A 15-Cent Education

By Rob Fournier, esq.,
Director of Athletics

Back when I was a very young, there was a survey that reported the most trusted person in America was Walter Cronkite. For those reading this article who are under 50, Walter Cronkite was the long-time evening news anchor for CBS. He delivered the national evening news for thirty (30) minutes each night (actually somewhat less than that when you factor in the commercials).

Quite a contrast from where we are today. I read the other day (20 September 2020), that only nine (9%) of Americans had “great trust” in the media. Quite a drop. But why do you think that has happened? I don’t think it was because Mr. Cronkite had some kind of special charm or an aura of trustworthiness about him. What you did get was the news – no opinion. Not until he had retired did he disclose his political inclinations. What the editors of the broadcast, and Cronkite himself knew (he wrote most of his own copy), Americans put an emphasis on truth – nothing new there right? Once you had the factual information, the part that makes us a democracy kicked in – you had to figure it out and what it all meant. I guess today some people don’t think we are smart enough to figure it out. Worse yet – maybe today some don’t want you to.

Interestingly looking back, somehow America was able to figure that out – of course that earlier USA resume reflected that this country had already done pretty well figuring out things in the past. Saving democracy in World War II, and halting the spread of totalitarianism and communism, is pretty good “documentation” of that understanding of the world. Surprisingly, according to the US Census in 1970, only ten percent (10%) of the population had a college degree. Basically, ninety percent (90%) of people in America had not completed college ... and I knew one such man who had not even entered high school.

All of that made me reflect on that period and a youthful memory of that time. My Dad used to get up pretty early in the morning (he had to be at work by 5:30 AM) so, needless to say, I often did not see him leave each morning. But on Saturdays, that schedule was somewhat different, and I would catch him in our kitchen. Back then we had two daily newspapers – one printed in the morning and one in the afternoon. There was no cable news – as a matter of fact our black and white television got only two stations (for some reason ABC did not come in). But we had newspapers.

Anyway, on Saturdays we had a morning routine where I would go and get the paper. I always remember him reaching into his pocket full of change and he would hand me 15 cents (well there might have been an extra quarter or dime in there too) to pay for the paper which was all of a nickel and a dime.

I would then run down to the newspaper stand carrying the 15 cents in my hand for some reason fearful that if I put it in my pocket, I would lose it. Clenched fist, I would get to the newspaper stand which was simply a metal frame box with both sides open. No levers to pull, no coin slot to drop money into, no enclosure. You could just reach in and take one out. The money went into a little coin container which you could just as easily put coins in as you could take them out. It was an honor system – the publisher trusted the customer to take one paper and in return pay 15 cents. I can vividly remember always making exaggerated motions showing I was dropping coins in and taking out a single newspaper. No one was watching ... but somehow, I was fearful that I might be accused of some nefarious act that involved a 15-cent newspaper. High crimes. Paper in tow, back I ran the four/five blocks. It was a little more challenging in the snow, but I always "pretended" I was running with a football in an open field. And for some reason ... I never got tackled.

"If people do not trust you ... you should ask yourself that difficult question ... Why?"

Mission accomplished; I would get the sports section ... that did not seem as interesting to my Dad. Over time, he encouraged me to read the opinion section of the paper. That was a little more challenging than a box score. Twitter with only 280 characters would not have worked to tell those argumentative positions – but you also got to read the entire opinion regardless of who might like (or dislike) it. And I read a lot of opinion articles – William Safire, David Brooks, Carl Rowan, Andy Rooney and some that had a more humorous commentary – Art Buchwald and Erma Bombeck (who I still remember once wrote in an article that there are three numbers a woman never forgets – her social security number, the number of hours she spent in "labor" and her hair dye color). Funny the stuff you remember.

But they were all opinions – it said it across the top of that newspaper section in case you had wandered in there by mistake, and not by coincidence, it was also clearly separated from the other sections of the newspaper. Actually, it came last in the newspaper – must be something about opinions.

Relationships are built on trust ... and the best ones have that as their foundation – be it as a spouse, an employee or a friend. And once that deteriorates, there is not much left. I thought about that old newspaper stand. And contemplated for a moment, could such a transactional exchange exist today? There were thirteen houses on that street where I grew up and I knew the names of everyone in each house. None of the men on the street wore a tie to work, some had families, while others lived alone and some practiced different faiths and beliefs. Each could get that same newspaper – just reach in and take one. No one watched if you paid. But that honor system must have worked, because for years it operated the same way – in that hard-working, non-college educated, neighborhood. Trust.

