This Is Wake Forest

Wake Forest University offers a unique college experience where students can find it all...

Wake Forest University is among a small, elite group of American colleges and universities recognized for their outstanding academic quality. In this group, some schools offer intimate classes taught by full-time faculty -- not graduate assistants; an on-campus undergraduate enrollment of 4,000 or less; need-blind admissions; big-time athletic programs; and supportive alumni networks. Some schools offer joint research projects between undergraduate students and faculty, nationally-ranked graduate programs and worldwide study-abroad programs. Only Wake Forest brings together all of these qualities to offer a liberal arts education that is greater than the sum of its parts.

Steeped in a rich history and tradition, Wake Forest is a private university with two campuses in Winston-Salem. The Reynolda Campus is home to the undergraduate College, the Calloway School of Business and Accountancy, the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences, the School of Law, the Babcock Graduate School of Management and the Divinity School. The Bowman Gray Campus is home to the Wake Forest University School of Medicine.

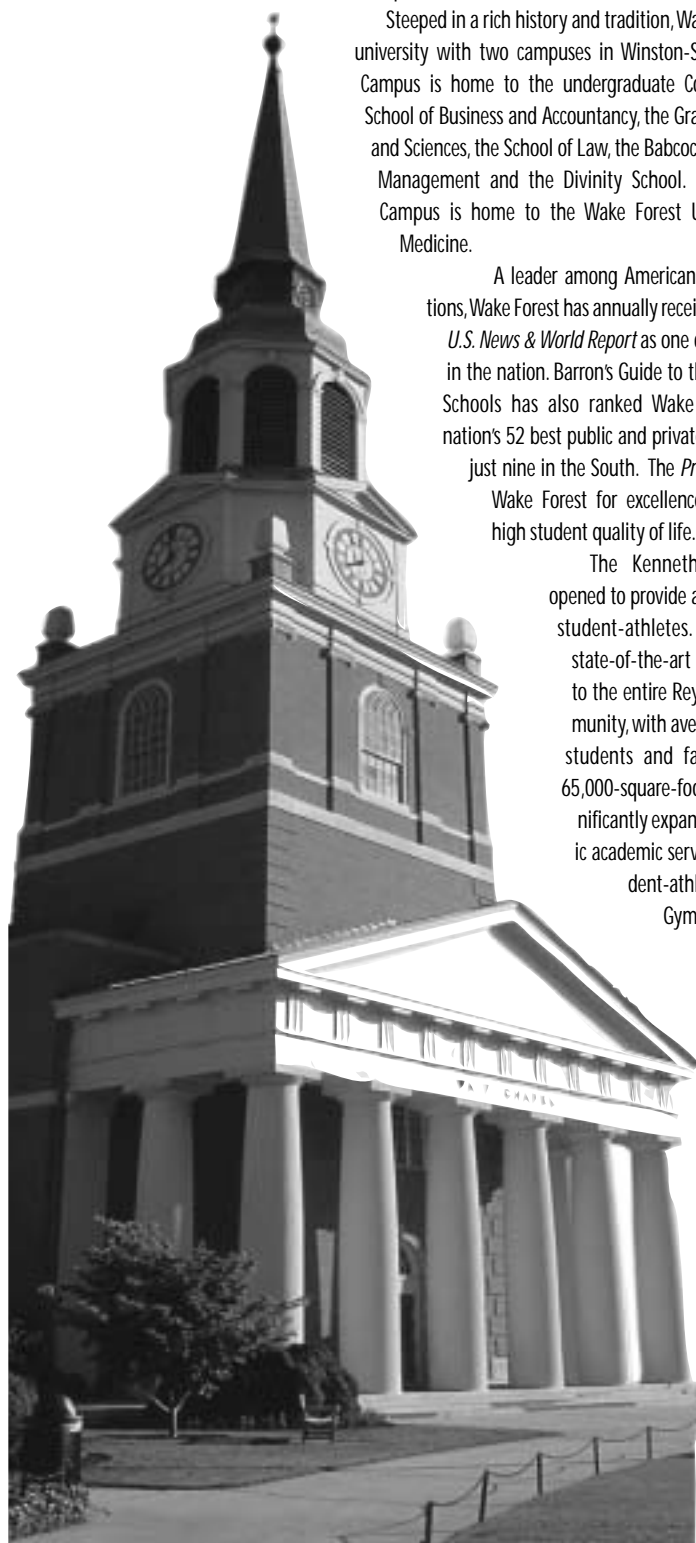

A leader among American educational institutions, Wake Forest has annually received recognition from U.S. News & World Report as one of the top 30 schools in the nation. Barron's Guide to the Most Competitive Schools has also ranked Wake Forest among the nation's 52 best public and private universities, one of just nine in the South. The Princeton Review lauds Wake Forest for excellence in academics and high student quality of life.

