

General questions

1. What problems can you identify in this story? Are solutions presented?
2. In what way might this story be relevant in your community?

Further exploration

1. There are laws against child labor in India, but they're poorly enforced. Many of the rescue efforts are led by NGOs. Who bears responsibility for enforcing child labor laws?
2. What economic factors contribute to child labor?
3. Satyarthi says he has "a strong belief that once a person is sensitized towards child slavery ... you cannot limit that social concern and social motivation." What other issues exist that you think people need to be "sensitized" to? How so?