If people do not trust you ... you should ask yourself that difficult question ... Why? Walter Cronkite used to end each of his broadcasts with a tag line. "and that's the way it is ... " Well, if it is not the way it should be, or how you would want it to be, you might start with building some trust back. I guess I would say – trust me on that one ... even if it is my opinion.

We want to remind you of what is acceptable when dealing with our current and prospective student athletes. First, it is important to determine if you must follow the rules surrounding a representative of athletics interest.

You are considered a "Representative of Athletics Interest" or "booster" if you:

- Are or have been a member of any organization promoting Wayne State University Athletics.
- Have ever made a donation to the Athletic Department or any booster organization.
- Have ever assisted in evaluating or recruiting prospects.
- Have ever helped to arrange or have provided employment to enrolled student-athletes, prospects, to their parents or relatives.
- Participated in a Wayne State athletics program.
- Once you become a representative or athletics interests, you retain this status FOREVER.

Please keep in mind, it is possible to jeopardize a student-athlete's eligibility with just one act of kindness! Please ask before you act.

In the end, the Game was Only a Small Part of It

By Rob Fournier, esq., Director of Athletics

Back then, they did not offer a class in diversity. There was not a webinar to explain the value of integration and the advantages of a common community. And “implementation” did not require a legal mandate as was the case with the Little Rock Nine or Brown v Topeka Board of Education. By comparison, what unfolded in the athletic department at Wayne State was as uneventful as the rising of the sun ... but just as significant. Now, over one hundred years later, that early epiphany for Wayne State athletics has made it unique in the history of intercollegiate athletics. What was that distinction?

You see when they first started an athletics program at then the Detroit Junior College (precursor to Wayne State University) the athletic teams were integrated. Athletics at WSU respected individual rights long before anyone called it civil rights. And they did it together. That’s the way it should be. The very first athletic teams (football, basketball and track) had both African Americans and whites as teammates. To give it perspective, that was 1918. Women had not yet been granted the right to vote and yet Wayne State athletic teams had young men of different color as teammates ... working together, competing together and, along the way, learning about each other - together. It has not changed. That is the legacy of the athletic program. That is our teaching classroom. You won’t find that distinction in the history of many college programs. And along the way that inclusiveness has changed many lives ... and opened the eyes of others.

Detroit has long played a role in changing the landscape of America – from work opportunities, to fair wages, to racial upheaval, to the Arsenal of Democracy. And it was no more evident than in basketball at Wayne State. It is a program steeped in history that defied societal injustices in an open setting with young men not just navigating a basketball court but the roadblocks of prejudice.

Back in the 1955-1956 season, the Tartars were selected to play in the NCAA basketball tournament. Today’s “Big Dance”. To underscore just how impressive those Tartar teams were, they beat DePaul in the opening game of the tournament to advance to the “Sweet Sixteen” against the University of Kentucky. It might be argued that the integrated Wayne State basketball team back then representing “the freeways of Detroit” may have been a foreshadowing for the movie “Glory Road” that told the story of the all black University of Texas at El Paso team that won the NCAA national championship in 1966. Interestingly, that integrated Wayne State team suited up against another all-white team from that same Lexington, Kentucky, institution some 10 years earlier. Those teammates from that 1956 team had some vivid recollections of that game played in Iowa City, Iowa, including some questionable calls against WSU star George Brown forcing a game-altering substitution for the key player. But even more unforgettable, if not unremarkable, was the halftime exhortations of the opposing head coach who injected a few racial slurs into his comments to his team as they trailed WSU at the break. The Tartars in the nearby locker room separated by very thin wallboard were stunned by the goading – so much so that their reunion some 50 years later they still recalled the incident. A different time.

As much as that success seemed to predict what was to come, the next season when Wayne State again qualified for the NCAA Tournament, they declined the “invitation”. To this date, Wayne State remains the only team ever to be invited to what is now the Division I NCAA postseason basketball tournament to “decline” that opportunity. That success was not isolated. In the 1952 season, they were ranked in the Associated Press Top Twenty in the country – the standard long before ESPN and NCAA Selection Committees. They had built ... and were building upon, a powerhouse and in that “house” were faces of different colors.