The Kenneth D. Miller Center opened to provide academic services for student-athletes. It also features a state-of-the-art fitness center open to the entire Reynolda Campus community, with average use by over 500 students and faculty per day. The 65,000-square-foot Miller Center significantly expanded space for athletic academic services and for the student-athlete community outreach program, CHAMPS/Life Skills. The Dave Budd Gymnasium, within the Miller Center, is a fabulous practice facility for the men's and women's basketball teams.

Reynolda House, Museum of American Art, became an affiliate of Wake Forest University. Reynolda House was originally built as the early 20th century home of R. J. Reynolds, founder of R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., and his wife, Katharine Smith Reynolds. It is now home to a collection of American art dating from the mid-18th century that includes works by many of the nation's most distinguished artists, such as Albert Bierstadt, Mary Cassatt, Frederic E. Church, John Singleton Copley, Stuart Davis, Georgia O'Keeffe, Jacob Lawrence, Gilbert Stuart and Grant Wood. The collection has been described by preeminent art scholar John Wilmerding, of Princeton University, as the finest concentration of American art in a public collection south of Washington (D.C.).

The Calloway School of Business and Accountancy began construction on a project to add 50,000 square feet to Calloway Hall. The three-story project opened in the fall of 2003 and is named after the F.M. Kirby Foundation, which donated $5 million for the addition. It includes classroom and office space, and breakout space for group meetings, as well as an entrepreneurial incubator -- a special center designed for entrepreneurial business study. The expansion will allow the Calloway School, Wake Forest's largest undergraduate program, to exist in its own space for the first time.

In the 2002-03 year, Wake Forest established a center for vocational exploration for undergraduate students. The University received a $1.9 million grant from the Lilly Endowment of Indianapolis to support the opening of the Pro Humanitate Center, named for the University's motto, which means for the good of humanity. The Pro Humanitate Center offers a variety of programs encouraging students to explore the nature of vocation as they consider possible careers. Seminars and workshops stress the importance of values, spirituality and traditions in professional life.

Students find outstanding academic programs, sophisticated computing and networking technology, intimate class settings, a strong sense of community and active social life. Only at Wake Forest can they find it all.

What The Experts Say...

U.S. News & World Report

Wake Forest was ranked 28th in U.S. News & World Report's guide to colleges. The publication groups schools into categories, and ranks them by evaluating average test scores, acceptance rates, number of faculty with Ph.D.s, student/faculty ratio, academic reputation, graduation rates, and other factors.

Barron's: Most Competitive Colleges

The current edition places Wake Forest among only 52 colleges and universities in the nation, and one of just nine in the South, on their "most competitive" list. This guide lists university key facts along with passages written by Wake Forest graduates. One writes, "I remember one evening my Italian teacher invited our class over for dinner. . . . In my mind, the remarkable thing about Wake Forest is that these kinds of occasions are quite common. Part of what it means to be a Wake student is to have the opportunity to have frequent contact with your professors"

The Princeton Review

This guide, titled, "The Princeton Review: The Best 331 Colleges," lauds Wake Forest for excellence in academics and high student quality of life. The guide ranks Wake Forest students among the highest in the nation for the number of hours spent studying outside of class. It also ranks Wake Forest as having one of the highest participation rates in campus intramural sports.

Haddock Golf Center

The Jesse I. Haddock Golf Center, dedicated on the Wake Forest campus in October of 1988, faces a 325-yard driving range, five target greens and a putting green with practice bunkers. The Haddock Center itself, which serves as the headquarters for the Deacon men's golf program, features three enclosed hitting bays for play in inclement weather, the Lanny Wadkins Players' Lounge and a video studio as well as offices for the Wake Forest golf staff.

For the coach who built the Wake Forest program from scratch to one of the finest in America, having the center named after him was a once-in-a-lifetime honor.

"The center is very meaningful to me," says Haddock, who has 11 former players on the PGA Tour. "I am very proud of our complex because it symbolizes what we have accomplished in collegiate golf, and it represents the fine young men who have played at Wake Forest.

