

General questions

1. What problems can you identify in this story? Are solutions presented?
2. In what way might this story be relevant in your community?

Further exploration

1. Colombia's government provides security protection to the "safe zones," but Father Alberto Geraldo says there are no real guarantees because corruption allows criminal and paramilitary groups to still operate. Are there any alternatives to relying on the government for security?
2. Why do you think the La Playita humanitarian space has been successful?
3. Could this approach be replicated in other conflict zones? Why or why not?