Unfortunately it all changed abruptly. It was reported, then President Hilberry thought such diversions would take away from the students’ studies. Not sure if the student athlete current overall grade point average of 3.43, or the fact that every team has a cumulative grade point average of not less than 3.17, would have changed his mind. His predecessor David Henry also had the program withdraw from the newly formed Mid-American Conference it had joined as a charter member claiming it did not emphasize academics. In a strange coincidence, as Wayne State partners with the Detroit Pistons to build their first ever basketball arena, the University on the other side of campus is building the Hilberly Theatre.

Although some might question the marriage of athletics and academics, there is no denying the simple lessons of social justice that are woven into the fabric of intercollegiate athletics – a foundational truth not as universally apparent so quickly elsewhere. The ideal of America has its perfect reflection in the imagery of athletics that includes the transformational likes of: Jesse Owens, Joe Louis and Jackie Robinson. Likewise, those early Tartar teams embraced those same beliefs long before others opened their eyes, opened their minds ... and unfortunately in many cases, even a little more slowly, their hearts.

One of those early head coaches/teachers was Joel Mason who guided the Tartar Basketball teams from 1948 – 1966. He had been a football coach and played professional football for the Green Bay Packers, albeit as the secondary wide receiver opposite NFL Hall of Famer Don Hutson. The talent that Mason blended was so dominant that four Wayne State basketball student-athletes went on to play for the Harlem Globetrotters when opportunities for blacks in professional basketball were at least tacitly restricted under the “two-fer” understanding – no more than two blacks per roster. To best illustrate that point, one of those like college students who was impacted by that unwritten edict was a young man named Wilt Chamberlain who gave up his senior year at the University of Kansas to play with the Harlem Globetrotters while awaiting a chance in the 1959 NBA draft. You could certainly make an argument, that Tartars: Charlie Primas, George Brown, Johnny Kline and Ernie Wagner, all of whom played for the Globetrotters, and with whom two played with Chamberlain, might have been the greatest basketball student-athletes to ever play at Wayne State.

But it was more than a basketball game. Here is how the story weaves together like a basketball net that realizes success when the ball passes through it. Mason’s objective was more than young men moving through a basketball program. It wasn’t just the ball through the net ... but what those young men became after they left the court. And that has not changed under Coach Greer or Coach Lohr. Mason was acutely aware of 20th century America and was preparing young men for bigger lessons than jump shots and rebounding. Unfortunately, too many even today overlook and dismiss those simple lessons played out daily in intercollegiate athletics.

Mason was not oblivious to the segregation his team confronted. He just chose not to accept it. If they could not find lodging at the local hotel, they bunked at the YMCA or a fraternity house. If they were refused service at restaurants, they went somewhere else. Years later when those teammates reunited, those simple lessons were not lost upon them ... and it helped guide them through their own individual confrontations with racism, and importantly, it was a learning tool for every member of the team. Impressionable young people who played the game of basketball at Wayne State left with a year-long seminar in life – and it carried to others. They did not apologize for skin color that they could not change. But they could change how others viewed that color. Mason’s unyielding approach did not mean compromise. If the team could not dine or sleep together, then there would be no exceptions even if that meant traveling further or questionable food options.

The late Charlie Primas recalled for me some of those experiences’ years later. Building blocks that were learning tools in his personal journey. “We were from Detroit. Heck many of us had not even traveled outside the City. It was different ... but together we felt safe and we knew our coach was with us. Funny, I realized later, that not everything I witnessed was intended for us ... some of it was for a larger audience.” He reflected upon that lesson when he recalled winning the Indiana State Holiday Tournament in December of 1951 in some difficult circumstances. As Charlie pondered on that moment so many years later, he had already come to realize the moral from that moment was not meant entirely for him, or his teammates, but instead the larger on-looking crowd who were not wearing Wayne State jerseys. Mason was teaching without a classroom, without notes, but with an agenda. He was teaching all of us. We need more of those lessons.

“Find out just what any people will quietly submit to and you have the exact measure of the injustice and wrong which will be imposed upon them.” - Frederick Douglass

How do sports look going forward?

