Though she's considered a long course swimmer, I think she'll be a spectacular short course swimmer this year."

Junior Jana Krohn fought through a host of arm and foot injuries that limited her training last year to still make a major impact at the Pac-10s and NAAs, earning All-American honors in the 100y fly. A healthy season from Krohn will give the Trojans another standout butterflyer, one capable of reaching the NCAA finals in both distances.

Said Schubert: "Mentally, no one is tougher on the team than Jana. If we can have a healthy season, she'll be spectacular."

On the other end of the freestyle yardstick is senior co-captain Asa Sandlund, who has been one of USC's top long distance free-stylers since she's been at USC. An All-American as a freshman and a sophomore, she just missed the honor as a junior.

Said Schubert: "Asa is one of the hardest workers on the team. She's always been great at the NAAs in the 1650. The main thing for her is to improve her speed and see if we can improve her results in the 500y free."

Another freestyler who is strong from the 200 to the 1650y is junior Melissa Deary. Recovering from a back injury from the summer, she will be a key component to Troy's free corps if she can come all the way back. She has been an individual point scorer at the NAAs the past two years.

Senior co-captain and nine-time All-American Michala Kwasny

Said Schubert: "Last year she made some great strides in consistency, swimming well at dual meets. She's so good in everything from 100 to 1650, if we can get her to be consistent, she can be great in relays and individually. She has the talent and capability to do it."

Another swimmer looking to make the leap from the Pac-10s to the NCAAs this year is sophomore Marisa Kozak. Kozak was a semifinalist in both back events at the Pac-10 meet last year.

Said Schubert: "Marisa had a terrific summer and is a lot stronger of swimmer than last year. We have a number of good backstrokers but she could challenge to be the best on the team."

Other returning Pac-10 contributors who have a shot at bigger things are senior freestyler

Heather Valerio, sophomore butterfly Melissa Greene, sophomore Erin O'Kane and junior diver Erin McKeon. Greene, in fact, competed at the 2002 NCAAs, but did not score. Valerio, a point-scorer at the Pac-10s last year, works as hard as anyone on the team, according to Schubert. O'Kane, recovering from a shoulder injury, could be strong in 200y fly. McKeon, a Pac-10 scoring diver, looks to repeat the improvements she's made over the last two years.

Among the key newcomers this year are freshmen butterfly Margie Pedder, freshman freestyler Joy Galloway, freshman breaststroker Kammy Miller and freshman diver Lindsay Draper.

Pedder comes to the Trojans from England, where she was one of her nation's top in the fly.

Miller is a strong breaststroker who, with Orr, will help compensate for the loss of All-American Kristin MacGregor. Galloway is a solid freestyler who can also swim the 400 IM and 200 breast.

Said Schubert: "Margie is a great butterfly and just makes us that much deeper in that event. Joy can swim any freestyle event and is also talented in the 400y IM. And Kammy helps fill the void with Kristin gone and really makes our breast corps quite competitive."

One of the top divers in Washington last year, Draper looks to be a contributor at the Pac-10 level.

Said Li: "Lindsay will be a good competitor for the team and will contribute points at dual meets as well as the Pac-10 Championships."

J.D. ABERCROMBIEFLY/IM • 6-0 • JUNIOR*BOISE, ID*ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON HS

THIS SEASON: 2003 junior J.D. Abercrombie, is one of USC's most improved in the butterfly and hopes to become an NCAA point-scorer in addition to his duties at the Pac-10 meet. He will swim for the U.S. at the 2003 World University Games.

2002: Abercrombie competed in three events at the 2002 Pac-10s, scoring points by taking 18th in both the 100y fly (49.90) and the 200y fly (1:50.63) and 28th in the 200y IM (1:54.84) ... His top 200y fly time of the year, a 1:47.73 at the Texas Invitational, was good for NCAA consideration ...