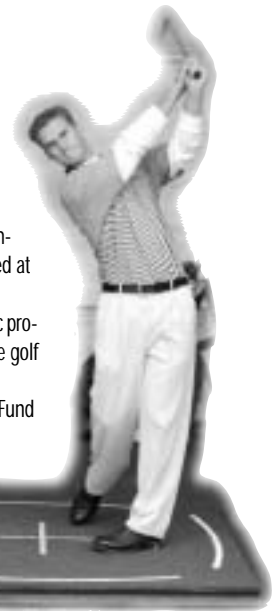

"I think this complex also gives a message that Wake Forest University will always continue to strive for excellence in its athletic program, and in collegiate golf. Our program, its past and its future, rests with our alumni, who continually sell our program to the golf world every day. I hope they take as much pride in this facility as I do, because they are responsible for its development."

Those golf alumni, who annually show their loyalty to the program through the Wake Forest Pro-Am, the Golf Endowment Fund and other ventures, added significantly to the fund-raising drive that made this facility possible. The three hitting bays are named for three alumni who spearheaded that fund-raising effort – Jim Simons, Jay Haas and Curtis Strange. As noted above, the players' lounge is named in honor of Lanny Wadkins.

"The first call I got on my new phone after moving to the Center was from Curtis," Haddock recalls. "He was playing in Europe and couldn't be here for the dedication, but he told me that I'd be receiving an envelope soon that I'd really like. No other program in the country in any sport can claim the loyalty from the alumni that we are blessed with at Wake Forest.

"We know that Wake Forest University sells itself in recruiting," says the Golf Coach Emeritus. "We also have a tradition in golf at Wake Forest that is so well-known. Future players will continue to benefit from our complex. These young men will be able to use the luxuries that our hard-working alumni have so generously made possible."

Academic Excellence

Wake Forest athletes prove you can be a success in the classroom as well as on the playing fields...

The Wake Forest University athletics program has long been recognized not only for its athletic achievements, but also for the outstanding academic achievements of the program's student-athletes.

Such impressive achievements do not come easily or without tremendous support from the athletic department, where a staff of highly committed people in the area of academic counseling play a significant role in the academic progress and ultimate reward, a degree.

The director of Wake Forest's Academic Counseling program is Dwight Lewis, who joined the University in the fall of 2000. He replaced Doug Bland who, after serving as the director of the program for 12 years, is now an Associate Athletic Director for Administration.

Along with his staff, Lewis administers academic assistance, advice and counseling to the more than 300 student-athletes.

In addition to the academic responsibilities Lewis and his staff undertake, they take on the administration and development of the CHAMPS program, helping Wake Forest student-athletes fulfill not only the University's rigorous academic commitments, but also commitments to personal development and service to the community.

"At Wake Forest, students have the opportunity to receive a rich educational experience that will provide them with a foundation for future success, and we're excited to help them develop and grow," Lewis said.

Their headquarters is in the new 50,000 square foot Miller Center for Student-Athlete Enhancement. The facility includes computer labs, private study carrels, work areas for individual and small group tutorial sessions, and large conference rooms.

The facility enables all Demon Deacons to give their best effort in the classroom just as they do on the field.

"As we move forward, we will continue to provide our student-athletes with the support and encouragement they need," Lewis said.

The Miller Center for Student-Athlete Enhancement

The most recent addition to the Demon Deacon athletic complex is the Miller Center for Student-Athlete Enhancement, a 50,000 square foot facility which was completed in the fall of 2001. Crowning the east end of Kentner Stadium, the facility houses a new 15,000 square foot Academic Services and Student-Athlete Development Hall. A practice gym and locker rooms for Wake's basketball teams are included in the building.

"I believe that the Miller Center is a move in the right direction for Wake Forest," Lewis said. "It provides our student-athletes with one of the finest academic facilities in the nation.

"Our staff wants to make sure that Wake Forest student-athletes have a comfortable place where they can get the assistance they need to continue their academic success. The Miller Center reinforces our commitment to providing facilities that all student-athletes need in order to be their best in the classroom as well as on the playing field."

WFU's Nationally-Ranked Academic Programs

- The Calloway School of Business is ranked among the top 10 percent of undergraduate business programs in the United States.
- Students in the accounting program, which ranks among the top 20 programs in the nation, have scored the highest passing rate in the country on the CPA exam for two consecutive years. The Calloway School is ranked 28th in U.S. News and World Report.

- The medical school was in the top 50 by U.S. News and World Report.
- The Wall Street Journal ranked Wake Forest's graduate business school No. 11 overall, the highest ranked school in the Southeast.

Athletic Excellence

Wake Forest's athletics programs have experienced unprecedented levels of success in recent years...

