SEASON HIGHLIGHTS

- UTA finished as co-champions of the Lone Star Invitational to begin the season. It was the Mavericks first team championship since March of 2018 when it claimed Appalachian State's Cape Fear National Intercollegiate. However, that field featured several non-Division-I teams and many low-ranked D-I teams. The Lone Star Invitational – which UTA also won in 2010 – featured four other Sun Belt Conference members and five of the 11 teams entered the year ranked in the Golfstat Top 100.

- The Mavs climbed as high as #45 in the official Golfstat Rankings in the fall.

- UTA posted an 846 total (-18) at the Mark Simpson Colorado Invitational in October – the 6th-lowest 54-hole score in program history. The 18-under score relative to par was the 2nd-best in program history, bested by only a -41 mark at the 2007 Turtle Bay Resort Intercollegiate.

- As part of that same event, Paul Gonzalez posted a 10-under 206 – tied for the 7th-best 54-hole total in program history.

- Gonzalez enters his senior year in 2020-21 poised to finish with the best career scoring average in program history. Through 83 rounds, he holds a 73.06 average score – .04 ahead of the current record holder Zack Fischer (73.10 from 2008-11).

- With the abbreviated year, Gonzalez posted the best single-season scoring average in program history at an even 72.00 over 21 rounds (minimum 15 rounds to qualify). The previous record was held by Bobby Massa in 2008-09 (72.42 over 33 rounds).
- Three players finished in the top-6 of the all-time single-season list for par-3 scoring, led by Kyle Cox setting the record at 2.96 – bettering the previous mark of 3.05 held by Nathan Main in 1996-97. That 2.96 average also ranked as the 11th-best in the nation in 2019-20. Caleb Hicks (3.07) posted the 3rd-best mark in single-season program history, while Gonzalez (3.08) checked in 6th.
- As a team, UTA established the program single-season record for par-3 scoring at 3.11, besting the previous mark of 3.14 in 2017-18. That 3.11 average finished as the 19th-best in the nation in 2019-20. The Mavs also set the par-5 scoring record at 4.78, shattering the score of 4.84 in 2004-05.
- Gonzalez – again only in 21 rounds – established the single-season program record for par-5 scoring, finishing at 4.67 and surpassing the previous mark of 4.69 held by Zack Reeves in 2005-06.
- The 2019-20 team secured the lowest scoring average relative to par in program history at +3.43, besting the previous number of +4.18 in 2008-09. The Mavs' 291.43 scoring average in 21 rounds is the 2nd-best in single-season program history, finishing just behind the 2008-09 squad's record of 291.09.
- Despite playing just 21 rounds, UTA had nine par-or-less rounds – tied for the 5th-most in single-season history (record: 12 in 33 rounds in 2008-09).
