“The Shed Boys”

The Shed Boys is a phrase that refers to the members of the first recruiting class to come to Webber International University to participate in football. These individuals were members of the club football season and the Inaugural football season and remained at Webber through the 2006 football season to become Webber International University graduates.

Webber’s club football season was in 2002, in which the football team participated in 4 games. During this season, the football team traveled on two school buses every day to McLaughlin Middle School to practice. The team’s locker room at that time was comprised of two tool sheds in which the team utilized every day before and after practice. The inaugural football season was the first full football season in Webber’s history. In this first season, Webber played a tough schedule including division 1 opponents Gardner Webb, Presbyterian, Southeastern Louisiana, and Jacksonville University.

The Shed Boys played an instrumental part in laying the foundation of Webber International University’s Football program.