Wake Forest University, a small private school rich with academic tradition, has also grown rich in athletic success. Few schools nationwide can match Wake Forest's combination of classroom and playing field achievements.

Athletically, WFU has high expectations. Not only does it simply compete in one of the nation's top athletic conferences, it expects to win championships.

"We are proud of our academic tradition and the fact that a Wake Forest education ranks among the most prestigious in America," athletic director Ron Wellman said. "We want to be recognized for producing high-caliber graduates who with their degree from Wake Forest will be fully prepared to take leadership roles in society, whatever their chosen profession.

"At the same time," Wellman continued, "we hold those same high standards in athletics. We expect to contend for - and win - championships in every sport in which we field a team. Our university stands for excellence in academics. We fully embrace that ideal and seek to perform with the same excellence with all of our varsity teams and programs."

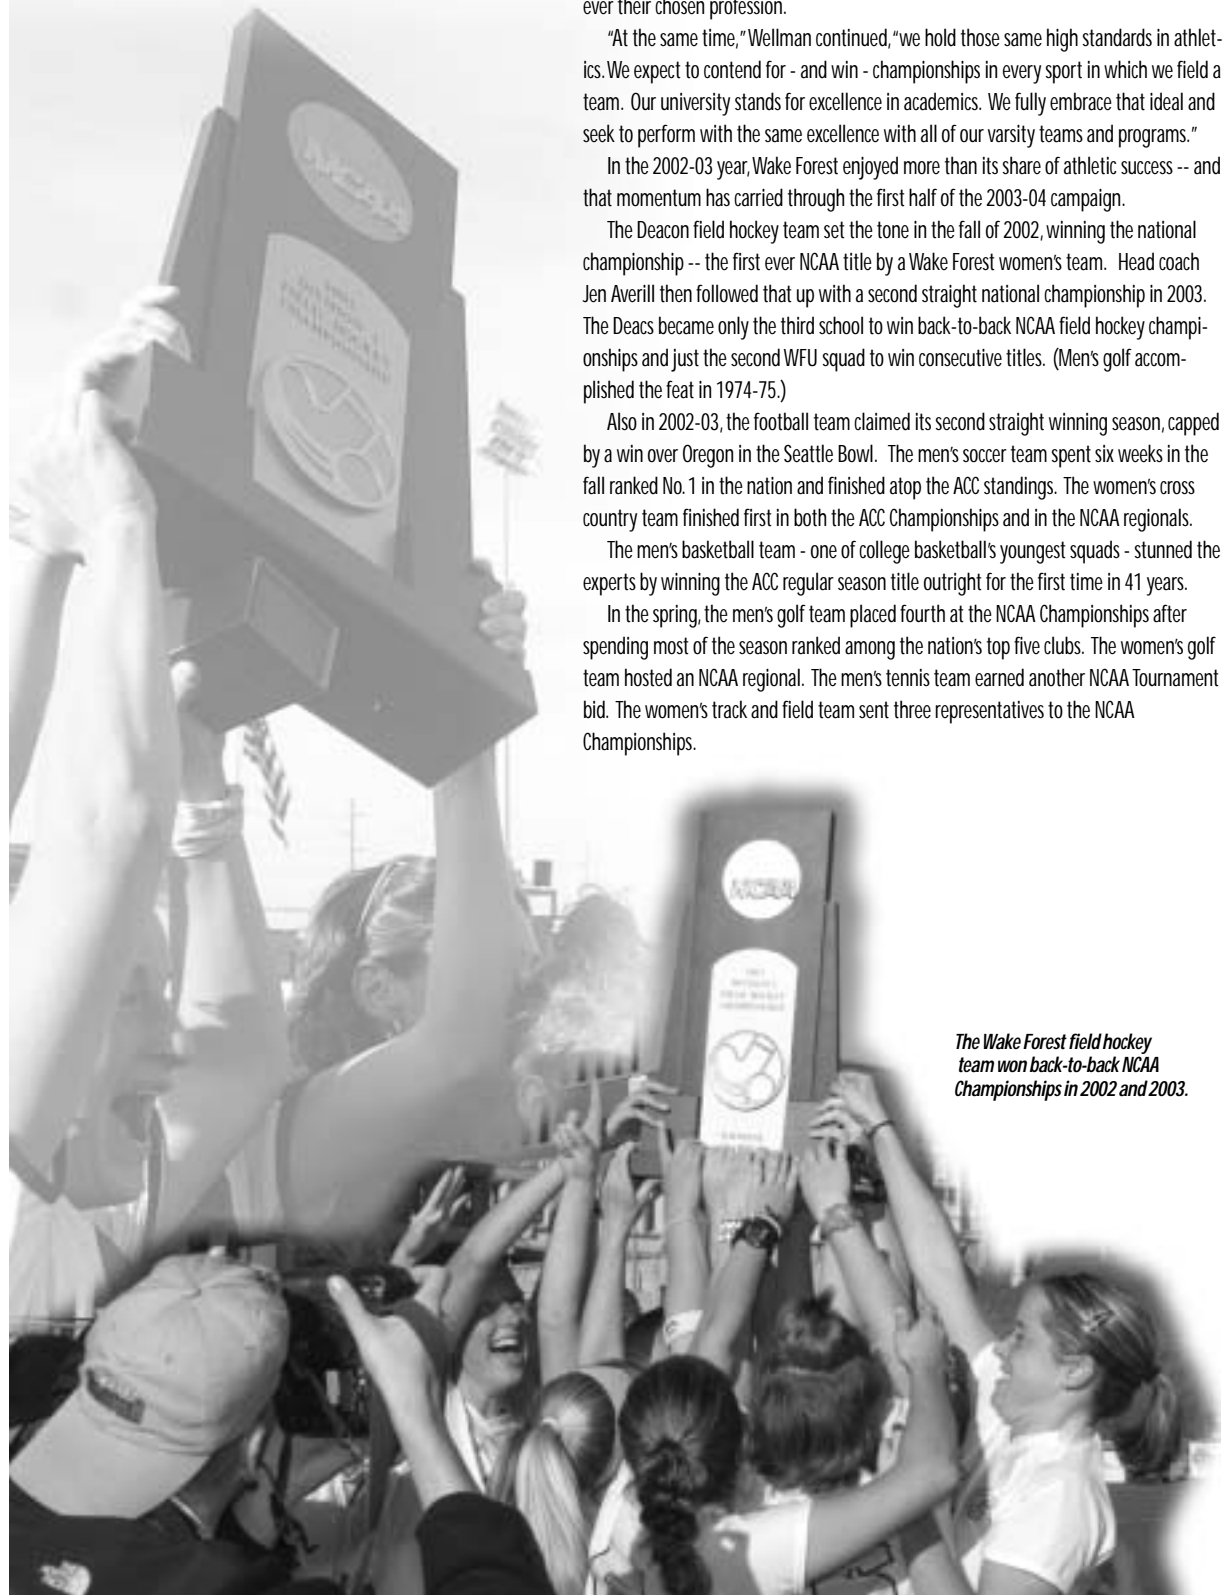

In the 2002-03 year, Wake Forest enjoyed more than its share of athletic success -- and that momentum has carried through the first half of the 2003-04 campaign.

The Deacon field hockey team set the tone in the fall of 2002, winning the national championship -- the first ever NCAA title by a Wake Forest women's team. Head coach Jen Averill then followed that up with a second straight national championship in 2003. The Deacs became only the third school to win back-to-back NCAA field hockey championships and just the second WFU squad to win consecutive titles. (Men's golf accomplished the feat in 1974-75.)