HOW HAS COVID IMPACTED YOUR RECRUITING?

Baseball Coach Ryan Kelley – The NCAA COVID Dead Period eliminated an abundance of in-person opportunities to evaluate prospective baseball student-athletes and teams across the traditional baseball seasons of spring and summer. Plus, limitations to host face-to-face campus visits was impactful for our coaching staff, the prospective student-athletes and their families. This is another viable recruiting aspect where relationships are built and extended beyond phone calls, evaluations, and applicable messaging. Once the NCAA DII Dead Period was lifted this fall our baseball coaching staff did have the opportunity, while weather and fall scheduling allowed, to evaluate competition off campus safely utilizing social distance and mask guidelines.

Volleyball Coach Tim Koth – It has slowed our progress on the next cycle. The revolving COVID rulings by the NCAA has also slowed this process with how it has created uncertainty with rosters going forward (i.e. the extra years of eligibility, etc.).

Swimming/Diving Coach Sean Peters – With recent recruiting, swimming and diving has had a lot of success. I feel that I can attribute a great deal of this success from our initial efforts with this incoming class from the summer of 2019 when we had many of these athletes for a visit. It has helped that many of them have visited already, and had a great experience. Combined with our current freshmen class, I think we have 10 athletes that are Warriors through that initial summer visitation. As four out of the ten are class of 2021, we still have three more swimmers that did not visit Wayne State and are still committed or signed. There are still more out there that we are working on, but instead of bringing them to us, we have had to bring us to them. We have used Zoom meetings with myself, or team members that study programs that they are interested in, and we have had success with that strategy. However, with the class of 2022 and beyond, I am hoping to go back to more visitations during the summer, as I feel that this can really open their eyes to Wayne State, and experience what we have to offer.

Football Coach Paul Winters – It has drastically changed how we are able to evaluate prospective student-athletes. We didn't have camps to evaluate this summer. We didn't have on campus work-outs. We haven't had the opportunity to visit any high schools. We are using highlight videos to evaluate most of our class.

Women's Basketball Coach Carrie Lohr – COVID-19 has negatively impacted recruiting for women's basketball. One of the best "sellers" of recruiting is an in-person campus visit. Unfortunately, we have not had a recruit on campus since February 2020. In the interim, we have increased our communication with recruits, including phone calls, text messages, and zoom meetings. In addition, we have utilized the WSU virtual tours available via our Admissions.

HOW DO YOU EVALUATE TALENT IN THIS COVID ERA?

Cross Country/Track & Field Coach Grant Lofdahl – Especially on the track and field side, we've had to rely more on film than ever before, not having been able to watch any of these recruits compete in their junior track seasons. We also have had to place a lot of faith in sophomore T&F times, as well as placing a lot of faith in cross country times (which can be shaky since some courses are not a full 5000 meters) for the class of 2021. Fortunately on the cross country side, we were able to attend meets this fall for many of our top recruits, and actually watch them race in person in order to better evaluate them. Lastly, we've probably placed even more importance than usual on academics and high character during the current recruiting cycle.

Volleyball Coach Tim Koth – Most of the opportunities are now done through video and virtual viewings. Many of the larger club programs have been offering "virtual showcases", where you can watch live streams of practices or live play. Specifically, I was able to go to a High School match prior to the "pause" - but those opportunities are limited due to spectator limitations.

Swimming/Diving Coach Sean Peters – Admittedly, swimming is a great sport for evaluation during this time period. There are so many resources online that I can use, from time databases on websites to watching videos on YouTube. It is knowing where to look and what to look for that is key.

Softball Coach Gary Bryce – Some tournaments had the ability to live stream games which has given us the opportunity to log on and view future prospects. Unfortunately, this type of evaluation has its limitations including quality of the live stream, ability to assess game speed and evaluate on and off the field leadership qualities.

We have continued to keep open lines of communication with summer softball programs and coaches through email, phone calls and zoom.

Lights Added At Gary Bryce Field

The Wayne State University softball stadium/Gary L Bryce Field received a significant upgrade this summer as lights were installed.

