

General questions

1. What problems can you identify in this story? Are solutions presented?
2. In what way might this story be relevant in your community?

Further exploration

1. Most of the world's hungry people are actually farmers. Why do you think people whose profession is to grow food can't get enough for themselves?
2. Even though One Acre Fund is a nonprofit, it works with farmers as business partners. How is that different than the way most aid groups operate?
3. The One Acre Fund method leverages thousands of struggling farmers and offers them training, resources and market access. Are there any other sectors this method could be applied to?