Also in 2002-03, the football team claimed its second straight winning season, capped by a win over Oregon in the Seattle Bowl. The men's soccer team spent six weeks in the fall ranked No. 1 in the nation and finished atop the ACC standings. The women's cross country team finished first in both the ACC Championships and in the NCAA regionals.

The men's basketball team - one of college basketball's youngest squads - stunned the experts by winning the ACC regular season title outright for the first time in 41 years.

In the spring, the men's golf team placed fourth at the NCAA Championships after spending most of the season ranked among the nation's top five clubs. The women's golf team hosted an NCAA regional. The men's tennis team earned another NCAA Tournament bid. The women's track and field team sent three representatives to the NCAA Championships.

Athletic Excellence

The 2002-03 season was a banner year for Deacon sports, and that momentum has carried over into this season...

The Demon Deacon golf team won four tournaments in 2002-03 and placed fourth at the NCAA Championships -- its best finish in six years.

In all, four different Wake Forest coaches were named ACC Coach of the Year - Jennifer Averill (field hockey), Jay Vidovich (men's soccer), Annie Bennett (women's cross country) and Skip Prosser (men's basketball). Those four teams either won the ACC regular season or postseason titles.

Deacon individual athletes also collected numerous awards and honors. Josh Howard was the first unanimous selection for ACC Player of the Year since 1975 and he was named first team All-America. In field hockey, Kelly Doton and Heather Auginbaugh were All-Americans and Doton was the ACC Player of the Year. In the spring, Deacon athletes were named ACC Player of the Year in three sports - Bill Haas (men's golf), Nuria Clau (women's golf) and Jamie D'Antona (baseball). Wake Forest also claimed two ACC Rookie of the Year honors - Justin Moose (men's soccer) and Christy Williams (volleyball).