"I think the addition of lights adds a new dimension to an already storied history of softball," stated WSU Director of Athletics Rob Fournier. "If you look around the country at different facilities, this has to be included as one of the best. From the attached indoor batting cages, locker room, coaches' offices, scoreboard and grandstands, and press box – as a recruit or a fan you could not get a more accommodating environment. The additional mound setting adds a nice complement to the setting ... as does looking out and seeing a new arena going up."

"I believe the lights tremendously enhance the softball complex and give us an opportunity to play some night games which will hopefully bring out a larger crowd," remarked head coach Gary Bryce.

Musco Sports Lighting provided the six (6) pole design to illuminate Gary Bryce Field. The design includes four (4) 60' poles and two (2) 70' poles surrounding the playing field.

The Musco Sports Lighting system provides Gary Bryce Field with maintained foot candle levels of 100+ in the infield and 70+ in the outfield, in line with NCAA Best Lighting Practices for both Standard Intercollegiate Softball play, as well as Regional and National Intercollegiate Softball Play.

The Musco Sports Lighting System includes the Control-Link® Systems and Services for advanced scheduling and reporting, as well as remote on/off and dimming (high/medium/low) capabilities. An added entertainment package provides six pre-programmed theatrical shows controlled from an on-site touchscreen interface located in the press box. The lights were paid entirely by private donations and fundraising.

Intramural Field Renovations Completed

The Wayne State University Department of Athletics, which oversees the Mort Harris Recreation and Fitness Center, is proud to announce the completion of renovations to the Trumbull field located behind the WSU Football Stadium (Tom Adams Field).

"We are so excited to open up a dedicated recreational space to all of our club sport athletes, intramural sports participants, and our fitness program clients," said Rob Latva, an Associate Athletic Director, who oversees the Mort Harris Recreation and Fitness Center. "This space allows us to expand our outdoor offerings throughout the fall and spring. We can't wait to begin using the field to its fullest potential as soon as we can."

Once group activities are allowed on campus, the new fields will serve as the home field for both the men's and women's club soccer teams, training ground for all club sports organizations as well as the site for outdoor group fitness classes and personal training sessions.

In addition, the new fields allow for intramural flag football, soccer, futsal, and ultimate frisbee on the lined intramural fields.

The turf itself can host a variety of other intramurals such as kickball, dodgeball, yard games, and sport skill competitions.

The total area is just over 128,000 square feet of Shaw Sports Momentum turf brand.

Shaw Sports Turf's Momentum fiber system uses slit film technology. Its interlaced structure holds down infill and reduces fly-out while maintaining a sturdy and reliable playing surface. In fact, slit film technology was the fiber basis for infilled systems from the beginning and is still chosen for its durability and performance characteristics.

Shaw Sports Turf, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Berkshire Hathaway Inc., is a full flooring provider to the residential and commercial markets. Shaw Sports Turf is one of the leading synthetic turf companies in North America.

Two WSU Student-Athletes Receive NCAA Degree Completion Awards

Two Wayne State University student-athletes have been chosen to receive an NCAA Division II Degree Completion Award. Softball outfielder Rachelle Clayton (Guelph, Ont.) and former swimmer Elizabeth Maraskine (Midland, Mich. / Dow) are two of the 2020-21 Degree Completion Award recipients.

Clayton was a three-time GLIAC All-Academic Excellence Team selection, along with being a three-time NFCA (National Fastpitch Coaches Association) Scholar Athlete. A Nursing major, Clayton was named to the Athletic Director's Honor Roll (term GPA 3.5+) all eight semesters, including three terms with a 4.0 GPA.

Maraskine was a three-time GLIAC All-Academic Excellence Team selection as well as a three-time D2 ADA Academic Achievement Award recipient. A Nursing major, Maraskine was named to the Athletic Director's Honor Roll (term GPA 3.5+) all eight semesters, including six terms with a 4.0 GPA.

The NCAA established the Division II Degree Completion Award Program in 2001 to provide deserving student-athletes financial assistance for them to complete their first baccalaureate degree.

To date, nearly $6 million has been given to approximately 1,400 deserving student-athletes. Of those student-athletes who have received the award since its inception, 90 percent have earned their undergraduate degree using this program.

Former Baseball Student-Athlete Harms Receives NCAA Postgraduate Scholarship

Former Wayne State University baseball standout Griffin Harms is a Spring 2019-20 recipient of the NCAA Postgraduate Scholarship.

