Rogers Stadium

The Virginia State University football team has called Rogers Stadium home since the 1950 season.

Originally called the VSU Athletic Field, the stadium replaced Rogers Field, where the Trojans had played football since the formation of the formal team in 1902. The stadium was christened Rogers Stadium in 1951.

The stadium is named in honor of William A. Rogers, the first coach of the Trojans' football team.

VSU won the opening game in Rogers Stadium when the Trojans downed Bluefield State 25-7 on September 30, 1950. Booker Bradshaw scored the first touchdown in the history of the new stadium.

A record crowd of 32,000 packed Rogers Stadium for the Trojan's match-up against CIAA arch rival Virginia Union University on October 27, 1978.

The structure, which sits at the Fourth Avenue entrance of the VSU campus, has seen several renovations over the years. State of the art lights were installed in the stadium in 2004, and new concession stands and restrooms were built in 2006.

A renovated press box and Presidential Suite opened in 2007, and new coaches' offices, locker rooms and weight rooms opened in 2008. Prior to the start of the 2022 season, Rogers stadium saw yet another renovation with the brand new field turf.

In addition, the entire field is a wireless internet "hot spot," so fans can log on to keep track of the game's statistics. New goalposts were installed for the first game of the 2013 season.

Rogers Stadium, which currently seats 7,909 spectators, is home to the following events: Regular Season Home Football Games, NCAA Division II Post Season Playoff Football Games, VSU Homecoming Pep Rallies, Cross Country Meets, Fraternity & Sorority Probates, 5K Walk, Relay for Life, Battle of the Bands and VSU Spring Football Game.

In recent years, Rogers Stadium and the surrounding lots have played host to the highly anticipated annual VSU Homecoming Tailgating. The 2-day tailgating opportunity draws thousands of alumni, organizations, families and supporters to the stadium to enjoy homecoming and show their Trojan Pride.