Football standout Calvin Pace earned All-America honors and was taken in the first round of the NFL Draft by the Arizona Cardinals. Deacon pitcher Kyle Sleeth was the No. 3 overall selection in the Major League Baseball Draft by the Detroit Tigers. Howard was selected in the first round of the NBA draft by the Dallas Mavericks.

Wake Forest finished the 2002-03 campaign ranked 32nd in the NACDA Director's Cup Standings -- its best ever. The Deacs appear to be on track for another strong showing this year, as WFU currently sits in 10th place at the conclusion of the 2003 fall sports season.

Wake Forest's 2002-03 ACC Players of the Year -- Josh Howard (basketball), Nuria Clau (golf), Jamie D'Antona (baseball), Bill Haas (golf) and Kelly Doton (field hockey), who won the award in both 2002 and '03.

The Golf Endowment Fund

The proud Wake Forest golf tradition continues through the generosity of its benefactors...

Wake Forest is proud to claim one of the nation's strongest collegiate golf traditions. To ensure the continuation of this tradition, the Wake Forest Golf Endowment Fund has been established to provide income for scholarships, facility maintenance, and general operating support.

The purpose of this fund is to fully endow the men's golf program and maintain the high level of quality for which this program has become known.

It was a dream of Golf Coach Emeritus Jesse Haddock that the program be fully endowed and self-sustaining. Already participating in the endowment program are PGA Tour professionals, golf alumni, and friends of the university. There are various ways to fund this program, and those who have responded have made outright gifts of cash, stock gifts and life insurance beneficiary gifts.

Even with the rising cost of education, Wake Forest is determined to reach the goal to be financially self-sufficient. Once attained, this goal will again set Wake Forest apart as the unique, quality program we have all come to expect. To fully endow the golf program would be a rarity among colleges and universities across the country and would allow Wake Forest to continue to attract outstanding student-athletes interested in the golf program.

The Wake Forest men's golf program appreciates the support and generosity of those who will participate in the future and make the objective of being fully endowed a reality.

In 1950, a Wake Forest golfer named Buddy Worsham was killed in an automobile accident. The loss of his best friend inspired

Worsham

Arnold Palmer, whom Worsham encouraged to enroll at Wake Forest with him, to establish the Buddy Worsham Scholarship Fund. Palmer began the fund in the early '60s in memory of his admired and respected friend. That original investment of $500 has grown to over $200,000 and is administered by the university.

In the fall of 1994, a scholarship in the name of Arnold Palmer was established by Walter Annenberg and the Annenberg Foundation. The Arnold Palmer Scholarship Fund creates yet another opportunity for Wake Forest golf.

The Andrew G. Milne Scholarship was established in 1986 in memory of Andrew Milne, the son of former WFU golfer Dennis Milne. Friends of the family, who originated the fund, hold a golf outing each year in Pennsylvania to raise money for the endowment. The scholarship is awarded yearly to a men's or women's golfer, who may be but does not necessarily have to be from Pennsylvania.

The John R. Knott Scholarship is named for the former member of the Board of Trustees who had a great interest in golf, especially the Deacon program.

The Lanny Wadkins Scholarship is named for the current successful and popular professional who competed for Wake Forest from 1969-1971 and was a two-time All-American. The men's golf scholarship was endowed by an initial gift by Wadkins in 1978.

The Donald and Elizabeth Cooke Foundation Scholarship

was established in 1995 with a gift by the Foundation's board of directors. The scholarship is awarded to a member of the men's or women's golf team in honor of the Cookes' love for the game of golf.

In 1996, the Joseph M. Bryan, Sr. Scholarship was established to assist the Wake Forest golf programs. An avid golf fan and successful businessman, Bryan left a $500,000 bequest to Wake Forest to help support both the men's and women's teams.

Bryan was a top executive for 30 years with what is now the Jefferson-Pilot Corporation. He loved golf, attended the Masters annually and became involved in the Greater Greensboro Chrysler Classic. The Bryan Scholarship is awarded to a rising junior on each team and is based on the player's contributions to the team and academic achievement.

In 1997, the Ernie Douglass Memorial Golf Fund was established by the family and friends of Douglass, who passed away in 1993. The fund is used to support a men's or women's golf scholarship or towards golf operating expenses. A prominent businessman in Raleigh, N.C., Douglass' daughter, Katherine Hesmer, attended Wake Forest in the 1980s and was an avid golfer.