The NCAA Postgraduate Scholarship was created in 1964 to promote and encourage graduate education by rewarding the Association's most accomplished student-athletes through their participation in NCAA championship and/or emerging sports. Athletics and academic achievements, campus involvement, community service, volunteer activities and demonstrated leadership are evaluated. An equitable approach is employed in reviewing an applicant's nomination form to provide all student-athlete nominees an opportunity to receive the graduate award, regardless of sport, division, gender or race. In maintaining the highest broad-based standards in the selection process, the program aims to reward those individuals whose dedication and effort are reflective of those characteristics necessary to succeed and thrive through graduate study.

Potter Named NFF Campbell Trophy Semifinalist

Wayne State University senior offensive lineman Lane Potter (Hudsonville, Mich.) has been named a national semifinalist for the William V. Campbell Trophy by the National Football Foundation & College Hall of Fame.

Potter has started all 33 games in his collegiate career (11 at RT in 2017; 11 at RG in 2018, 11 at LG in 2019). He was voted to the All-GLIAC Second Team in 2019 as well as being named to the GLIAC All-Academic Excellence Team for the second consecutive year. A year ago, Potter helped WSU rank second in the GLIAC in rushing yards per game (207.9), rushing TD (22), fewest sacks allowed per game (1.18) and time of possession (32:40). He was voted WSU's Offensive Rookie of the Year in 2017, after starting all 11 games at right tackle as a true freshman. A Global Supply Chain Management major, Potter has been named to the Athletic Director's Honor Roll (term GPA 3.5+) all six semesters at WSU. He has been a member of the WSU Student-Athlete Leadership Council. The two-time CoSIDA Academic All-District nominee, Potter has also been a recipient of the D2 ADA Academic Achievement Award each of the last two years.

Potter is one of three GLIAC players being recognized along with Ashland's Logan Bolin and Grand Valley State's Tyler Bradfield.

Lend A Hand Thank You

There was never any doubt in my mind. After twenty years, I have seen Tartar/Warrior student athletes, and those who support them, always meet whatever challenges they confront. And this was a demanding challenge. Faced with budget reductions, and the consequential impact on sport programs and their future, the response to the "Lend A Hand" campaign was generous, heartfelt, and, in the end, much appreciated.

College athletics around the country is changing and that financial impact has been significant. Cognizant of the COVID-19 economic impact, it was probably remarkable to others that so many of you found a way to also support our student athletes and the department. Thank you ... your contribution will significantly impact our student-athletes, coaches and sport programming. You have made a difference – again!

The original concept behind the "Lend a Hand" campaign was a simple handshake – to reach out to those who believe in us, to those who support us, to those who have been with us, to ask for that hand in a like return gesture. That handshake was meaningful ... and it has made a difference. I always prefer a handshake over a "like" or a "share". It is more personal. That's what you have been to the department ... that special person with whom we share a handshake ... and some good memories.

ACADEMIC ACHIEVEMENT AWARD RECIPIENTS

Wayne State 22nd Nationally in D2 ADA Academic Achievement Recipients

The Division 2 Athletics Directors Association (D2 ADA) announced that a school-record 127 Wayne State University student-athletes have earned Academic Achievement Awards for their work in the classroom. In addition, the 127 award winners was the most in the GLIAC. Ashland was second with 119, and was followed by Grand Valley State (98), Michigan Tech (93), Ferris State (67), Purdue Northwest (56) and Wisconsin-Parkside (56). WSU finished 22nd nationally out of 318 NCAA Division II institutions.

The Academic Achievement Awards, in its 13th year, is a program that recognizes the academic accomplishments of student-athletes at the Division II level.

In total, there were 15,214 student-athletes from 200 institutions recognized for the 2019-20 Academic Achievement Awards. These numbers shattered the records for highest number of participating institutions and the largest number of student-athletes being nominated since the award program's inception. For the second-straight year, the Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference (PSAC) has the largest number of student-athlete honorees with 1,365 total, closely followed by the Great Lakes Valley Conference (GLVC) with 1,333 and the Northern Sun Intercollegiate Conference (NSIC) with 1,220.