The Steve Walker Golf Endowment

was established as part of a life insurance policy on Walker, who died tragically in 1996. The endowment is used to support either a scholarship or general operating expenses. A 1972 graduate of WFU, Walker played golf for the Deacs and roomed with teammate Lanny Wadkins. Walker lived in nearby Burlington, N.C., where he worked as a club golf pro. Both his wife, Becky, and his son, Will, attended Wake Forest.

Walker

Also in 1997, Richard Phelps established the Bob Goalby Golf

Goalby

Fund in honor of the golfing great to support the WFU men's golf program. Though neither attended Wake Forest, both Phelps and Goalby are parents of WFU alumni and loyal supporters of the university. Goalby, who is also the uncle of current Deacon head coach Jerry Haas, was a longtime member of the PGA Tour and the 1968 Masters champion.

In recent years, Wake Forest alumni and highly successful professional golfers Len Mattiace and Jay Sigel, both winners on the PGA Tour and Champions Tour respectively, have established endowment funds for the program.

Martha Brame established the William J. Brame Athletic Scholarship Fund in the fall of 2002 to honor the memory of her husband who passed away in 2000. Bill was a great friend and fan of Wake Forest athletics. He attended most athletic events and was frequently on campus during the week to "raise spirits"; he always had a kind word for everyone whose path he crossed. He also enjoyed playing golf and was good friends with Haddock. The William J. Brame Athletic Scholarship Fund will provide financial assistance for both the men's and women's golf programs.

The ACC

Considered one of the top conferences in collegiate golf, the ACC has a long and successful history...

The Tradition

Consistency. It's the mark of true excellence in any endeavor.

However, in today's intercollegiate athletics, competition has become so balanced and so competitive that it is virtually impossible to maintain a high level of consistency.

Yet the Atlantic Coast Conference has defied the odds. Having celebrated its 50th year of competition a year ago, the ACC has long enjoyed the reputation as one of the strongest and most competitive intercollegiate conferences in the nation. And that is not mere conjecture, the numbers support it.

Since the league's inception in 1953, ACC schools have captured 90 national championships, including 46 in women's competition and 44 in men's. In addition, NCAA individual titles have gone to ACC student-athletes 114 times in men's competition and 52 times in women's action.

2002-03 In Review

The 2002-03 academic year concluded with the league pocketing three more national team titles and nine individual NCAA crowns. In all, the ACC has won 45 national team titles over the last 13 years.

The ACC's 2002-03 national champions were Wake Forest in field hockey, Virginia in men's lacrosse and Clemson in men's golf. Overall, 95 ACC teams took part in post-season play compiling a 84-64 (.568) record.

A total of 167 student-athletes from the ACC earned first, second or third-team All-America honors this past year. In addition, the ACC produced three national Players of the Year, one national Rookie of the Year and four national Coach of the Year recipients.

The ACC placed at least one team in the top 10 nationally in 16 of the 21 sports sponsored by the league for which polls were available. In all, 28 ACC teams finished their season with a top 10 ranking.

The Championships

The conference will conduct championship competition in 25 sports during the 2003-2004 academic year

- 12 for men and 13 for women.

The first ACC championship was held in swimming on February 25, 1954. The conference did not conduct championships in cross country, wrestling or tennis during the first year.

The 12 sports for men include football, cross country, soccer, basketball, swimming, indoor and outdoor track, wrestling, baseball, tennis, golf and lacrosse. Fencing, which was started in 1971, was discontinued in 1981.

Women's sports were initiated in 1977 with the first championship meet being held in tennis at Wake Forest University.

Championships for women are currently conducted in cross country, volleyball, field hockey, soccer, basketball, swimming, indoor and outdoor track, tennis, golf, lacrosse, softball and rowing.

The History

The Atlantic Coast Conference was founded on May 8, 1953, at the Sedgefield Inn near Greensboro, N.C., with seven charter members - Clemson, Duke, Maryland, North Carolina, North Carolina State, South Carolina and Wake Forest - drawing up the conference

Twelve former Demon Deacon golfing greats (listed below) represented Wake Forest on the Atlantic Coast Conference 50th Anniversary Men's Golf Team, as announced during the league's anniversary celebration in 2002-03.

Wake Forest and Clemson led all conference schools with 12 members each on the Golden Anniversary team.

Additionally, Arnold Palmer and Curtis Strange were also named two of the ACC's 50 Greatest Male Athletes.

by-laws.