"In a year when we can use all of the good news, the D2 ADA Officers and Board of Directors are proud to recognize the highest number of student-athletes with the Academic Achievement Award than ever before," said D2 ADA President JR Smith, director of athletics at Chadron State College. "The nominations also came from a record number of institutions, showcasing the passion and dedication of our Association and Division II as a whole."

Independently, the PSAC's Gannon University led the way with 219 honorees, followed closely by Stonehill College of the Northeast-10 Conference (NE10) with 208 award winners. Lindenwood University out of the Great Lakes Valley Conference finished third with 188 recipients and another PSAC representative Seton Hill University came in fourth overall with 180. Rounding out the top-five was the GLVC's University of Indianapolis with 175 nominees.

Willett, who is majoring in Secondary Education, has been named to the Athletic Director's Honor Roll (term GPA 3.5+) all six semesters, including five consecutive 4.00 terms. A six-time GLIAC All-Academic Excellence Team selection, she is a two-time recipient of the D2 ADA Academic Achievement Award. Willett was a member of the fourth-place Distance Medley Relay at the 2020 GLIAC Indoor Track and Field Championships.

MIKE ILITCH SCHOOL OF BUSINESS

Alexis Miller (Howell, Mich.) was a sophomore on the women's basketball team last year (2019-20). A Finance major, Miller was a GLIAC All-Academic Excellence Team selection in 2020. She has earned a spot on the Athletic Director's Honor Roll (term GPA 3.5+) all four semesters at WSU, with a 4.00 term GPA every semester. A 2019-20 recipient of the D2 ADA Academic Achievement Award, she was also a CoSIDA Academic All-District nominee this past season. Miller has played in 59 career games in two years, totaling 199 points, 102 rebounds and 92 assists.

COLLEGE OF FINE, PERFORMING, AND COMMUNICATION ARTS

Brooklyn Miller (South Lyon, Mich.) was a junior foilist on the women's fencing squad. A Design and Merchandising major, Miller has been named to the Athletic Director's Honor Roll (term GPA 3.5+) all six semesters, including three 4.00 terms. She was a GLIAC All-Academic Excellence Team selection this past year and is a two-time recipient of the D2 ADA Academic Achievement Award. Miller won 43 bouts this year, including 10 at the Midwest Fencing Conference Championships.

COLLEGE OF ENGINEERING

Pierre Renaudie (Sathonay-Camp, France) was a senior captain on the men's tennis team. Renaudie, who received his bachelor's degree in Industrial Engineering major, was named to the Athletic Director's Honor Roll (term GPA 3.5+) all four semesters with a perfect 4.00 GPA. A GLIAC All-Academic Excellence Team honoree, as well as an ITA All-Academic Scholar-Athlete, he won 71 of his combined 97 singles and doubles matches during his two-year Warrior career, which included a 34-14 singles mark along with a doubles record of 37-12.

COLLEGE OF NURSING

Elizabeth Maraskine (Midland, Mich. / Dow) was a senior on the women's swimming and diving squad. Maraskine, who is a Nursing major, has been named to the Athletic Director's Honor Roll (term GPA 3.5+) all eight semesters, including six 4.00 terms. She was named to the GLIAC All-Academic Excellence Team for three consecutive years (2018-19-20) and was a three-time recipient of the D2 ADA Academic Achievement Award (2018-19-20). Maraskine received the NCAA Division II Degree Completion Award.

EUGENE APPLEBAUM COLLEGE OF PHARMACY AND HEALTH SCIENCES

Tradition
By Greg Bradbeck

Own a piece of Wayne State Football History!

Support Warrior Football

Reserve your opportunity to own a piece of Wayne State Football history. The piece, entitled "Tradition" looks back at the some of the historic moments of Wayne State football. From the first night game at Tom Adams Field, to Nationally awarded trophies (Harlon Hill and Gene Upshaw) and record-setting players. Each copy of "Tradition", available as a limited-edition lithograph piece with a run limit of 500, will be numbered and personally signed by Wayne State Head Football Coach Paul Winters.

100% of the proceeds will benefit the Wayne State Football Endowment, providing essential and generational funding for the Wayne State Football program. Own your copy of "Tradition" for your gift of $250.

For more information on how to own your copy of "Tradition", please contact Justin Munson at justin.munson@wayne.edu.