The withdrawal of seven schools from the Southern Conference came early on the morning of May 8, 1953, during the Southern Conference's annual spring meeting. On June 14, 1953, the seven members met in Raleigh, N.C., where a set of bylaws was adopted and the name became officially the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Suggestions from fans for the name of the new conference appeared in the region's newspapers prior to the meeting in Raleigh. Some of the names suggested were: Dixie, Mid South, Mid Atlantic, East Coast, Seaboard, Colonial, Tobacco, Blue-Gray, Piedmont, Southern Seven and the Shoreline.

Duke's Eddie Cameron recommended that the name of the conference be the Atlantic Coast Conference, and the motion was passed unanimously. The meeting concluded with each member institution assessed $200.00 to pay for conference expenses.

On December 4, 1953, conference officials met again at Sedgefield and officially admitted the University of Virginia as the league's eighth member. The first, and only, withdrawal of a school from the ACC came on June 30, 1971, when the University of South Carolina tendered its resignation.

The ACC operated with seven members until April 3, 1978, when the Georgia Institute of Technology was admitted. The Atlanta school had withdrawn from the Southeastern Conference in January of 1964.

The ACC expanded to nine members on July 1, 1991, with the addition of Florida State University. The league will increase its membership to 12 over the next two years with the addition of Miami, Virginia Tech and Boston College.

The ACC: A National Golf Powerhouse

- The ACC has captured four national titles in men's golf (Wake Forest in 1974, '75, '86 and Clemson in 2003) and has placed three teams among the top 10 at the NCAA Championships in each of the last four seasons.
- An ACC team has finished first or second in the NCAA Championships in six of the last seven years, including a second-place finish by Wake Forest in 1997.
- Over the last 10 seasons, eight of nine ACC schools have posted at least one top 20 finish in the NCAA Championships.
- Eight golfers from ACC schools have earned the title of NCAA individual champion, including three from Wake Forest (Curtis Strange in 1974, Jay Haas in 1975 and Gary Hallberg in 1989).
- Six ACC teams -- including Wake Forest at No. 3 -- were ranked among the nation's top 25 in the final 2002-03 Golfweek/Sagarin rankings. Three league teams (including No.1 Clemson and No. 10 North Carolina) were in the top 10.

Jerry Haas Golf Camp

A memorable and valuable summer learning experience on the campus of Wake Forest University...

Summer Residential Golf Camp - for boys and girls, ages 11-18

Jerry Haas is a 1985 Wake Forest graduate and the current head coach of the Demon Deacon men's golf team, leading WFU to top 10 finishes in the NCAA Championship in two of the last three seasons. A three-time All-American as well as a three-time All-ACC selection at Wake Forest, Haas was also a member of the 1985 Walker Cup team and was the Illinois Amateur champion from 1982-84. Haas spent nine years playing professionally on the European, PGA, and Nike Tours, earning three Nike Tour victories in 1994. He has also worked as a teaching professional at Illinois Yorktown Golf Club and as a course reporter for The Golf Channel.

Participants in the Jerry Haas Summer Golf Camp receive personal instruction every day from the short game to the long game as well as playing lessons at Tanglewood Park.

Facilities

The majority of each session's activities will be held at the Haddock Golf Center on the Wake Forest campus, a state-of-the-art practice complex, while play will take place on the golf courses on Tanglewood Park's golf courses.

The Haddock Center is one of the nation's premier golf instruction facilities, featuring a 326-yard driving range, five target greens, a putting green with practice bunkers, three covered hitting bays and a video studio. The Center, built with the traditional Georgian architecture that is synonymous with the Wake Forest campus, is named for legendary Wake Forest coach Jesse Haddock who coached NCAA Championship teams in 1974, 1975 and 1986.

Tennis courts, basketball courts and other playing fields are available to participants. Golfers will live in the modern, air-conditioned Arnold Palmer Dormitory at Wake Forest and will be served meals in the campus dining hall.

Camp Features

- Personal instruction from Coach Haas and his professional teaching staff, including head coaches from other universities
- World-class facilities at the Haddock Golf Center and Tanglewood Park
- Guest appearances from former Wake Forest All-Americans and current PGA Tour professionals
- Daily critiques, followed by a full critique and progress report at the end of the session
- Evening strategy lectures on different facets of golf, given by Coach Haas and other coaches
- Videotaping of each golfer, which not only allows a check of each golfer's progress but serves as an excellent teaching aid.
- A tournament on the final day of the session, offering golfers a chance to apply their skills in a tournament atmosphere.
- College admissions information session
